SATURDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1929

Sunday was Rally Day in the Sunday school of Christ M. P. Church. A joint service was held at 10.30 a. m. and an interesting program presented under the direction of Mrs. Lawrence G. Brown, chairman. The offering, amounting to over $95, was for education. The banner was won by the Bible Class, taught by Dr. Sexsmith, and was presented in an appropriate speech by Prof. Harry Poole. Ivan Culver presided with Miss Patience Patience Pyle as secretary. At the Christian Endeavor service at 6.45 p. m. An interesting meeting was held in charge of Dr. Dole.

SAVINGS MADE EASY

"I never knew what it meant to save money until I decided that I should like to own a home of my own. Then, in some way, just as soon as I had this definite idea in mind, I found that it was not only not hard to save a regular part of my income but I got a big kick out of it."

The writer recently received a letter from which the above is an excerpt and it is here made public in the hope that it will serve as a good suggestion to others. It is an incident of common human experience. No man can read the future and it is not unwise to save money even though we have no definite object in view. Sooner or later the amount of money accumulated in our bank account will serve a useful purpose in our lives. It may help us over a tight place or it may prove to be the foundation of a future fortune. No one should ever be without a certain amount of resources even though the immediate need for them is not apparent.

But it is a fact that with some saving is extremely difficult unless there is a definite object in view. It may be to buy a home, embark in business, secure an education, own an automobile, take a trip abroad, or invest in good securities. Or it may be any one of a thousand other worthy objects. The point is that if you are one of those who cannot save without something definite to save for, then you should find such a definite objection.

Many really think they cannot save. The writer has heard many say "Money goes through my hands like water through a sieve." This is an admission of unnecessary and unjustified weakness and the best possible way to overcome it is to establish an objective.

Get into the habit of saving. That is the main thing for the longer you save the easier it will become.

Save for a definite purpose. Choose some object that you very greatly desire; then save persistently and systematically until you acquire it. That is an excellent way to begin the practices of thrift.

ANOTHER NEW CHURCH

Mayor Forrest, the Rev. J. L. Ward, pastor of the church, and the Rev. W. H. Litsinger, of Baltimore, superintendent of church extension of the Maryland Annual Conference of the denomination, were the speakers at the ground-breaking for a Sunday School auditorium for First M. P. Church, Thirty-sixth and Washington streets, Wilmington, Del. The building will be the first of a group of gray stone Gothic fixtures that will comprise the church.

The service attending the ground-breaking was impressive. Mayor Forrest took part as guest of honor Senator Daniel O. Hastings was prevented from attending by other business.

More than one hundred and fifty communicants of the church with friends of the congregation from that city and Baltimore, attended. Representatives of various other Protestant denominations of the community were among the congregation.

EASTON DIOCESE STATISTICS

The Journal of the Sixty-First Convention of the Diocese of Easton has been issued. It is a complete record of the financial standing of the diocese.

There are 2,246 families represented in the Diocese, 4282 confirmed persons and 6,700 church members. There were 139 baptisms during the year and 99 confirmations, 87 marriages. There are 3,960 communicants and 1.756 church school pupils and teachers.

There was paid out in salaries to clergy $40,567.64 and in pension premiums $3,253.50. The operating expense of the various churches was $19,611, and the total operating expense, salaries, etc., was $63,154. For special parocial objects $16,808 was spent.

Given to the Diocese for general expense $4,436 and to the work of the general church outside the diocese $13,250. Loans to the amount of $3,095 were paid. The total disbursements were $108,185, and a balance on hand in the various treasuries $6,749.

The value of all church property in the Diocese is placed at $1,346,975 and the insurance on this is about $610,000. These figures represent physical property and has no reference to the invested funds belonging to the several Diocesan funds, these amounting to over $175,000 additional.
