LOCAL NOTES.....

The Hynson house on Water street was purchased at public sale Tuesday by George W. Baldwin for $6,000. Mr. Baldwin expects to make five apartments here. The garage was struck off to W. Belt Townsend for $2,100.

A colored man, known as "Buck" Benjamin, is being held here and his son, Leonard L. Benjamin, is being hunted in Delaware and the lower Eastern Shore, following an automobile accident, in which William Johnson, 75-year-old Negro of the Morgnec district of Kent county was run over while coming out of church and seriously injured. Johnson is now in Easton Emergency Hospital. Benjamin was tried and sentenced to four months in jail.

Benjamin is said to have bought a second-hand car without ever having taken a lesson in driving and when he started the machine, he had no idea how to stop it. He went from Kent into Queen Anne county, across the Chester river, it is said, before the machine stopped. The accident occurred near the aged man's home.

The Chestertown Literary Society enjoyed an address Friday evening by Dr. Esther M. Dole, head of the department of history at the college. After conducting courses in the summer school at Alford University, left immediately for Europe, returning September 25th. Her itinerary included a glimpse of England and Scotland. In Londan she joined an English travel party, the Hellenie Travelers' Club, and with them proceeded to the Mediterranean countries, visiting Greece, Turkey, the islands of Delos, Crete, Sicily and Corsica, and the cities of Naples, Pompeii, Marseilles and Paris. Dr. Dole gave an interesting description of this trip which was appreciated by about fifty.

During the week Professor F. B. Oldenburg, of the University of Maryland Extension Service and County Agent J. D. McVean assisted several of the corn growers in the selection of exhibits of white and yellow corn which will be shown at the National Hay and Grain Show to be held in Chicago in December in connection with the National Livestock and Poultry Exposition. Two exhibits were selected to represent Kent county. Josiah Massey, known throughout the Peninsula as the king of corn growers, will show an exhibit of white corn, while William J. Naylor, of near Galena, who won a prize at last year's National exhibit, will show yellow corn. These exhibits were shipped to Chicago on Monday.

"All Aboard," the nautical musical revue, to be presented by tht Ladies Auxiliary of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company, has been postponed until February 24, 25, 26. The delay is caused by the illness of Mrs. Harrington J. Wheeler, of Wilmington, who will direct the show.

SPECIAL MEETING OF TURKEY GROWERS

A special meeting of the Maryland Turkey Growers' Association of Kent County will be held at the Chamber of Commerce office Wednesday, December 4th at 1.30 p. m. This meeting will take the place of the regular monthly meeting in November which was ommited due to the fact that it was scheduled for the day before Thanksgiving when nothing more could be learned about the Thanksgiving market and the after Thanksgiving prices had not yet been considered.

It is hoped that prices from buyers will be submitted by December 4th for the period between Thanksgiving and Christmas so that the growers will be able to discuss the advisability of accepting what may be offered.

Turkeys sold as low as 30 cents per pound alive outside of the organization just prior to Thanksgiving. Better cooperation is needed to avoid such sacrificial selling. One buyer's offer of 42 cents per pound, dressed, was refused by the Association and after shopping around New York the buyer came back with a 45 cents offer which was accepted. The order was small but proved to the organization that when once our local birds have been used a buyer is spoiled for much of the sort of birds found in the markets from the west and southwtst.

Results of the consignment shipped by the organization will no doubt be on hand by the time the special meeting is held and will probably decide for the growers the worth of such shipments when other offers are not forthcoming.

The 4-H Clubs of Fairlee will hold an interesting entertainment in the Fairlee school building on Friday evening, December 6th, at 8 o'clock. The outstanding features will be two one-act plays entitled, "A Precious Pickle," and "Not A Man In The House."

"A Precious Pickle" is a snappy one-actcomedy. Three city girls are on their vacation in the country. Jemo, the colored cook, wishes them anywhere except where they are; this part is played by Virginia Miller. Mrs. Gabble, the town gossip, can tell you more news in five minutes, than you can comprehend in half an hour. This role is successfully played by Mrs. Walter Morris.

"Not A Man In The House" is also a one-act comedy. Mrs. Bings, the head of the house, will not have a man enter her house; she is kept constantly on nettles, by her Irish Maid, Kate, who does her best to get a man in the house. These parts are played by Marian Reinhart, and Louise Ackerman, respectively.

Dr. Guesser—What you need most to cure your dyspepsia is a change of diet.

Patient (very) — That's just the trouble. We've had six different cooks in the past six months.

POULTRY SHOW MILFORD, DEL.

The Delaware State Poultry Association is holding its annual Poultry Show on December 3, 4, and 5 at Milford, Del. The premium list and program indicate that attendance at this show will be worthwhile.

Kent County poultrymen should be thinking of an organization and a Poultry Show. Why not visit the Delaware Show, realize the many merits of such a show—then come home and get busy.

Caroline County has a County Poultry Association and recently held a very successful and instructive show. Why not Kent?

WHY WE PUT THINGS OFF

By Mehran K. Thompson, Ph. D.

We put things off because we are born lazy. Not all of us are equally lazy. We are only as lazy as we dare to be. There are certain fundamental human desires which cure us of laziness. It is more pleasant to work than to starve. Nevertheless we do even the necessary things rather reluctantly because of sheer innate laziness.

Consciously or unconsciously we keep hoping against hope that something or other will turn up to relieve us of the necessity. That is why it is so easy to think up a thousand and one other things to do, such as filing our nails, reading the morning paper, etc., when all the while we know we should be doing the thing we are avoiding.

We put things oft because we dread finality, and because we are afraid we lack ability to do the thing as it should be done. I know of a learned man who has spent twenty years on a manuscript which was ready for publication ten years ago. But he just can't let it go. He is afraid it may not be as good as it should be.

In short, we put things off because of inborn laziness or because we really do not want to do the thing at all or because we lack confidence in our ability.

Putting things off is such a common ailment that perhaps a few practical suggestions will not be out of place.

Laziness may be overcome by proper habits of work. Have a set time for each specific task. Think up a lot of good reasons why the things should be done now.

You can banish your dislike for unpleasant tasks by making a game of it and going out of your way to look for "trouble." A certain man of moderate ability who rose to prominence says that very early in his career he decided to do especially well and with unusual vigor the things he disliked. He got so he was looking for unpleasant chores.

The dread of finality and lack of confidence may be conquered by tricking yourself. For example, if you have an important letter to write and are afraid to tackle it, take a piece of waste paper and scribble what you have to say. When you get through you will find that you have formulated the thing about as it should be. The trick is turned.

Asker—How did you find the scenery along the Fondeluniac road

Teller—By looking through a knothole in one of the billboards.

Moses—What are you doing with all that soap on your hands?

Abraham—Mother caught me saying some bad words.
