TAKE A BROAD VIEW

The building of the Chesapeake Bay bridge by the State would be the outstanding event in the history of Maryland. We agree with the Sun when it concludes an editorial thus, "With public sentiment apparently generally in favor of the bridge and with the likelihood that sentiment will also strongly favor making the project pay its own way, if the plan is feasible, there is no reason why there should be political division of any kind in the matter."

With the political side overcome the next objection would be the competing ferry lines At first glance it would seem unfair for the State to build a highway that would interfere with these means of travel. But these companies nor their friends have a single argument in their favor.

All progress has been made and will continue so to do at the sacrifice of less efficient and less skillful means. The ox-cart gave way to the horse and the latter to the automobile. The scow to sail-boat and the latter to steamboat. The dinky engine to the big monarch of the mountains and these are about to fall before the truck and airplane. Is there a man who tries to stop this progress? No, nor will the general public be thwarted in this great enterprise by a few men whose small interests are as nothing compared to the bigness of this bridge project.

"Where there is no vision the people perish" is true in the consideration of this structure. When all is said and done, ideals are the driving forces that carry man upward in his journey through the years. As he travels along life's highway, those impulses that are born of greed and base desires, would drag him down into the far valleys where the lower animals live and die and one soon forgotten. So, to the opponents of this bridge we point them to the highest dreams of the human mind and ask that they take a broad view of the proposition and build, not for the present as for the future They will thus rise to the realms of statesmanship and live in the memories of our peace-loving peoples thru the ages, while those whose only thought was founded upon provincialism and self interest will have been forgotten as the grasses of the fields that decay under the beating sun.

The Eastern Shore of Maryland is recognized as the "Garden Spot of the State," but its development has been retarded and practically at a standstill for the past twenty-five years because of its isolation from the rest of the state and from the Baltimore Market. Lately, however, the building of a network of State Highways has made it possible and more profitable for farmers to make use of motor trucks, moving their products up the peninsula, using the new DuPont Highway to Wilmington and Philadelphia, rather than ship them across the bay to Baltimore. This growing tendency has robbed Baltimore of much of its former prestige and commerce, which which, a bridge will regain in large part at least.

With its $137,000,000 of assessed real estate and personal property, and 850 miles of state roads, the 200,000 people on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, should whole-heartedly boost and work for the construction of this bridge, which will bring them closer economically, politically financially and socially to Baltimore, their home metropolis.

The Pennsylvania Railroad after having spent two and one-half million dollars in an effort to make them pay, has abandoned the steamship lines it has maintained between Baltimore and the Eastern Shore, except the line to Love Point; leaving only two independent lines—the Tolchester Company and the Ericsson Line. At one time there was a fleet of 28 Bay Steamers, some of them have been running for 50 years.

These changing conditions have made it imperative that a bridge be built; if Baltimore, the natural center for Eastern Shore, is to retain its close relationship with us.

If the Eastern Shore is to grow it must be alert and stand as one in striving for the progressive things —whether these be social, civic or business betterment. If our citizens be composed of individuals of a purely selfish cast, seeing nothing and caring for nothing but that which promises to immediately redound to the personal benefit of self, the Shore will never grow in size or importance.

Selfishness, besides being the narrowest policy that an individual, a firm or a community can indulge in, brings its own punishment to those who worship at its shrine. Its followers miss the great opportunities of life. They are born little, they cultivate narrowness, and they die as they were born — unimportant and insignificant.

There has been many a town and community's natural opportunities for bigness, held back or killed entirely by a selfish citizenship lacking vision to see that they were strangling their own opportunities and driving away their own material success. If these same men had been bigger and had put their shoulders to the civic wheel of progress, their town would have grown and prospered and taken them with it. Their life, then instead of being a failure, or at best a very limited success, could have become one of accomplishment — not only in the community sense but in the personal sense as well.

Every county on this Peninsula would be benefited by this bridge and the News urges every citizen to get behind the enterprise for the good of the whole Eastern Shore and State.

Judge Hughes has been confined as Chief Judge of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Senators Borah and Glass opposed the confirmation of Judge Hughes because he had shown marked preference for the rights of property over those of humanity.
