The Kent News

SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1931

AT THE MEETING of the Board of Town Commissioner, the clerk, James W. Crouch, was instructed to write a letter to officials of the Pennslyvania Railroad Company calling their attention to the dangerous condition of the railroad crossing on West High Street, because of the failure of the company to provide a flagman there for the southbound evening passenger train due to arrive at 6. The Board also named John C. Davis and Wm. A. Wheatley as registers of voters for the town election.

No provision has been made for informing the public as to the details of the new Town Charter. The auditor's report was ordered published.

H. STOCKTON STARTT qualified as Treasurer of Kent County Monday and J. Frank Wheatley as deputy. Treasurer Clarence Newsome was in town Tuesday and made his final report to the Commissioners. He has discharged the duties of his office in a most satisfactory manner and retires with the plaudits of all good citizens. No one knows the arduocs task this office requires except those who have experienced its woes. Mr. Newsome has been fortunate in having Mrs. Regina Rasin Kirby as his deputy. She has discharged her duties well. We bespeak for the new officers your consideration and co-operation and feel assured that they desire to serve you.

Lorie C. Quinn, Jr., editor and published of "The Crisfield Times," after an illness of two weeks, passed away at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, at 3.25 o'clock Friday afternoon.

At his bedside, when death came, were his wife, Mrs. Nellie Neville Quinn; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Quinn, Sr.; and brothers, Wallace M. Quinn and Egbert L. Quinn, of Crisfield, and David L. Quinn, of Newport, R. I.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Quinn, Sr., on Chesapeake avenue.

All sections of Somerset county were represented at what was the largest attended funeral ever held in that city. Many beautiful floral tributes were received.

The Rev. Hugh V. Clary, rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, conducted the services, assisted by the Rev. J. J. Bunting, pastor of Immanuel Methodist Episcopal the Rev. E. C. Graham, pastor of Mount Pleasant Methodist Protestant Church, and the Rev. J. B. Scruggs, of the Baptist Temple.

The pallbearers were Adolph Justice, Paul Coulbourn, Paul Cullen, Earl Morris and Harry Dashiell, of Princess Anne, and William T. Holland, of Dublin. Burial was in St. Paul's Cemetery, near Marion.

In the death of Mr. Quinn the Shore has lost an aggressive and progressive citizen while the editorial profession has lost a pungent writer and the Democratic party a devoted follower.

THE MACINTOSH DECISION

The Supreme Court of the United States, by a five-to-four decision, denied citizenship to Douglas Clyde MacIntosh, a Yale professor, and Marie Averill, a war-time nurse, because of their refusal unqualifiedly to take an oath "to bear arms" in defense of the United States. Professor MacIntosh stated that he would "not assist in the defense of the country by force of arms or give any war his moral support unless he believes it to be morally justified."

This is the same attitude that is taken by thousands of our best and most respected citizens.

It is discouraging, to say the lest that the highest tribunal of our land should fail to recognize the courage and character of a man who refuses to conceal his convictions when asked to take the oath of citizenship. The decision of the court puts a premium on intellectual dishonesty.

It is, however, encouraging to find that the four members of the Supreme Court who have the highest reputation for intelligence and enlightened points of view vigorously dissent from the majority opinion.

The organic law of the land will be controlled and shaped by the opinion of the majority. The moral and intellectual standards of the country will be more strongly influenced by the minority opinion of Judges Hughes, Holmes, Brandeis and Stone than by the reactionary decision of the five controlling members of the Court.

At the same time, it is appalling to realize that while men and women of the type of the professor and nurse are excluded, many gansters and other undesirable aliens who have triumphantly made unqualified oath will enter into the blessed estate of full, free and officially blessed United States citizenship.

Our influence depends more on what we are than what we do.—J. R. Miller.

"An Outsider Looking in"

By BILL USILTON

My conscience forces me to admit that when I first saw the light of the morning sun on Saturday—Decoration Day—I was far from being in the patriotic mood that the occasion prescribes. Having the day off with nothing to worry about but a few licks of work around noon, I was well into my tenth hour of slumber when a blare of trumpets seeped through to my drugged senses. For a moment I thought I had passed on to the other side during the night and Father Gabriel and his cohorts, as the story goes, were blowing assembly for the final confab. However a discord soon shook this illusion from my mind and yanked me to life...and the window. Gazing down I was blinded by the glitter of silvery helmets passing below and...well, you know me...quick as a flash I remembered reading something about Decoration Day...parades...wreaths for our departed heroes....Poppy Week ...crowded beaches...a holiday.

Still a littled peeved at such a rude awakening—I haven't yet discovered why they selected our alley for the crosstown march—I sat down to breakfast. Orange juice and coffee had their usual effect and I was soon my old sweet self. But my thoughts kept wandering to Chestertown and the preparations going on at that moment for the march to Cemetery Hill and the annual address among the dead. And then it suddenly occurred to me how much I missed it all. How different it was from New York...how friendly and intimate. Every person in the parade a neighbor, a friend, with more neighbors and friends linging the sidewalks of Main Street to cheer and follow them up Herring Hill, past the Milk Station and through the cemetery gates. There would be little to it—a march up town with the band playing; legionnaries, Boy Scouts, Chamber of Commerce and Firemen; a flowery speech; and then...the march back—but it certainly would embody all the patriotism and sentiment that has made us Americans. Americans, paying homage to the heroes of the past with a simplicity and sincerity that doesn't distract the mind from the responsibilities of the present and the future. A homage paid with a sincerity and simplicity that is void of superficial trappings and pomp... which explains to my satisfaction why we are a nation apart from the rest. Unlike the nations of the Old World, burdened with traditions and conventions of antiquity, we can revere their spirits and give thanks for their sacrifices, while at the same time pushing onward and upward in the world that they helped save for posterity. To linger in sorrow among them without utilizing to the fullest extent the heritage that they willed with their lives is to break the faith that they placed in us as Americans. Americans of the present and future—not of the past...All of which is in the way of trying to tell you how much I missed being present. It must've been swell!

During the next two weeks, thruout the length and breadth of these United States, there will belch forth upon an unsuspecting nation some tens of thousands fresh young men and women in search of worldly gain freedom and independence, fame and reputation, positions, jobs, "snaps," handouts and innumerable other ways that will enable them to pass down through the years to a ripe old age without entering the gates of the poorhouse. Washington College will add some forty odd hungry mouths to the ranks of the unemployed on Monday. Not many, but its home and we are naturally interested in them. This year its going to be exceedingly tough on the graduate, and we shouldn't add to their egotism by telling them how easy its going to be to set this world on fire. We should give them a push upword—help them get located if possible—but not inflate them with praise and wishy-wash that will lift their feet from the ground. A little word here and there, with the proper gravity, will do wonders in setting them off with the right foot. I know my toes are bruised and battered from stepping into places that weren't meant for me, and if I can steer any of the graduates clear of the obstacles I will have accomplished something. They're just a bunch of nice boys and girls. Give them a great big hand...and, if necessary to get the results, on the spot that Mother and Father used!

This advertising and publicity racket gets to be a mania after awhile and you can't even look at your best girl without thinking of some glorious schemes to exploit her. A friend of mine, a press agent, couldn't even restrain the urge in announcing his debut as a father. Here's how the announcement read; "Marvelous! Gorgeous! Wonderful! ...Mr. and Mrs. John Doe present MARILYN DOE in "For Crying Out Loud." Showing at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, starting Wednesday, May 30th, 9.40 A. M.
