The W. C. T. U.

MESSRS. EDITORS KENT NEWS:

As the enemies of the temperance movement in our county are circulating reports to the effect that the officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are paid salraies for their service, to which circumstance might be attributed their earnestness and zeal and fearing that some who are ignorant of the origin and systematic workings of the organization, might give credence to such charges, the following facts are given:

From that wonderful uprising in Ohio and other Western States more than 16 years ago of bands of Christian women to close the liquor saloons, called the Women's Crusade, has sprung the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, with a membership of 150,000. To become a member only two conditions are required, to sign the total abstinence pledge and the payment of an annual fee of fifty cents, one half of which goes to the national fund leaving twenty-five cents from each member in the treasury. In this county there are about 100 paying members. Their fees would amount to about $25! Where would the officers' salaries come from? The difficulty is to get enough funds to pay necessary expenses. No remuneration is made to any officer either in county or State. The State organizer and lecturer are only paid enough to cover living expenses. The State officers of Maryland do not receive any pay for their immense labor. At our last State convention a petition was brought before the executive committee asking that our $100 be paid the treasurer, a woman who had devoted all her time for years to the work, but who was now thrown upon her own efforts for support. It was objected to on the grounds that there were not sufficient funds and that there were plenty of women who would gladly do it for nothing—no not for nothing, but for the consciousness of knowing that they were helping in a cause whose aim is the uplifting of suffering men and women and the protection of helpless children.

It is said that nothing is done toward the reclamation of the drunkard and that now that we have a prohibitory law it is not enforced, and why? Not for lack of zeal in the temperance workers, for that seems to have provoked the charge of interested motives. No, but because every lawyer who pleads in our courts and every official of our county, I think without exception, either indulges in the habit himself or favors giving the privilege to his fellow-men. It is a difficult matter to get a politician to enforce a law which bears hard on the vices of a voter. If a majority of the intelligent citizens of the county elected the candidates for office we would not only have a prohibitory law, but officers to enforce it.

The W. C. T. U. has accomplished much even in Kent county in preparing the way for further advance. The next generation will reap in the broad field of temperance reform what the faithful workers have sown in this. MRS. S., PRESS SUP'T.

Worms in Horses.

Horses and colts which are compelled to get their living wholly upon frostbitten grass in the fall until the ground is covered with snow, are very liable to suffer from worms. Colts should be looked after very closely, as numerous cases of death from this cause occurs every year. One of the symptoms of worms is an unthrifty coat and loss of flesh. Another, is the appearance of worms in the falces. An occasional feed of pulverized copperas and gentain given the animals in their grain is a pretty sure preventive of most varieties of these troublesome pests. The proportions should be equal parts by weight of each, and the dose for a full grown animal a tablespoonful, which should be given once or twice a week. Some of the best breeders in Kentucky mix pulverized copperas in the salt which is constantly kept within reach of their animals. It has a better effect, however, to mix it with gentain. One of the simplest and effective remedies for worms is super-carbonate of soda, given in milk and molasses, after preparing the animal with bran mashes. Feed sparingly on hay and give a liberal bran mash at night. Repeat this the following morning and also the next night.

Before feeding or watering the next morning, mix a tablespoonful of super-carbonate of soda with a half-pint of milk, and add a pint of good molasses made with cane syrup. Be sure that it is not glucose, large quantities of which are palmed off for molasses. Pour this down the animal's throat from a horn or rubber bottle if one can be obtained. A glass bottle will answer, but as there is always more or less danger of serious injury to the patient from the breaking of the latter, it will be more safe to go a long distance to secure either of the others. The dose prescribed is for a full grown animal. The dose for a yearling should be about one-third, and that for a two-year old, one-half the quanity given to a full grown animal. A six months' old foal will require only about half that of a yearling. The directions, if followed, will produce a smart operation of the bowels, which will bring away most of the worms. After this has been accomplished, give the copperas and gentian every night for one week, and there will be but little to fear from worms for some time to come. V. S.

"Bad Roads."

"Bad roads, bad roads," is iterated and reiterated, not only here, but everywhere. It is the same thing in every county of the State. And it must continue to be so, except on turnpikes, while the winter season continues and alternate thawing and freezing render the roads rough or heavy. Good roads are always desirable, but they are expensive, and mean increased taxation. Is that desirable also? If it is, let the taxpayers unite in petitioning the Commissioners to increase the levy for roads. If it be not desirable to increase the taxes, in the present depressed condition of agriculture, the public will have to get along with the roads as they are. As soon as the winter is over the roads become good and we hear no more complaint until the next winter, when the same old song of bad roads is renewed. There is a class of men who take pleasure in complaining of everything. But, until they can prevent the ground from freezing and thawing we shall have to put up with the inconvenience of heavy winter roads. For three years past there has been an unusual rainfall. The floods have torn the roads into gulches or kept them for much of the time in a wet and muddy condition. The County Commissioners nor the road supervisors possess no control over the elements. They cannot restrain the clouds from dropping down the rain any more than they can restain the chronic grumbler from his favorite pastime.—Westminster Advocate.
