CHESTERTOWN, - JULY 4, 1891.

"OLD CHRISTIANA, DEL."

MESSRS EDITORS OF THE NEWS:

In these days of stirring enterprise, when the shrieking locomotive yells its warning signal from the Atlantic sea-board to the California coasts, arousing the midnight slumbers of the Indian and the buffalo; when cables belt the world and electric flashes converse with peoples of remotest zones; when trips to Europe are summer picnics, and expeditions to the poles no longer cause our wonder; to find any place in this vast country within an hour's ride of our great commercial centres untouched by time and unaroused from its primitive nature by the daily progress of events, is a curiosity almost as wonderful as the finding of those hidden cities covered with the lava of Vesuvius.

Far back in the olden times, when the much talked of Pilgrim Fathers were battling with the hardships of their infant colony on the bleak shores of New England, a band of adventurers sailed from Sweden and remoter Finland up the beautiful waters of the unnamed Delaware river, and entering a small creek made a landing place and settlement; here they found a good stream for milling purposes, fine land for farming and gardens, and here these venturesome voyagers from distant seas rested. In honor of the infant queen of Sweden they called the stream of water and their settlement Christiana. They remained here in comparative peace and prosperity until ousted by the Dutch under old Peter Stuyvesant from New York.

On the coast below where Wilmington now is these early settlers built a few houses which they called Sand Hock, afterwards, when the Dutch came, they added a fort and changed the name to New Amsdel, and later, when in possession of the English, it became New Castle. After the Dutch had held the Swedish colony for awhile, the Dutch of York, in August 21, 1682, gave a grant of all this land to Wm. Penn, irrespective of the claims of other countries, and so the English held possession until Revolutionary days, when disputes arose as to correctness of boundary lines between the heirs of Lord Baltimore on the one side concerning the Maryland, lands, and the heirs of Penn on the Delaware side.

These boundaries were finally arranged in 1761 by two engineers, Mason an Dixon, who, taking New Castle court house for the centre of their operations, surveyed and run the lines for regulation from that point, and in honor of this event the famous boundary between Pennsylvania and Maryland was called the Mason and Dixon Line.

Long after the little Swedish settlement on Christiana creek, the great city of Philadelphia grew into existence on the north, Wilmington swelled into importance on the east, Baltimore on the west increassed prodigiously; year after year small villages became towns, and other towns became cities; forests were converted into smiling gardens and broad orchards; different nationalities came from the old world; colonies of Scotch, Irish, Welch and French Refugees, called Huguenots, and among all these changes these early settlements of New Castle and Christiana remained stationary. The latter village neither swelled into a city nor declined into a X road. It smiled with the same complacency under Swedish, Dutch, and English governors.

The mills ground slowly, and steadily; different names possessed them, different millers guided the wheels, but ever slowly, slowly. The grand war of the Revolutionary came with its stirring interests, men fighting dying, all for liberty. This little village of Christiana sent its share of patriots, among them an ancestor of my own family, who owned the mills in the place—Joseph Israel—whose name figures upon the old muster rolls of New Castle county, Del., and for whose valor was made an officer—old names known among Washington's gallant followers, long since passed away, but seen ever now upon tombstones in the beautiful graveyard of Immanuel Church, in New Castle.

The Revolution came and went, the sound of musketry and marching sounded very near old Christiana. At the battle of Brandywine and Chadd's Ford many hearts were made sorrowful over fallen braves, and when the gallent ally, General LaFayette was wounded at the battle of Brandywine, sympathy and friendship, gratitude and patriotism, bore him to old New Castle, and lovingly restored him to renewed strength and valor, meanwhile the waves of commotion only passed over little Christiana; only ripples of the outside world; the bugles of '76 hardly disturbed the wild song of the birds, or the smooth surface of social life; neither did the cannons of 1812, nor the passionate struggles of the civil war.

A Rip VanWinkle spell has settled over this most primitive place. Railroads and telegraphs stretch in active revelry from east to west, and from north to south, on all sides, but this quaint old village is not touched by them. Today there remains a few old brick houses whose materials were brought from the old countries in ships, many of the ships manned by sailors from this place, for in its infancy Christiana was the center of the highest culture and intelligence found in the new world. Some of the old houses had curiosities and rare objects brought from China and other remote lands, brought to their families by the captains and sailors, natives of the place. At one time the mills of Christiana were used for cotton from the Southern States.

Captains George and Joseph Israel commanded large vessels, sailing from Philadelphia to China and the Spanish Main, and others from Christiana figured both in the merchant and naval service from time to time. It was a gay place in the days of our grandmothers, balls and parties were largely attended by the faithful ones, especially when friends returned from a long voyage, and were welcomed by the hospitable home circle. Now the old village seems sleeping, the creek winds slowly along as placidly as in old Swedish days. The bittern saunters along the banks or dips for fish as happily as its ancestors may have done when Red Men glided among the forests. The old mill race is full of fish that dart around in playful abandonment. The water falls over the old stone dam with a lazy motion and creeps deliberately down through the meadows, the burden of its song seeming to be, "I'm taking my time." Nothing new or modern distracts the tourist's eye; there are no railroads near enough to disturb the harmony of nature; only natural sounds break the silence, a boy's laughter or a bird's song; and one feels while wandering through the streets, or along the mill stream, that the wizard of the Catskills has left here, also, the impression of his wand. ROSALIE MITCHELL.

No Need of an Eye Stone.

On a pleasant day last week a Mail and Express reporter was standing in Broadway, in the neighborhood of the big dry goods stores, with a well-known oculist. The man to whom the mystery of sight is an open book and the handling of the delicate optic nerves a matter of every day occurrence gazed with pleasure at the scene. Perhaps he appreciated the fact that but for his profession many mortals would not be able to enjoy it.

The curious gaze of the reporter and the business eye of the doctor discovered at about the same instant a sympathetic movement on the part of two ladies on the opposite side of the street. One of them had evidently gotten a cinder or something else in her eye. Another laday was trying, with the aid of a handkerchief, to extract the exasperating mote, but with no great success. The oculist watched the scene for a moment, and then philosophized thusly: "There are two ladies, intelligent looking, and evidently informed on a variety of subjects; yet they are ignorant on as simple a matter as the removal of a foreign particle from the eye.

"The simplest and quickest way to dislodge anything that has become fixed in the eye is to catch up the eyelid by the skin and pull it away from the eyeball gently and repeatedly. I have often tried the method myself, and have never known it to fail. It instantly relieves the sensitive member from pain and shifts the particle so that it can be easily dislodged.

"I learned the method myself from a railroad brakeman. His class are especially liable to annoyance from flying cinders, and nearly all of them use the treatment I have described."

Camphor in Place of Fly Screens.

It amuses me to see the weary clerk or assistant carry home window screens on warm evenings, or taking advantage of the new patent and securing sections of frames to adjust and put together at his leisure, and at the expense of his fingers and thumbs. Window screens are not really necessary at all, and in many instances they keep flies in as well as keep flies out. In our house we burned the frame of our last screen door some years ago, and have had the full benefit of the unobstructed breeze every ensuing summer. A little camphor placed on ever window sill will keep out flies, except in the kitchen, where the temptation is stronger, and the remedy of necessity a little more stringent. But a little camphor sprinkled on the cook stove now and again will drive out the pests and keep them out, while it will also neutralize the unpleasant smell of cooking.—St. Louis Globe.

'Square Dealing Means Success.'

HONEST TRANSACTIONS!

THIS is our motto, and one we have had hung up with the people of Kent and Queen Anne's counties for the past ten years. One suit justly sold sells another, and by selling the quantity we handle, we do not have to add a big margin on any one suit, but moderate profit will aggregate in quantity, consequently we are satisfied with small margins and larger sales. We claim to deal as justly with the man who is not a judge as the one who has had the opportunity of being better posted, and in these days of perplexities, when cotton is so blended with wool that even the closest scrutiny fails to reveals the fact, then it is even more important to buy where such an announcement as we make is fully substantiated, for our effort in business is to make permanent trade, and not sell a man one suit and lose him when in want of another. Come and see us and if we don't show you a line of goods to suit you, and give you prices in harmony with a limited purse, it will not be our fault, for we have visited the largest manufactures in the country and ground them down to the lowest possible prices on a line of goods that cannot fail to please the most fastidious, consequently we are in a position to please you.

FURNISHING GOODS AND HATS!

we havn't space to tell you of our line, it is too large, come and see it.

SHOES! SHOES! SHOES!

We are selling lots of them. This alone is sufficient evidence of the substantial line we carry. We have anything a Man or Boy can desire, and made to measure and guarantee a fit from the finest stock. Plow Shoes, buckle or lace, 90c.; Solar Tip 90c.

Equitable Life Assurance Society,

OF THE UNITED STATES.

Before assuring your life, or investing your money, examine the Twenty-Year Tontine Policies of The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the U. S.

Policies maturing in 1891 realize cash returns to the owners, of amounts varying from 120 to 176% of the money paid in, besides the advantage of the Assurance during the whole period of twenty years.

The following is one of many actual cases maturing this year:

Endowment Policy No. 64,925.
Issued in 1871, at age 27. Amount, $5,000.
Premium, $239.00. Total Prems. Paid, $4,798.

RESULTS
at End of Tontine Period in 1891:

Cash Surrender Value, $8,449.45
(Equal to $176.10 for each $100 paid in premiums, which is equivalent to a return of all premiums paid, with interest at 7¼ per cent. per annum.)
Or, in lieu of cash,

A Paid-up Life Policy for $19,470
(Equal to $405.80 for each $100 paid in premiums.)
Or,

A Life Annuity of $633.55

One fact is worth a thousand theories. There is no assurance extant in any company which compares with this. The Equitable is the strongest company in the world and transacts the largest business.
