Terrible Conflagration at Savannah---Explosion of the Rebel Naval Magazine--Fearful and Exciting Scenes.

From Savannah (Georgia) files of the 28th ult. details are obtained of the great conflagration which occurred in that city on the night of January 27th. Two fires took place, by which 225 buildings were destroyed, reducing two entire squares to ashes. A great panic was caused by the burning of the old rebel naval arsenal, which contained a great deal of ammunition, the explosion of shells sending terror throughout the city. The Republican of January 28th says:

As we go to press, 2½ A. M., one of the most fearful catastrophes that has ever occurred in our section of the country is in progress. At 11½ o'clock the alarm of fire was again sounded. The firemen were soon on the spot, and found a small row of wooden buildings in flames. The wind was blowing a strong easterly gale, and the fire spread with frightful rapidity, utterly baffling all attempts on the part of the soldiers and the firemen to stay its progress. Several small buildings were torn down in order to prevent the spreading of the flames, and if possible avert the dreadful dangers consequent upon the burning of the old rebel naval magazine, which was known to be stored with a large amount of heavy rebel ammunition and a considerable quantity of powder. As the heavens grew red with the fiery element, the air was filled with sparks resembling a golden shower. In a very short time the news spread like wild fire through the city that the magazine was on fire with fifty tons of powder and several hundred shells stored therein.

This report alarmed and horrified every one in the city, and created a great panic throughout the entire city limits, extending even through the camps. Thousands of people arose from their beds and began to make preparations for their safety, which could only be had by fleeing beyond the range of bursting shells and crumbling walls. In half an hour the worst fears were confirmed by the explosion of the first shell, which burst and sent its fragments hissing through the air. In less than five minutes a fearful series of explosions took place, resembling a furious bombardment, followed by terrific flashes as fast as the powder ignited. We have reports that lives have been lost, but, owing to the dire confusion, it is utterly impossible to give any accounts or reliable statements. Dozens of poor families have been rendered houseless by the fire, and, owing to the freezing state of the atmosphere, their sufferings must be intense.
