Prize Products for Kent.

One of the most interesting and successful meetings in the history of the Maryland State Horticultural Society was held in the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, last week. The exhibits were the finest ever and Kent and Queen Anne's got a good share of the first prizes. Hon. James S. Harris, of Coleman's, was elected president of the Society, and Mr. William T. Brown, of Quaker Neck, is the vice-president from Kent. The prize winners from Kent and Queen Anne's are as follows:

Certificate of merit—Rich Neck Farmers Club, sweet potatoes.

Pratt silver loving cup, and Thomsen Chemical Company prize for apples, Walter B. Harris, Worton, Md.

Fallawater apples—First prize, Walter B. Harris, Worton, plate of apples.

Yellow Transparent—Second, Walter B. Harris.

Lano—First, Walter B. Harris.

Stayman Winesap, Walter B. Harris, first prize.

Stark—First, Walter B. Harris.

White Corn—Second, Josiah Massey.

Yellow Corn—First, Harry P. Skipper; second, W. Irving Walker; third, Thomas Smith.

Sweepstakes in best 10 ears of corn given in Maryland—Harry P. Skipper.

Hard Wheat—First, Josiah Massey.

Sweepstakes in wheat—First, Harry P. Skipper.

Soft Wheat—First, Josiah Massey.

Rye—First, Harry P. Skipper.

Cowpeas—Whippoorwill—First, Josiah Massey.

Red Clover Hay—Third, James T. Anthony.

Alfalfa—First, James T. Anthony.

This is certainly a most excellent showing for Kent and Queen Anne's, and it is a source of much gratification that the farmers of these two counties take sufficient interest in the welfare of their counties as to send their products where they will be seen and appreciated by people from all parts of the State.

Winter's First Blizzard.

Winter came on good and hard Monday morning in a severe snow storm which raged all day Monday and far into the night. A heavy northwest wind on Monday blocked many of the roads in the county, putting a stop to travel by team for the greater part of the day Tuesday and Wednesday. The deep cuts in the Pennsylvania road were piled with snow, and the regular morning train was held here until ten o'clock awaiting the arrival of the snow plow which was followed by the regular freight. The evening train on Monday was two and one half hour's late owing to an accident on the Delaware road due to the snow blockade, it is presumed. The morning mail on Tuesday was delayed several hours, but the train arrived here in time to leave on schedule time in the afternoon. The steamer Corsica was held at her wharf in Baltimore until four o'clock Tuesday morning on account of the blinding snow, and she did not reach her wharf here until 10.30 o'clock. The farmers had about finished their work and gotten all their winter provender in, and so far as we have learned there has been no suffering among stock. This is the heaviest and worst blizzard in many years for so early in winter, and unless all signs fail, there will be more such snows before the good old summer time comes back. Sleighing was good in the town and county for some days.

Queer Doings, These.

One night recently thieves visited the hen house of a permanent farmer up in Pennsylvania and stole a number of his finest chickens. The next morning when the farmer went to the hen house he was as mad as a hornet when he found his finest chickens gone, but his anger soon turned to joy, for upon looking down on the floor of the house, he picked up a package containing $300 which the thief had jostled out of his pocket in his scramble to bag the chickens. That farmer was perfectly satisfied if the thief was.

James Babcock, of Port Jervis, N.Y., was hunting about his cellar on Thanksgiving Day for a piece of stove pipe when he found hidden in an opening in the wall an old coffee pot filled with loose paper, in which mice had made a nest. In cleaning the vessel he found several pay envelopes he had received from the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company when he was watchman for that corporation some years ago. They were yellow with age, but in each he found a bill in a good state of preservation, and on counting them found they amounted to $165.

Do Chickens Pay?

The question has been asked time and again as to whether it pays to raise chickens in town. Judging from the experience of one of our lady lovers of chickens, we should say it does. This lady had 16 hens on a yard 37 feet square. She had kept account of the number of eggs laid from December 1, 1909, to December 1, 1910, by the 16 hens, the cost of keeping the hens, etc., and this is the result:

Sixteen hens laid 1812 eggs in 12 months. At 25 cents per dozen this would be $37.00. The cost of their feed amounted to $22.00. Her net profit from eggs was $15, and besides this she raised 25 fine young chickens from the eggs which these 16 hens laid.

Besides all this she had the satisfaction of having fresh eggs all the time, and plenty of good fried chicken when she wanted it. She is perfectly satisfied with results, and will try it again.
