STARS IN MY COUNTRY'S SKY.

Are ye all there? Are ye all there?
Stars of my Country's sky?
Are ye all there? Are ye all there?
In your shining homes on high?
Count us! Count us! was their answer,
As they dazzled on my view,
In glorious perihelion,
Amid their fields of blue.

I cannot count ye rightly;
There's a cloud with sable rim:
I cannot make your numbers out,
For my eyes with tears are dim.
Oh! bright and blessed angel,
On white wing floating by,
Help me to count, and not to miss
One star in my Country's sky!

Then the angel touched mine eyelids,
And touched the frowning cloud;
And its sable rim departed,
And it fled with murky shroud.
There was no missing Pleiad,
'Mid all that sister race;
The Southern Cross gleamed radiant forth,
And the Pole-Star kept its place.

Then I knew it was the angel
Who woke the hymning strain
That at our Redeemer's birth
Peal'd out o'er Bethlehem's plain;
And still its Heavenly key tone
My listening Country held,
For all her constellated stars
The diapason swelled.

PROFANITY.

The people of this land are certainly distinguished, to an extent unknown in other countries, except perhaps Great Britain, by profaneness. A stranger might infer, from the tone of popular conversation, from the exclamations of excited individuals, from the clamors of anger and passion, that we acknowledge the Almighty for no other purpose than that we might have a name to swear by, or a convenient expletive to fill up the chasms of discourse. Profaneness is a sin, the enormity of which the imagination cannot conceive, because no thought can compass the infinite excellencies of Him whose prerogative it is to be; who sits upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers; who stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in. That a puny creature of the dust, born to-day and gone to-morrow, should have the audacity to pour contempt upon that glorious name which seraphs adore with rapture, is enough to astonish the heavens and convulse the earth. Yes, still more astonishing is that miracle of patience which endures the monsters, when one word would arm all nature against them, make the ground treacherous beneath them, heaven terrible above them, and hell ready to meet them at their coming. The magnitude of the sin cannot be exaggerated. It is enough to make the blood curdle, to think of the name of God bandied about as the bauble and plaything of fools, to point a jest, to season obscenity, and to garnish a tale. This offence cannot go unpunished. If there is a God, he must vindicate his own majesty and glory. There must be a period when all shall tremble before him; when every knee shall bow, and every heart shall do reverence. The sword of justice cannot always be sheathed, nor the arm of vengeance slumber. In the sight of angels, there can be no greater sin than that of profaneness. They know something of what God is. They fear that dreadful name, and their imaginations, lofty and expanded as they are, cannot measure the height and depth of that iniquity which can make light of so tremendous a being. It is the very spirit and core of all evil, the quintessence of ungodliness.—American Messenger.

ANTIDOTE FOR POISON.—Dr. J. Edmonds, a prominent London physician, writes as follows to the London Times:

"I inclose a simple, safe and accessible prescription for the whole range of acid corrosive poisons, which, if promptly used, will almost invariably save life. Mix two ounces of powder chalk or magnesia, or one ounce of washing soda, with a pint of milk, and swallow it at one draught; then tickle the back of the throat with a feather or finger so as to produce vomiting.—Afterwards drink freely of milk and water, and repeat the vomiting so as to thoroughly wash out the stomach. Any quantity of chalk or magnesia may be taken with safety, but soda in large quantities is injurious. I may add, that the narcotics are excepted. Milk is an antidote for almost all the poisons, and especially if followed by vomiting."

A DUEL PREVENTED.—Two Spanish officers recently met to fight a duel outside the gates of Bilboa, after the seconds had failed to reconcile the beliggerents. At this moment, a poor fellow approached the seconds, and in a lamentable voice said: "Gentlemen, I am a poor artisan with a large family, and if you would——" "My good man, don't trouble us just now," cried one of the officers; "don't you see my friends are going to split each other! We are not in a charitable humor." "It's not alms I ask for," said the man; "I am a poor carpenter, with eight children, and my wife is sick; and, having heard that these gentlemen were about to kill each other, I thought of asking you to let me make the coffins." At these words, the individuals about to commence the combat burst into a loud fit of laughter, simultaneously threw down their swords, shook hands with each other, and walked away.

The Adjutant General has been directed by the War Department to commence mustering out of service all general, field and staff officers who are no longer needed.

The Poverty of Statesmen.

Statesmen, who are worthy of the appellation given them, generally fail to secure fortunes. They devote themselves to pursuits, which, if honestly adhered to, rarely yield rich rewards.

Jefferson died comparatively poor. Indeed if Congress had not purchased his library, and given for it five times its value, he would, with difficulty, have kept the wolf from his door.

Madison saved money, and was comparatively rich. To add to his fortune, however, or rather to that of his widow, Congress purchased his manuscript papers, and paid thirty thousand dollars for them.

James Monroe, the sixth President of the United States, died in New York, so poor that his remains found a resting place thro' the charity of one of his friends.—They remain in a cemetery in School-street, but no monument marks the spot where they repose.

John Quincy Adams left some hundred and fifty thousand dollars, the result of industry, prudence, and inheritance. He was a man of method and economy.

Martin Van Buren died very rich.—Throughout his political life, he studiously looked out for his own interest. It is not believed that he ever spent thirty shillings in politics. His party shook the bush, and he caught the bird.

Daniel Webster squandered some millions in his life-time, the product of his professional and political speculations.—He died, leaving his property to his children, and his debts to his friends. The former sold for less than twenty thousand dollars—the latter exceeded two hundred and fifty thousand.

Henry Clay left a very handsome estate. It probably exceeded one hundred thousand dollars. He was a prudent manager, and a scrupulously honest man.

James K. Polk left about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars—fifty thousand of which he saved from his Presidency of four years.

John Tyler left fifty thousand dollars. Before he reached the Presidency he was a bankrupt. In office, he husbanded his means, and then married a rich wife.

Zachary Taylor left one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Millard Fillmore is a wealthy man, and keeps his money in a very strong and safe box. It will never be wasted in speculation, or squandered in vice.

Ex-President Pierce saved some fifty thousand dollars from his term of service.

The value of the estate left by the late President Lincoln is estimated at $25,000.

THE MEXICAN EMIGRATION SCHEME is proving less than a "nine days' wonder," and the excitement in New York has quite died out. The Journal of Commerce says:

"The few men who appear to be committed to the enterprise are all colonels or reputed confidential agents of eminent and invisible personages. The rank and file have not yet had sufficient inducements offered to them. The whole question of enlisting in this mysterious movement turns less on the popular sympathy with the Mexican Liberals, or the American affection for the Monroe doctrine, or a desire to gratify that insatiate taste for fighting which is said to linger in the breasts of our discharged veterans, than on the money (part cash down) to be made out of it."

In this connection it may be mentioned that the Emperor Maximilian has issued a decree, under date of March 4th, notifying all persons emigrating to the Pacific coast that all land or other contracts from Benito Juarez will be held to be null and void.

THE EMIGRATION TO THE SOUTH.—While there is a great deal of talk about the Mexican emigration scheme, the departure of hundreds of persons from the North to the cities of the South goes steadily and quietly on. Professional men, mechanics, and indeed men representing every department of industry, are hurrying Southward to try their fortunes. Richmond, Charleston, Savannah, Norfolk, Mobile, New Orleans and the other principal cities of the South are the chief attraction, but as soon as the war shall have actually closed, many of these pilgrims will make their way to the interior. On Saturday we were informed that an advertising firm newly established in this city received $2,800 to pay for advertisements to be inserted in Southern papers. It is stated that the demand for carpenters in the South is already greater than the supply, while masons, plumbers, wheel-wrights and painters are very scarce.—N. Y. Com.

EX-SENATOR FOOTE.—The N. Y. Tribune states that Mr. Foote, a late member of the rebel Congress, who has been in prison in that city for some time, was last week offered the alternative of either standing a trial for treason or quit the country at once. He immediately left for Canada.

A LARGE SAVING.—It is reported that by the stoppage of the draft and the reduction of the army and navy expenses, a saving of over $600,000,000 has been made in the estimates of the current year.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A young man named Andrew Towers was crushed to death on the 11th instant, by being caught in the machinery of a steam mill at Easton.

KIRBY'S
Combined Reapers and Mowers
AND SINGLE MOWERS.

THESE Reaping and Mowing Machines are PERFECT MOWERS and PERFECT REAPERS Combined. They have perfect Hand Rakes and perfect Self Rakes. The Machine throughout for 1865 is very highly improved. The Self Rake is now admitted to be all right. There is no machine made in America that stands as high to-day as the Kirby does as a combined one. Four large factories are trying to supply the national demand. They are sold in all the States, and are constantly increasing in popularity all over the country. In Maryland, where they have been sold for years, they stand so high that some years the demand could not be supplied. All good Farmers should most certainly have one of these Combined machines. Hundreds of them are now and have been for eight years past doing good work in every county of the State, from the rugged Alleghany to the sun-lit shores of Old Woster. They are made mostly of Iron and Steel, are easy work for two horses; no side draft; Adjustable Reel for both Mowing and Reaping; Flexible Finger Bar, open Guard with Steel Base, side delivery for grain; can reap a field without binding it, as the machine clears itself as it goes.
Farmers wanting these Machines will please order early. Cash Price in Baltimore, Large Combined Reaper and Mower with Hand Rake $180. Self Rake $35. Single Mower $125; each warranted separately. Extra Parts for Repairs always on hand.
