GOING TO SLEEP.

The light is fading down the sky,
The shadows grow and multiply;
I hear the thrushes' evening song;
But I have borne with toil and wrong
So long, so long!
Dim dreams my drowsy senses drown,—
So, darling, kiss my eyelids down!

My life's brief spring went wasted by,—
My summer ended fruitlessly;
I learned to hunger, strive and wait,—
I found you, love,—oh, happy fate!—
So late, so late!
Now all my fields are turning brown,—
So, darling, kiss my eyelids down!

Oh! blessed sleep! oh! perfect sleep!
Thus pillowed on your faithful breast,
Nor life nor death is wholly drear,
O tender heart, since you are here,
So dear, so dear!
Sweet love, my soul's sufficient crown!
Now, darling, kiss my eyelids down!

NOTES ON OVERWORK.

Unwise above many is the man who considers every hour lost which is not spent in reading, writing, or in study, and not more rational is she who thinks every moment of her time lost which does not find her sewing. We once heard a man advise that a book of some kind be carried in the pocket, to be used in case of an unoccupied moment—such was his practice. He died early and famous.—There are women who, after a hard day's word, will sit and sew by candle or gaslight until their eyes are almost blinded, or until certain pains about the shoulders come on, which are almost insupportable, and are only driven to bed by physical incapacity to work any longer. The sleep of the overworked, like that of those who do not work at all, is unsatisfying and unrefreshing, and both alike wake up in weariness, sadness, and languor, with an inevitable result, both dying prematurely. Let no one work in pain or weariness.—When a man is tired, he ought to lie down until he is fully rested, when, with renovated strength, the work will be better done, done the sooner, and done with a self-sustained alacrity. The time taken from seven or eight hours' sleep out of each twenty-four is time not gained, but time much more than lost; we can cheat ourselves, but we can not cheat nature. A certain amount of food is necessary to a healthy body, but if less than that quantity be furnished, decay commences the very hour. It is the same with sleep; any one who persists in allowing himself less than Nature requires will only hasten his arrival at the mad-house or the grave. —The Moralist.

A WOMAN ON "WATERFALLS."—Mrs. L. Maria Child writes a letter to the Independent, in the course of which she uses the following language in regard to the latest fashions in hair:

Thinking of the great and blessed work done during these last four years by women in the sanitary commissions, the hospitals, and the school-houses, I seemed to see a bright light dawning on our future career. But the vision receded in the distance, when I looked from my window and saw a bevy of damsels sailing by, with hen-coops in their skirts, and upon their heads a rimless pan of straw with a feather in it—utterly useless for defence against wind or sun. To make this unbecoming head gear still more ungraceful, there descends from it something called by the flowing name of waterfall, but which in fact looks more like a cabbage in a net, tricked out with beads and wampum. If I had met them in Western forests, I should have taken them for Ojibbeway squaws, but their dress was a la mode Parisienne. This tyranny of France is, I suppose, one of the things that must be endured, because it cannot be helped, till our brains are better developed. In process of time, I trust the Empress Eugenie will sleep with her illustrious ancestors, and that no other fanastic queen of fashion will come after her, to lead the civilized world such a fool's dance. What a set of monkeys we are in feathers and furbelows, dancing to the tune of that imperial show-woman!

SUMMER FRUITS.—Acids promote the separation of the bile from the blood, which is then passed from the system, thus preventing fevers and the prevailing diseases of summer. All fevers are "bilious;" that is, the bile is in the blood.—Whatever is antagonistic of fever is cooling. It is a common saying that fruits are "cooling," and also berries of every description; it is because the acidity they contain aids in separating the bile from the blood; that is, aids in purifying the blood. Hence the great yearning for greens, and lettuce and salads in the early spring, these being eaten with vinegar; hence, also, the taste for something sour—for lemonade—on an attack of fever. But this being the case, it is easy to see that we nullify the good effects of fruits and berries in proportion as we eat them with sugar, or even sweet milk or cream. If we eat them in their natural state, fresh, ripe, perfect, it is almost impossible to eat too many, to eat enough to hurt us, especially if we eat them alone, not taking any liquid with them whatever.

INDIANS.—The Philadelphia Age publishes a statement showing the tribes of Indians within the limits of the United States territory. It appears that there are one hundred and six tribes, numbering in the aggregate a population of three hundred and fourteen thousand six hundred and twenty-two souls.

EFFECT OF TOO MUCH ACID ON THE SYSTEM.

There are many persons in the world who, thinking themselves either too thin or corpulent to accord with their beau ideal of symmetry and beauty of person, are constantly exercising their minds with a view of increasing or diminishing their rotundity, and in many cases applying remidies for their supposed defects, which eventually destroy their health. Young ladies of full habit, fearing further innovation upon the system of their waists, are not slow to resort to copious and constant draughts of acidulated liquors, without reflecting that they impair, and in fact arrest, the operation of the digestive organs, when taken beyond a certain point. There is reason in the vulgar notion, unhappily too fondly relied on, that vinegar helps to keep down any alarming obesity, and that ladies who dread the appearance of their graceful outline in curves of plumpness expanding into fat, may arrest so dreadful a result by liberal potations of vinegar; but this can only be accomplished at the far more dreadful expense of health. The amount of acid which will keep them thin will destroy their digestive powers. Portal gives a case which should be a warning:

"A few years ago a lady, in easy circumstances, enjoyed good health; she was very plump, had a good appetite, and a complexion blooming with roses on a polished ivory ground-work. She began to look upon her plumpness with suspicion, for her mother was very fat, and she was afraid of becoming like her. Accordingly she consulted a woman, who advised her to drink a glass of vinegar daily. The young lady followed the advice, and her plumpness diminished. She was delighted with the experiment; but she soon began to experience the effects. A cough and a low fever came on, with a difficulty of breathing; her body became lean, and wasted away; swelling of her lower limbs and feet succeeded, and a diarrhea terminated her life."

If ruddy and rotund young ladies pine for graceful slimness and romantic pallor, let them avoid vinegar and other acids destructive to health; and either accept, with a laughing grace, what nature has bestowed on them, or else practice a proper regime and system of habits, to avoid what they so much dread. Take plenty of exercise, be less indolent, and more moderate in the quantity of sleep indulged in, of much sleep implies much inactivity, and leads to an accumulation of fluids in the body, and the consequent deposition of fat in habits predisposed to secretion. Those, on the other hand, who wish more obesity, we would advise to indulge in good feeding, composed of plenty of farinaceous food, with but little meat, and plenty of pure, fresh water, and lead a calm life, free from mental inquietude. —Scientific American.

A COW DRINKS EIGHTEEN GALLONS OF WHISKEY.—The Troy Times, of Friday, gives a most remarkable case of "beastly" intoxication:

"It seems that, on the upper part of Green Island, an illicit whisky still existed until yesterday, when Marshal Kipp, Collector Woodward, and Inspector Fales made a raid on the premises and locked up both the owner and the door. A month ago the distillery was in full blast. It was a "still" night, and the man running the machine, who had made eighteen gallons of whisky, put it out in the open air to cool. Along came a cow. She was thirsty, and the beverage looked inviting. She swallowed every drop—eighteen gallons of unrectified whisky, warranted to kill at forty rods. That cow has been drunk ever since. She staggered home, and is now in the fourth week of a grand old bender. The cow eats nothing; falls down whenever they try to raise her up, and has become as lean as a crow instead of a cow. Whether the cow will get sober, or end her life in a fit of delirium tremens, is a question we shall look anxiously to see the solution of."

SUCH IS LIFE.—So lately dead; so soon forgotten. 'Tis the way of the world.—We flourish for a while. Men take us by the hand, and are anxious about the health of our bodies, and laugh at our jokes, and we really think, like the fly on the wheel that we have something to do with the turning of it. Some day we die, and are buried. The sun never stops for our funeral; every thing goes on as usual; we are not missed in the street; men laugh at new jokes; one or two hearts feels the wound of affliction; one or two memories still hold our names and forms, but the crowd moves on in its daily circle, and in three days the great waves sweep over our steps, and wash out the last vestage of our earthly-footprint.

CHARLES W——, a manly little fellow of five years, fell and cut his upper lip so badly that a surgeon had to be summoned to sew up the wound. He sat in his mother's lap during the painful operation, pale but very quiet, resolutely shutting back his tears and moans In her distress the young mother could not refrain from saying 'Oh, doctor I fear it will leave a disfiguring scar." Charley looked into her tearful face, and said, in a comforting tone:—'Never mind, mama my moustache will cover it!'

THE WADE AND DAVIS MANIFESTO.—Carpenter, the artist, in his reminiscenses of Mr. Lincoln, relates the following:

Last year, upon the appearance of what was known as the "Wade and Davis manifesto," an intimate friend and supporter, who was very indignant that such a document should have been put forth just previous to the Presidential election, took occasion to animadvert very severely upon the course that prompted it. "It is not worth fretting about," said the President, "it reminds me of an old acquaintance, who, having a son of a scientific turn, bought him a microscope. The boy went around experimenting with his glass upon everything that came in his way. One day, at the dinner table, his father took up a piece of cheese. "Don't eat that, father," said the boy, "it is full of wrigglers." "My son," replied the old gentman, taking, at the same time, a huge bite, "let 'em wriggle; I can stand it if they can."

LET IT ALONE, BOYS!—Let what alone? To drink that stuff in the drunkard's bowl! Aye, let that alone! Don't even learn how it tastes. As the serpent fascinates the bird only to destroy it, so strong drink charms at first but kills at last. The first drop may charm you, therefore don't drink the first drop. If you wish to enjoy good health, if you value a pure character, if you want to be happy and to make others happy, if you wish to go to heaven, avoid strong drinks. Beware of the first drop!

See yonder youth with irons on his hands and feet. He is in prison. Another youth, with weeping eyes, is bidding him farewell. It is a sad farewell, for the prisoner is about to be led out to die. He is a murderer. The law is about to take his life. What does he say? These are his words. "Remember what I told you—let the liquor alone!"

Good reason had he for giving his counsel. Liquor had brought him to a felon's doom. Let the boys, aye, and the girls, too, heed his words.—Let the liquor alone.

THE LOSS TO THE SOUTH IN MR. LINCOLN'S DEATH.—Speaking of the execution of the assassins, the Richmond Republic says: There was but one evil that could add aggravation to our case, and that was the murder of the very man upon whose faith and kindly nature our whole reliance for the mitigation of our misfortunes reposed. The man who struck down the late President aimed a murderous blow against the South, between whom and those woes which befall the vanquished, Mr. Lincoln stood. It was not for us to desire a mitigation of the fate of the conspirators, or to question the manner of their taking off. We were the chief sufferers by the assassination, and we should have continued to suffer if they had escaped conviction and punishment. We are not in a condition to shoulder a vicarious guilt, or to sustain the odium of a vicarious crime. As the crime is at last punished, as the blood of the criminals has expiated the blood of the innocent, we may now be relieved of the odium of an unjust imputation, and spared the insult of a perpetual crimination.

IN his description of a trip from Augusta, Georgia, to Montgomery, Alabama, one of the New York Herald correspondents throws much additional light on affairs in the States named, including matters relating to the new system of labor, the crops and the confused and impoverished condition in which the war left the people and the various industrial enterprises. The freedmen generally, having recovered from their jubilation over the acquisition of their liberty, have settled down to work on the plantations; but many of them have yet to be taught that freedom and idleness are not synonymous.—In Georgia, it is said, the planters have this year to a great extent, instead of cotton, planted corn, of which an immense crop is anticipated. Though some of the landed proprietors are determined not to employ their former slaves as hired laborers, the majority are disposed to give the free labor system a fair trial, and are confident that if the negroes will work industriously both they and their employers will be benefited by the change, and that the lands and all other kinds of property will in a very short time be far more valuable than ever they were under the existence of slavery.

THE SPIRIT OF STRIFE.—In reply to the radicals, the New York Journal of Commerce says: "It is generally supposed here abouts that the people of the South are exhibiting a very commendable spirit, and behaving remarkably well under all the circumstances. But it is sadly probable that we have politicians who design and desire to keep the country in trouble, and to make dissention the normal and unchargeable condition of things. In times of peace and calm, demagogues sink out of sight more easily then in times of excitement. Hence their desire to keep the war alive."

A SOMEWHAT juvenile dandy said to a fair partner at a ball: "Don't you think, Miss, my moustaches are becoming?" To which she replied: "Well, Sir, they may be coming, but they have not yet arrived."

Jeff. Davis no doubt has heard much of Federal hospitality, but Prentiss thinks he finds it a cell.

Middletown Academy,
AND
Boarding School for Males..

THIS well-known Institution of Learning, after undergoing thorough repairs, is now re-opened as a Day and Boarding School. A wing is also being added 20x40 feet, and two stories in height, to afford increased accommodations for boarders.

To take charge of the Educational and Domestic interests of the Academy, the Trustees have engaged a gentleman of superior attainments, a graduate of Amherst College and of Union Theological Seminary, who brings to this enterprise a varied experience as Instructor gained in six States, and extending over a period of fifteen years.

A thorough, systematic course of instruction has been marked out in both the English and Classical Departments. Lads will be qualified in the former, for usefulness in any of the walks of life; while in the latter young men will be fitted for College, or may finish here the entire studies of the Classical course of College.

Departments in Music, Drawing and Painting will soon be established, and efficient instructors be put in charge.

Renewed patronage is respectfully solicited, in view of the improvements made and the thoroughness of the instruction given, as no pains nor expense will be spared to place the Academy in the front rank of American Educational Institutions. Please send for a Circular stating Studies, Terms, Expenses, &c.
