MARYLAND AND DELAWARE FRUIT GROWERS.

Meet in Stam's Hall, Chestertown, This Week—Speeches by Hon. James S. Harris and State's Attorney W. W. Beck—A Fine Attendance of Visitors.

EXHIBIT OF APPLES AND PEARS THE BEST SEEN IN KENT COUNTY.

Amid scenes of rustic beauty the nineteenth annual meeting of the Peninsula Horticultural Society opened in Stam's Hall Tuesday afternoon with Hon. Jas. S. Harris, of Still Pond, in the chair and Prof. Wesley Webb, of Dover, as secretary. Rev. W. L. White, of the Chestertown M. E. Church, opened the meeting with prayer, after which State's Attorney W. W. Beck in his characteristic forcible manner delivered the address of welcome. Mr. Beck after referring to the hospitality of our people and to the beautiful and noble occupation of the farmer, said, "There is nothing more pathetic to me than to hear of a bright and promising boy of a farmer, forsaking the country and going to the city to seek employment, and securing a position of a clerk and probably remain a clerk or underling the rest of his days. This is because he has failed to realize the future of a successful Agriculturist or Horticulturist on account of his father being only a farmer.

I think it was Crabb who discriminates between a farmer and Agriculturist and says a farmer tills the land upon given admitted principles, while an Agriculturist frames new principals or alters those that are established. How many farmers have we among us now who till their crops and treat their land as their fathers or grandfathers did generations ago and treat with contempt any new theories about the growing of their crops or the improvements of their land? Show me a successful tiller of the soil and I will show you an Agriculturist, a man who is willing to learn and ready to discard old methods when new ones are discovered which are better. I have recently bought a small farm of fifty acres and moved on it, and while now I am only a farmer, I aspire to become an agriculturist and horticulturist and expect to attain that end by the good work done, and to be done by this association.

To those who in youth are looking forward to success as practical Agriculturist and to those who seek retirement from past labors, equal advantages and attractions are offered in this county and those adjoining.

* * * * * * *

"When I joined your vocation in life about a year ago I thought almost anyone could grow fruit successfully provided the land was adapted to it, but after listening to my good friend and kind neighbor, Capt. Emory, discourse on the scale and blight and other ailments to which fruit falls heir to, I discovered that I knew less about Horticulture than I did about law the first day I began to study it. Indeed the good and genial Captain told me so much about the scale and the many evils and damages done by it, and the remedies of lime, sulphur and sait, whale oil and soap fumagating etc., that I at first became a little discouraged and had a creeping sensation that the scale was on me as well as the fruit trees. I remember that I dreampt of scales that night, and the next morning made up my mind that I would find out all I could about this enemy and the remedy for it.

It is just here where your association accomplished the most good, in bringing together the best and ablest minds to study and discuss the means of fighting and exterminating these and like enemies.

I cannot close without calling your attention to what I consider one of the paramount duties of this association, and that is in sending to the legislatue of this State and Delaware men of the highest intellect and purest morals, and who are interested in agriculture. Agriculture is the leading vocation among our people, bringing it more money, giving work to more people and more people dependant upon it, than all other industries combined. We should therefore have our best and ablest citizens in our Legislative Halls to protect our interests and see that proper transportation laws are enacted, that deseased trees cannot be brought into our states and other damages to our interest averted.

The best illustration of this was called to my notice about two years ago, when I visited the great St. Louis Fair and the Horticultural building there. After entering this tremendous building and admiring the beautiful and elaborate display of the Virginia, New York, California and other States, I inquired of an attendant where the Maryland Exhibit was located. He at first acted like he had never heard of such a place and after making some inquiries told us that there was not any. Imagine my chagrin and mortification at this rep'y, as I was in company with a party ffom St Louis and had just been extolling and telling them about the delicious peach, pear, apple and other fruits that we raised here. I could hardly realize that Maryland was not represented in this building as I knew the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Delaware were known the world over as the peach belt, and this interest was not represented because the money appropriated by the legislature was deflected elsewhere in mineral products, free transporations etc. This was because the Commissioners who had the handling of this fund were more friendly to minerals and other industries together with free entertainments than they were to Agriculture. If we had sent men to the legislature more favorable to our cause they would have seen that the commissioners appointed would have treated us more favorably and equitably."

Evening Session.

The evening session opened with music by the College Mandolin Club under the direction of Mr. Kemp Bordley. The club comprised Messrs. Bordley, Houston Toulson, Donald Stam, Raymond Moody, Thos. Dixon, S. N. Pilchard, Rue Truitt, A. S. Garrison, E. Breeding, R. Matthews, W. H. Davis. Then came illustrated lectures on "Insects" by Prof. A. L. Quaintance and Dr. G. F. Warren. This was especially fine.

Sect'y and Treas. Wesley Webb, of Dover, Del.

Mr. W. D. Dawson, of Cambridge, responded briefly to the address of welcome.

Hon. James S. Harris, president of the Society, in his annual address thanked the a sociation for the honor and dwelt upon three divisions or leading thoughts—First, a brief review of some facts in relation to the past, and present of our Society, and of horticulture on the Pennisula. Second—Some thoughts from the book of experience as to the possibilities of horticulture for young men starting with very limited or no capital to build up an estate and help to beautify the country in which he lives.

Third—Some thoughts for the improvement of the personel of our Peninsula population and adding value and beauty to our fair land and homes by men of spare means and grown-up sons with taste for horticulture by making it attractive for the sons to stay on the farm.

The first session of our society met in Dover, October 21st, 1886. Large peach orchards were then numerous and profitable and the number of peach trees on the Peninsula reached up into the millions. Since then the yellows have played havoc. The annual value of the horticultural products of our country is over one billion dollars, of which our Peninsula occupies no mean rank. Horticulture affords an opportunity for much greater profits than plain agriculture for men who have inclination and taste for any particular branch of commercial horticulture.

Not only the man who has the ready money to buy and pay for choice farms of any size his experience teaches him he is able to manage well, but for the young man with little or no inheritance, provided he has steady habits of industry and a determination to succeed. He can seek employment at the best honorable occupation of which he is capable with the resolution to lay by 33 per cent. of his earnings and this resolution lived up to is worth more than the money put at interest. After he is able we would advise the purchase of land. Having judiciously made his land purchase of a farm to be well tilled and the choice of a little wife well-willed, let him select some one crop of fruit, or market gardening product as a specialty but at the same time also have mixed crops on a smaller scale sufficient to meet current expenses.

Small farms for beginners are recommended for several reasons. Hail the day when the great majority of our Peninsula land shall be tilled by occupant owners!

The speaker advise[d] pa[rents to] encourage sons to remain [on] farm[s]. Let this policy be adopted all up and down this Peninsula and you will soon see more beautiful well-kept rural homes and happy young families.

Wednesday's Proceedings.

Mr. Levi Cooch, of Cooch's Bridge, Del., made a report on "Peaches" in which he advised supplying the lack of nitrogen in soils by means of scarlet clover or cowpeas. I ran my rows 20 feet apart both ways. The trees were selected of the following varieties planted so as to ripen in rotation: Old Mixon, Reeves Favorite, Elberta, Golden Globe, Crawford's late, Fox's Seedling and Ford's Late White. Should I plant another orchard I would substitute Belle of Georgia for Mixon and with Elberta and Crawford's Late confine the orchard to these three varieties. I cut off all branches and topped off the switches two feet above the ground. I planted corn the first and second years and kept down all weeds.

In fighting scale I first used crude petroleum afterwards the sulphur, lime and salt solution. Peach orchards should be sprayed with Bordeaux mixture at least three times annually. The third year I also started worming the trees. I found wood ashes helpful in keeping the worms down. I plow early, then harrow until middle of July. Then sow with some legaminous crop which will furnish late pasture for sheep and a winter cover crop. Severe pruning, treating each tree as an individual. I would advocate thinning as it is both economical and profitable.

He advocated shipping in carriers and in wrapping the fruit. The peach business today is of such importance and responds so readily to close care and attention to every detail of the business.

Prof. T. B. Symons, State Entomologist, spoke on "Injurious Insects and their control in Maryland." He considers the San Jose Scale as the parmount pest and says the lime, sulphur and salt wash was the most satisfactory remedy. He recommends the same for the oyster shell scale. For the codling moth he recommends one or two applications of an arsenite. The army worm in injurious numbers was found in Prince George's county and destroyed the whole field of millet. For Jassidae he advises spraying with 15 per cent. kerosene emulsion. For mosquitoes he advises the draining of land. After this is done the land would become habitable.

Mr. J. W. Kerr, of Denton, gave an excellent address on "Apples." The average yield of apples in Delaware for four years has been 17 barrels per farm and 75 per cent of these contain less than 100 acres. Maryland averaged about the same, there being 80 per cent of farms that contain less than 100 acres each. Pennsylvania's average is 21 barrels per farm; Michigan, 19; New York, 22; Ohio, 11.

The Fine Exhibits.

The exhibition of fruit was the finest ever seen in Kent County and the best shown by the Society with but one exception. Of course Maryland and Kent took the blue ribbon but it was courtesy to give the honor to our friend Soper, of Delaware. Among the exhibits were the following; Butternuts, black walnutst, pecans, English walnuts chestnuts, grown at the home of Hon. Marion deK. Smith.

Capt. R. S. Emory had a fine display of Keifers, Bartlet and other pears. He showed samples of pears off 22 year old trees from which he picked 6000 baskets and out of which there were only 200 culls.

John Bell, Wm Ford, Harris and Coleman, of Kent, had beautiful apples and pears.

Stork Bro's Nurseries & Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo., had specimen apples

Dr. D. W. Border, Kearneysville, W. Va., had a large display of apples. J. F. Stanley, Princeton, Md., had 13 plates.

Lemuel Black, Hightstown, N. J., had 41 plates of apples.

James T. Shallcross, Middletown, had fine apples.

Evergreen Farm, Wyoming, Del., F. C. Bancroft, manager had a large display.

F. M. Soper & Son, Red Apple Farm, Magnolia, Del., had the largest exhibit and won the crowd by giving away samples of his beauties. He has a farm of 80 acres on which he realized $15,000 and says the outlook is bright for the apple grower.

The Maryland Experiment Station had a beautiful exhibition of fruit in charge of Prof. W. N. Hutt and Prof. T. B Symons. This fruit took first prize at the Maryland State Horticultural Meeting. The exhibitors include S. S. Stouffer, Sharpsburg; R. B. Thomas, Ednor; S. B. Loose, Edgemont; E. P. Cohill, Hancock; E. D. Snider, Hagerstown; Samuel Garner, Annapolis; Olando Harrison, Berlin.

John Bell had a fine exhibition of trees from the Franklin Davis nursery.

This exhibition was in charge of Mr. Thomas Massey and he made an ideal superintendent. Scores of ladies daily visited the attractive rooms and admired the fruit.
