A GREAT REVIVAL AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Five Thousand People March Up and Down the Boardwalk Singing Hymns.

Enthusiasm in the greatest revival that this city has ever known reached its highest pitch Sunday night. Fired by the intense fervor of an inspiring meeting conducted by Evangelist Clarence B. Strouse in the big theatre on Young's Pier, the congregation of nearly 3,000 at the close of the service marched and countermarched on the boardwalk and principal streets of the resort, singing the "Glory Song" and other famous evangelical hyms. Returning to the pier with numbers nearly doubled, a midnight consecration meeting was held in the immense summer pavilion.

That the revival which began three weeks ago, with ten evangelists laboring in different parts of the city, would assume its present proportion even the clergymen of the resort had scarcely dared hope. So far over 1,500 persons have professed conversion, and thrice that number have asked for prayers at the meetings. Probably 1,000 persons were turned away, unable to find even standing room in the big auditorium when the service opened this evening.

In the evangelical field Dr. Strouse is known as the "Southern orator." Friday night a particularly fervent appeal to sinners to repent found his large audience wrought up to a zeal that approached a frenzy in its intensity. Aisles were chocked as men and women by the score, forced to a recognition of their need for repentance, sought to take the evangelist by the hand as a sign of their sincerity. It needed but the suggestion that the service be adjourned to the boardwalk, there to sing and march, and the entire congregation caught the spirit of the thing.

Dr. Strouce, wrapped in a great storm coat; Mrs. Strouse and the clergymen of the city headed the remarkable procession as it moved down the world-renowned promenade. Prof. Harry Maxwell, a famous singing evangelist, with a chorous of 250 voices of the combined church choirs of the city, controlled the singing. As the old revival tunes, lustily voiced by a column nearly two miles in length, rose on the still night air to the accompaniment of the thunderous music of a stormy surf residents and hotel visitors flocked to the Boardwalk to witness the strange sight.

Many joined the procession, with ranks greatly reinforced, marched back to the pier. In the pavillion Dr. Strouse mounted the bandstand and made a short exhoration. There were many responses to his appeal, and then with another burst of song the great throng dispersed.

POINTERS AGAINST CURFEW.

As the curfew agitators seem to be at work in your vicinity, a few points that have been very effective elsewhere may be in order for your citizens.

The curfew is a wholesale attempt to take away the liberties of children and parents and make applicable state paternalism and socialism. It is another attempt to do by compulsion what compulsory education was promised to do. Boys do not want repression, they want work and natural development.

Curfew agitators aim to have legislation passed regardless of the will of the people. They profess to know what is best for the people. They never essay to educate the people up to their hobby things or articles in the press.

In every town wherein I have in time laid the matter before the people through the press, not a single one has responded favorably for the curfew. In behalf of the people you should, therefore, give them the benefit of this letter.

Whenever the curfew is established there confession is made that the church, the Sunday school, the public school and the home have all failed in the work of training the youth in the way he should go.

The home alone should be capable of training properly evey graduate from its crib; but with the child's nursery, the kindergarten and the public school demanding the crib graduate immediatly upon the completion of infantile term, and holding him in their clutches to the almost total exclusion of the parents, what can be expected other than that the home influence will be discounted, and the imperfect work of the substitutes result in a demand for anything that may possibly circumvent the evil done?

The curfew is not wanted, but a return to natural life in the home is wanted as the speediest means of resolving the youth of the land down to the sobrieties and proprieties of life.

The W. C. T. U. seems to be the proposer of the curfew generally, and the same ones that have proclaimed the public school and compulsion therein the salvation of our youth are the foremost ones in proposing the curfew. A folly is offered for the cure of the one preceding it.

The point should be to go back to just causes, remove them, and see if better effects do not speedily follow a more God ordered development.

I took into my family a public school boy who had been accustomed to running the streets until 11 P. M. I took him from the school and all companions, I gave him every variety of work to do through the day, a little at a time—office work, house work, gardenings and chores around town. I was careful to never sap his interest and energy by keeping him too long at any one thing. For play he had my children.

In six months that boy was a healthier and manlier boy. He was always ready to go to bed at 8 P. M. When he first came to me, it was one person's business to put in place what he put in disorder, and wherever he went it was with a yell and a bang, yet this boy was one of the perfect boys—save the mark—that the public schools boast of supplying the country with.

Every boy needs a rounded out day of usefulness; but this the schools deny, giving only "study and play" in lieu thereof. The power of many Niagaras goes to waste yearly in the boys of the land, and some mothers are worked to death, who might have boys assisting them, and at the same time making themselves proficient for duty in times of need when they became husbands. Educators are the ones chiefly responsible for this perversion of the nation's youth.

THOSE COURTEOUS OFFICERS

The Company, However, are Surely Raising the Tariff on Freights to an Exorbitant Extent—Is There no Relief?

Wash., D. C. Jan. 24, '06.

Editor of the KENT NEWS:—

While perusing your paper, the KENT NEWS, dated January 20th, my attention was attracted by an article under the caption:—CHESTER RIVER BOATS, heading an able article citing the obliging and courteous manners of the officers and employes of its roster. The letter was of special interest to me, inasmuch as I was the recipient of certain unusual kindnesses upon the occasion of a recent trip to Kent, in company with two Washington ladies, at the hands of the employes of said line. I witnessed and experienced the courteous attention that undoubted y elicited the letter in question. After making plans incidental to our prospective trip to grand old Kent, we found, to our consternation, that the schedule of the Line upon which we relied had been superceded by that of the Winter, affording its patrons but one sailing day, and leaving Baltimore at such an hour that precluded any opportunity other than Baltimoreans traveling via that route, thus necessitating a consequential change in our plans, and therefore leaving the only alternative; recourse to the Chester River Line. After reaching Baltimore we, like your correspondent, also wended our way to the wharf of the Chester River Line of steamboats, upon reaching which, we had occasion to seek information, looking around for an official, I asked for the desired information, and will state that we were more than appreciative of the gentlemanly manner in which our inquiries were answered. During the trip from Baltimore, we too remarked upon the chivalrous and courteous treatment renderd the evidently grateful passengers while embarking and disembarking at their respective landings along the route by the ever patient and pleasant officers of the steamer B. S. Ford. Not having the pleasure of knowing the personnel of the Ford, as did your correspondent, we can nevertheless, state, although disappointed at first at not being able to reach our destination by the shorter and customary route, that we were more than glad to have been forced to reach our destination via Chestertown, and am now of the opinion that I and my friends will hereafter travel on the steamers under the operation and management of the very pleasant, courteous and efficient service of the Chester River Boat Co's administration.
