LITTLE WORDS.

One little word, one thoughtless word,
What awful changes it can bring,
How every feeling can be stirred,
How it can move, how it can sting!
Then, oh! take heed, know what you say,
For in one simple little breath,
You may change all the light of day
Into the darkest hour of death.

One little word, one thoughtless word,
Has ruined bliss, has fostered gloom,
And hardly breathed ere it interred
Its hapless victim in the tomb.
Then, O! take heed, know what you say,
One little word which hate imparts,
Has sundered ties, caused life's decay,
Tormented souls and broken hearts.

One little word, one careful word,
Comes like a mother's loving kiss,
And in the bosom oft hath stirred
The pure emotions sweet, of bliss.
Then, oh! take heed, know what you say,
One little word of love like this,
May be the light that marks the way
To gain the soul's eternal bliss.

SOMETHING ABOUT READING.

While many do not read at all in these times, there are those who read too much, particularly the young. A moderate amount of reading and plenty of observation is what will develop the youthful mind. In an amusing article upon the "Physicians and Surgeons of a bygone generation," a foreign journal describes Abernethy conversing thus with a certain patient: "I opine," says he, "that more than half your illness arises from too much reading." On my answering that reading was chiefly history, which amused while it instructed he replied, that is no answer to my objection. At your time of life a young fellow should endeavor to strengthen his constitution, and lay in a stock of health.—Besides, too much reading never made an able man. It is not so much the extent and amount of what we read that serves us, as what we assimilate and make our own. "It is that, to use an illustration borrowed from my profession, that constitute the chyle of the mind. I have always found that really indolent men, men of what I would call flabby intellects, are great readers. It is far easier to read than to think, to reflect or observe; and these fellows, not having learned to think, cram themselves with the ideas or words of others. This they call study, but it is not so. In my own profession I have observed that the greatest men were not the mere readers, but the men who observed, who reflected, who fairly thought out an idea. To learn to reflect and observe is a grand desideratum for a young man. John Hunter owed to his power of observation that fine discrimination, that keen judgment, that intuitiveness which he possessed in a greater degree than any other surgeon in his time."

BEAUTIFUL ANECDOTE.

A happier illustration of the wonderful character of the Bible, and the facility with which even a child may answer by it the greatest of questions, and solve the sublimest of mysteries, was perhaps never given than at an examination of a deaf and dumb institution, some years ago in London. A little boy was asked, in writing "who made the world?"

He took the chalk, and wrote underneath the question, "In the begiuning God created the heavens and the earth."

The clergyman then inquired in a similar manner, "Why did Jesus Christ come into the world?" A smile of delight and gratitude rested on the countenance of the little fellow as he wrote:

"This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners."

A third was then proposed, evidently adapted to call the most powerful feelings into exercise. "Why were you born deaf and dumb, when I can hear and speak?"

"Never," said an eye-witness, "shall I forget the look of resignation which sat upon his countenance, as he took the chalk and wrote: "Even so, Father, for it seemed good in thy sight."

AN EXCITING MOMENT.—The other day a small boy came tearing round a corner, with his rags fluttering in the wind, his face daubed with molasses, and a shingle flourishing in his hand, while he was shouting to another boy, about the size of a pepper-box, who stood nearly a quarter of a mile down the street—

"O, Bill! Bill! Bill! git as many boys as ever you can, and as many shingles as ever you can, and come up the stree, round the corner, as soon as ever you can; for there's a great big large hogsit of 'lasses busted on the pavement,—busted all to smash!" In a few minutes there was quite a gathering of the clans.

PIG IN THE BED.—A little girl had been entertained with stories about pigs one evening, and highly amused with an imitation from a facetious brother, of the manner in which they "grunt."

The following morning, she rose from her 'nest,' beside her father, and listening to his snoring with unfeigned astonishment. After a moment, she cried out:

"Mamma, mamma, do, dust tome 'ere! Pon my life, I tink dere's a pig in dis bed."

SYMPATHY.—Our little two-year old fell the other day, striking her head, and cried at the top of her voice. In the height of her grief she chanced to cast her eye out of the window to where a worn-out, spiritless horse stood with drooping head.—Instantly drying her tears, she stepped to the window, and in the most sympathizing tones said: "What's ee matter hossy?—bump oo head?"

LAST MOMENTS of GOVERNOR BROUGH.

A TOUCHING DEATH BED SCENE.

The late Governor Brough, of Ohio, was informed by Surgeon General Barr on Monday evening that his death was near. An eye-witness thus describes what followed:

"The Governor was greatly shocked at this announcement, and, looking General Barr in the face, desired him to repeat what he had said. General Barr again stated that he had not forty eight hours to live. The Governor then requested that all except his family and Gen. Barr should leave the room. After this had been done, he conversed calmly and rationally with his family for some time on private family affairs.

"Turning to General Barr, and apparently addressing his remarks more particularly to him, the Governor proceeded to speak of his religious views and hopes. He said, in substance, that he was no theologian, and had never made any profession of religion. But though he acknowledged he had been a great sinner in the sight of God, he stated that every act as though death lent supernatural keenness to them, exclaimed that he saw the Mediator standing on the right hand of the Father making intercession for his sins. He concluded with the emphatic declaration, several times repeated: 'I die happily and gloriously.' The scene was deeply affecting, and at the close of it, the Governor put his arms around the neck of General Barr, and with deep emotion thanked him for his care and attention, expressing perfect satisfaction with his medical treatment. He then took his farewell of his family. About midnight he relapsed into insensibility, which continued without intermission until his death."

WHAT FASHION DOES.

Red hair is fashionable in France, because the empress has a carrotty poll. But as the color of the hair cannot be assumed as easy as the color of a dress, the ladies of Paris go to a great deal of voluntary endurance for the sake of changing their natural black into a desirable red. An artist is employed who begins by separating every hair. Then he pours over the head a phial of 'water,' (probably a deadly poison.) He saturates each hair. This occupies two hours. After fifteen minutes he soaks the whole hair in ice-water. He then kneads the hair with his hands.—Again ice-water is applied. He moves the "gooses" within a few inches of the hair, and it turns red. The whole operation lasts five hours, and leaves the lady with red hair, an intolerable headache, mangled nerves, and $80 less in pocket.

A FRENCH PAPER relates that a boy 12 years old, named Durand, having climbed a tree to take a birds nest built in a hole of the trunk, had just inserted his hand to reach it, when the branch on which he stood broke, and being unable to withdraw his hand, he remained suspended by it. In this predicament, seeing no help near, he drew a pruning knife from his pocket, and cut off his hand at the wrist. Having fallen at the foot of the tree without further injury, he walked home, whence, after a first dressing had been applied, he was conveyed to the hospital at Grenoble.

THE wife of Peyton Langley of Fulto, Mo., dishonored him. He talked the matter over with her, when she agreed to let him kill her, if he would himself commit suicide. This strange and horrible arrangement was carried out—Langley shooting his wife through the heart while she laid in bed, then placing himself beside her, and blowing out his own brains.

SOME people place their ideas of happiness upon one thing, and some upon another. A lady made a call upon a friend who had lately been married. When her husband came home she said: "I have been to see Mrs. ——." "Well," said the husband, "I suppose she is very happy." "Happy? think she ought to be; she has a camel's hair shawl, two-thirds border."

DURING the war a woman went to a grocer's shop, and found she was paying nearly double for candles, so she asked what was the reason candles were so dear. The grocer replied.

"Oh, it is the war."

"Dear me!" said the woman, "have they got to fighting by candle light!"

A "big Indian" strayed away from his camp and got lost. Inquiring the way back was asked, Indian lost? "No, said he, distainfully, "Indian no lost; wigwam lost, striking his breast; 'Indian here.'

A Michigan soldier who was arrested for stealing a rebel's goose, said he found the bird hissing at the American flag, and he arrested it for treason.

A MAN should never be ashamed to own that he has been in the wrong, which is but saying in other words, that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday.

Middletown Academy,

AND

Boarding School for Males.

THIS well-known Institution of Learning, after undergoing thorough repairs, is now re-opened as a Day and Boarding School. A wing is also being added 20x40 feet, and two stories in height, to afford increased accommodations for boarders.

To take charge of the Educational and Domestic interests of the Academy, the Trustees have engaged a gentleman of superior attainments, a graduate of Amherst College and of Union Theological Seminary, who brings to this enterprise a varied experience as Instructor gained in six States, and extending over a period of fifteen years.

A thorough, systematic course of instruction has been marked out in both the English and Classical Departments. Lads will be qualified in the former, for usefulness in any of the walks of life; while in the latter young men will be fitted for College, or may finish here the entire studies of the Classical course of College.

Departments in Music, Drawing and Painting will soon be established, and efficient instructors be put in charge.

Renewed patronage is respectfully solicited, in view of the improvements made and the thoroughness of the instruction given, as no pains nor expense will be spared to place the Academy in the front rank of American Educational Institutions. Please send for a Circular Stating Studies, Terms, Expenses, &c.
