SHALL WE NOT KNOW THEM?

BY ALMIRA SEYMOUR.

Shall we not know them in that world of beauty,
The nearer presence of the perfect God;
Them who with us the paths of daily duty
In tender trust and loving waiting trod?
Their hearts were knit to ours by ties so tender:
Glance, voice and step, to memory how dear!
We gave a dearer self when called to render—
Shall we not know them as we knew them here?

Thus asks the heart in its o'er-mastering yearning;
Asks of the seed in earth, insect in air;
Then to the page of revelation turning,
Seeks for an answer traced by God's hand there.
"Peace, troublad soul!"—why vex thyself with questions,
Whose details here may not be understood?
Listen to Faith's unfaltering sweet suggestion:
Our Father is All-powerful and All-good.

He framed these forms so dear to mortal vision,
Garbs of the spirit for the tour of time—
He knit these ties that cannot know division;
The promise gave of endless life sublime!
Who has done this we know will still befriend us;
With Him unquestioning, our hope shall rest;
If faithful, still His love and care attend us,
And what He loves must finally be blest.

MY LITTLE WIFE AND I.

When first we joined together
In happy days of youth,
Two kinder hearts could never be
More full of love and truth;
As wild birds mate in spring-time,
Beneath the sunny sky,
So we joined our hands together,
My little wife and I.

With bright hopes for the future
We pass each sunny day,
Still devoted to each other,
And smiling like the May;
Inclosed in sweet home circle,
We let the world go by,
And live within our household ring,
My little wife wife and I.

Not for the wealth of India
Would we our pleasures give—
For the joys that spring from true love
Tend never to deceive;
With hands and hearts united,
On love we still rely,
And nought but death can ever part
My little wife and I.

ENERGY AND PERSEVERANCE.

A WORD TO BOYS.

A writer in an educational journal has the following pertinent and truthful remarks: Boys, listen! The first thing you want to learn, to develop what force there is in you, is self-reliance; that is, as regards your relations to man. If I were going to give a formula for developing the most forcible set of men, I should say: Turn them upon their own resources, with their minds well stored with moral and religious truth when they are boys, and teach them to "depend on self, and not on father." If a boy is thrown upon his own resources at fifteen, with the world all before him where to choose, and he fights the battle of life single-handed up to manhood, and don't develop more than an average share of executive ability, then there is no stuff in him worth talking about.—He may learn "to plough, and sow, and reap, and mow," but this can all be done with machines and horses, and a man wants to be something better than either of these. Wipe out of your vocabulary every such word as fail, give up wishing for improbable results, put your hand to the plough, or whatever tool you take to, and then drive on and never look back. Don't even sight your person to see if it is straight; "don't be consistent, but be simply true." If you go out "to see a reed shaken by the wind," it is pretty likely you will never see anything of more consequence.—Phrenological Journal.

THE GREAT MYSTERY.

The body is to die; so much is certain. What lies beyond? No one who passes the charmed boundary comes back to tell. The imagination visits the realms of shadows, sent out from the windows in the soul over life's restless waters, but it wins its way wearily back, with an olive leaf in its beak, as a token of emerging life beyond the closely bending horizon. The great sun comes and goes in the heaven, yet breathes no secret of ethereal wilderness; the crescent moon cleaves her mighty passage across the upper deep, but tosses overboard no message, and displays no signals. The sentinal stars challenge each other as they walk their nightly rounds, but we catch no syllable of their countersign which gives passage to the heavenly camp. Between this and the other life is a great gulf fixed, across which neither eye nor foot can travel. The gentle friend, whose eyes we close in their last sleep of long years, died with rapture in her wonder-stricken eyes, a smile of ineffable joy upon her lips, and hands folded over a triumphant heart, but her lips were past speech, and intimated nothing of the vision that enthralled her.

A BARBER in England, during the prevalence of the cholera, expressed his opinion to a customer on whom he was operating, "that, after all, the cholera went in the hair." "Then," was the answer, "you ought to be careful what brushes you use." "Oh, sir," replied the barber, laughing, "I didn't mean the 'air of the 'ed, but the hair of the hatmosphere."

NEARLY all brave men have been of finely organized and thereby of nervous temperaments. Julius Cæsar was nervous, so was Bonaparte, so was Nelson.—The Duke of Wellington saw a man turn pale as he marched up to a battery. Said he: "That man is a brave man; he knows his danger and faces it."

RECEIVING ATTENTION.

We find the following practical advice adrift in our exchanges:

"A young man admires a pretty girl, and must manifest it. He can't help it for the life of him. The young lady has a tender heart, reaching out liks vine tendrils for something to cling to. She sees the admiration; is flattered; begins to love; expects some tender avowal and perhaps gets so far as to decide that she will choose a white satin under thin gauze, ect., at the very moment the gallant that she loves is popping the question to another damsel ten miles off! Now the difficulty lies in not precisely understanding the difference between polite attentions and the tender manifestations of love. Admiring a beautiful girl, and wishing to make a wife of her, are not always the same thing; and therefore it is necessary that the damsel should be on the alert to discover to which class the attentions paid her by a handsome and fashionable young gentleman belong. First, then, if a young man greets you in a loud, free and hearty tone; if he knows precisely where to put his hat or hands; if he stares you straight in the eye, with his own wide open; if he tells you who made his coat; if he squeezes your hand; if he eats heartily in your presence; if, in short, he sneezes when you are singing, criticises your curls, or fails to be foolish in fifty ways every hour, then don't fall in love with him for the world! He only admires you, let him do or say what he will. On the other hand, if he be anxious to see that your tea is sufficiently sweetened, and your dear person well wrapped up when you go out into the cold; if he talks very low, and never looks you steadily in the eye; if his cheeks are red, and his nose only blushes, it is enough. If he romps with your sister, sighs like a pair of old bellows, looks solemn when you are addressed by another gentleman, and in fact, is the most still, awkward, stupid, yet anxious of all your male friends, you may go ahead, and make the poor fellow too happy for his skin to hold him! Young ladies! keep your hearts in a case of good leather, or some other tough substance, until the right one is found beyond doubt, after which you can go on, and love and court, and be married, and happy, without the least bit of trouble!"

FASHION CRITICISMS.

The Bath Courier gets off the following "licks:" We are about to say a few words which we beg our lady friends not to read. It is not intended for them at all. "Twenty years ago!" there's music in those words. Twenty years ago we saw sights that would look queer now.—Possibly it may have been an illusion, incident to tangled vision. Our good mothers and grandmothers used to fold together two corners of a bandana handkerchief, placing it on their hands, tie the other two corners under the chin. It made a warm, substantial covering for the head, at an expense of about eighteen pence. The same fashion prevails to-day—only there is a slight difference. We saw yesterday a little three-cornered "love of a something," that protected the lady's head neither from rain, heat nor cold. It was charming—only cost EIGHTEEN DOLLARS! A wad of somebody's else's hair depended from the rear by a small pike pole, with a bomb-shell on either end. Modesty remarked that she had named this modern bomb-proof a "waterfall!"

Two weeks ago on Sunday, we rode out of church on a splendid silk robe, drawn by a lady fully six feet distant.—We tried out best to avoid the necessity, but she insisted—it was all the style!—Mentally we replied, "where's the use of street cars."

Twenty years ago it was understood to be fashionable to wear short night-gowns from 10 p. m. to 6 a. m., or thereabouts. Transpose p. m. and a. m., leaving the figures where they are, and you get the fashionable remainder of to-day. "Loose sacks" are beautiful.

QUARRELLING.—If anything in the world will make a man feel badly, except pinching his fingers in the crack of a door, it is unquestionably, a quarrel. No man ever fails to think less of himself after it than before. It degrades him in the eyes of others, and, what is worse, blunts his sensibilities on the one hand, and increases the power of passionate irritability on the other. The truth is, the more peaceably and quietly we get on, the better for our neighbors. In nine cases out of ten, the better course is, if a man cheats you, quit dealing with him; if he is abusive, quit his company, and if he slanders you, take care to live so that nobody will believe him. No matter who he is, or how he misuses you, the wisest way is to let him alone; for there is nothing better than this cool, calm and quiet way of dealing with the wrongs we meet with.

A GOOD NAME.—Morris Ketchum, the father of the great defaulter in New York, is reported to have said to his creditors: "If I could have my son back, with his good name, and you were all paid in full, I would die content." Such is the last ambition of our great financiers. A lifetime of activity, an ample fortune its reward; and now all would be given for a son's good name. Young men—fast young men—think of this.

IN China, if a man is not married by twenty, he is drummed out of the town.

WHAT IT HAS COST THE SOUTH.

The Albany Journal is expatiating on the misery, losses, destruction and depopulation the South has brought upon itself by the rebellion. Its great source of wealth, the cotton culture, is crippled and nearly destroyed. Slavery is uprooted. The capital of its banks has been engulfed by investments in the rebel war debt.—The proud influence it used to exert in the politics of the Union has been blighted.—Its millionaires have become beggars. Its people are clothed, hundreds of thousands of them, in mourning; other hundreds of thousands in rags. They are smitten in their affections, mortified in their pride, and stung by a sense of their folly. We copy from the Journal the following estimate of losses in life and limb:

"The scars which the war has left are terrible. She is mutilated almost beyond recognition. The following is an estimate by the Raleigh (N. C.) Progress of the number of Southern men enlisted and killed or disabled during the rebellion:

States.	Enlistments.	Dead and Disabled.
Alabama.....	120,000	70,000
Arkansas, say.....	50,000	30,000
Florida.....	17,000	10,000
Georgia.....	131,000	76,000
Kentucky, say....	50,000	30,000
Louisiana, say...	60,000	34,000
Mississippi.....	78,000	45,000
Missouri, say.....	40,000	24,000
Maryland, say....	40,000	24,000
North Carolina...	140,000	85,000
South Carolina...	65,000	40,000
Tennessee, say...	60,000	34,000
Texas, say.....	93,000	53,000
Virginia, say....	180,000	105,000
Total.....	1,124,000	660,000

"What an appalling record! Six hundred and sixty thousand men dead and disabled. This is probably far below the truth. And all because of the unhallowed ambition of half a dozen reckless politicians!"

CHILDREN AND PARENTS.—Children and young people are frequently wanting in gratitude to their parents. They may, and generally do love them sincerely and devotedly, and may even be willing to sacrifice themselves for them; but it never occurs to them that they have anything for which to be grateful. It seems so much a matter of course that all good things should flow to them from their parents that they never give a thought to the source whence they are derived. They never imagine it could be otherwise, or that they might have been treated with less kindness or consideration. They give no heed to the numerous sacrifices those parents are continually making for them—to the constant self-denial to which they submit, that their children may be benefitted. It is not until the tie is broken, parental hand withdrawn—till death in absence has marked the change—that they discover how much they owed to those that are no more.

CURRENT REVENUE OF THE GOVERNMENT.—The current receipts of the Government from customs and internal revenue are unusually large. The income from internal revenue averages over two million dollars a day. The customs revenue, through the single port of New York, is this week up to a daily average of nearly $600,000 in coin; on Wednesday, it reached $735,500, or, on the basis of gold at 145, equal to $1,066,475 in currency. Evidently the national treasury cannot be very "hard pressed" for means to meet all current claims upon it.—N. Y. Times.

PROFESSOR DUNCAN, of Aberdeen, asked a lady to marry him, and was answered "No." The subject was dropped; but the pair soon met again. "Do you remember," said the lady, "a question you put to me when we last met?" The professor said that he remembered. "And do you remember my answer, Mr. Duncan?"—"Oh, yes," said the professor. "Well, Mr. Duncan," proceeded the lady, "I have been led, on consideration, to change my mind." "And so have I," dryly responded the professor. He maintained his bachelorship to the close.

SEEDLESS PEACHES.—To make peaches grow without stones, an agriculturist who has tried it with success says: "Turn the top of the tree down, cut off the ends, stick them into the ground, and fasten so with stakes. In a year or two these tops will take root, and when well rooted, cut the branches connecting these reversed and rooted branches with the tree proper, and this reversed peach tree will produce fine peaches without stones." The same experiment may be tried with plums, cherries and currants.

NOBLE SENTIMENTS.—Condemn no man, says John Wesley, for not thinking as you think. Let every one enjoy the full liberty of thinking for himself. Let every man use his own judgment, since every man must give an account of himself to God. Abhor every approach, in any kind of degree, to the spirit of persecution. If you cannot reason or persuade a man into the truth, never attempt to force him into it. If love will not compel him to come, leave him to God the judge of all.

A person asked Chapman if the tolling of a bell did not put him in mind of his latter end. He replied, "No, sir; but the rope puts me in mind of yours."

Middletown Academy,

AND

Boarding School for Males.

THIS well-known Institution of Learning, after undergoing thorough repairs, is now re-opened as a Day and Boarding School. A wing is also being added 20x40 feet, and two stories in height, to afford increased accommodations for boarders.

To take charge of the Educational and Domestic interests of the Academy, the Trustees have engaged a gentleman of superior attainments, a graduate of Amherst College and of Union Theological Seminary, who brings to this enterprise a varied experience as Instructor gained in six States, and extending over a period of fifteen years.

A thorough, systematic course of instruction has been marked out in both the English and Classical Departments. Lads will be qualified in the former, for usefulness in any of the walks of life; while in the latter young men will be fitted for College, or may finish here the entire studies of the Classical course of College.

Departments in Music, Drawing and Painting will soon be established, and efficient instructors be put in charge.

Renewed patronage is respectfully solicited, in view of the improvements made and the thoroughness of the instruction given, as no pains nor expense will be spared to place the Academy in the front rank of American Educational Institutions. Please send for a Circular stating Studies, Terms, Expenses, &c.
