Meeting of Women's Clubs.

The Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs held its 16th annual meeting in Baltimore last week at McCoy Hall, Johns Hopkins University. This federation comprises 78 Maryland clubs, with 10,512 women members. Mrs. Edward C. Wilson, president of the federation, presided and welcomed the members. The reports of officers showed a steady increase in the extension of club work and 9 additional clubs were enrolled. Reports were read from committees on art, civics, conservation, education, health, industrial and social conditions, legislation, traveling libraries press, and the work of the blind. A most interesting discussion was led by Mrs. Elith Ellicott Smith, president of the Rural Progress Association, of Pennsylvania. She urged strongly the necessity of Women's Clubs reaching out to the women on farms and arousing the interest of such remote women in all plans for school improvement and social betterment in villages and towns.

The report of the conservation committee made mention of the efforts that were being made to preserve the historical oak trees of St. Paul's Church, Kent county, which church was built in 1713. Mayor Preston discussed the subject of "Inadequate communication between the Eastern Shore and Baltimore." He suggested that an express boat to Rock Hall or Chestertown, and a double line trolley from either of these points to Salisbury could be established. He said that Baltimore and the State of Maryland had built splendid state roads but Eastern Shore residents traveled them to Philadelphia to sell products or buy goods. The Eastern Shore, said he, has always been close to Baltimore politically, and its personal and trade relations ought to be equally close. Therefore, State, city and counties should join in a movement to make them so. One of the pleasant social features of the meeting was the luncheon given at the Baltimore Country Club, of which 225 women partook.

The newly-elected president is Mrs. Francis Sanderson, of Roland Park. Mrs. W. W Hubbard, of Chestertown, was chosen second vice-president. Those who attended the meeting from Kent were Mrs. W. W. Hubbard, Mrs. Herbert E. Perkins and Mrs. Fred G. Usilton.

Court Adjourned Saturday.

The April term of court closed on Saturday at noon with the hearing of the case of Simon Evans, the colored porter at the Voshell House, against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for $5,000 damages for injuries received by falling into an open cellarway at the company's station some months ago. The entire morning session was consumed in the trial before a jury. A verdict was rendered for Simon, who is an industrious and honest man, for $500 H. W. Vickers appeared for the plaintiff and W. W. Beck for the company.

The damage suit against Mr. Stein, manager of the amusements at Tolchester, was settled in Baltimore upon the payment of $750 to the injured party.
