Bright Eyes At Sunset

Give me bright eyes at sunset,
And sunset o'er the scene;
With deeper shades and softer hues
Than in the day have been.
Give me bright eyes at sunset,
And music on the sea
Give me those fairy siren strains
Of nature's melody!
Give me bright eyes at sunset,
That in the waning light
They'll glow in dreams of beauty,
And speak a sweet goodnight!

FOOTBALL NOTES

Can Coach Kibler Develop Fast Team From Material At Hand—Other Notes Of The Gridiron

While the world's baseball series start next Monday for the championship of the world, with the eyes of the sporting world in general fixed upon them in wistful anticipation, the question that is foremost in local sportdom is, Can Coach Kibler make a winning aggregation from the material at the college? In answer to that question, let us state that Coach Kibler can produce a winner if it can be done.

Washington College has a hard schedule for this year, one that will require a fast team to play successfully. If we revert to the past, before the war took Washington's coach and athletes to the battlefields of France and elsewhere, we find Coach Kibler was confronted several times with similar difficulties, and, under his direction, no matter how dark the prospect, the athletic teams of the old institution gave a good account of themselves.

Coach Kibler has very few men to use as a nucleus around which to build a fast mcahine, but the aggressive athletic instructor has a way of bringing out men and getting everything possible from them and we believe that history will be repeated and the season will open with W. C. having a fast team on the field.

A casual scanning of the football schedules impresses one with the fact that we are to enjoy the biggest season the game has seen for many years. After two years of war-time, football will be renewed with vigor at all the schools and universities of the country. The Harvard-Yale, Yale-Princeton, Harvard-Princeton and the Army-Navy games will be played as usual this year, as follows: Harvard-Yale game, Nov. 22; Army-Navy contest, last Saturday in November; Harvard-Princeton game, Nov. 8; Princeton-Yale game, Nov. 15.

The first football game of the year at Washington College will be on Saturday, October 11, St. John's opening the season here. This will, no doubt, be an interesting contest.

Besley announces that orders are being received for stock from the the State Forest Nursey, and that there are numerous inquiries from all parts of the state regarding the high grade cost at bottom prices which the Board of Forestry has made available to residents.
