THE DUCAL WEDDING!

Miss Vanderbilt Married to the Duke of Marlborough—A Display of Magnificence —Crowds Cheer the Bride and Groom in the Streets.

The Duke of Marlborough and Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt were married at St. Thomas's Protestant Episcopal Church, Fifth avenue and Fifty-third street, New York, Wednesday of last week at12.30 o'clock.

As the hour for opening the church approached many of the guests who were waiting in the vicinity in their carriages drove up to the entrance on Fifty third street and Fifth avenue and alighting got in line in a good natured way. The crowd at this time began to swell and the police, in charge of four precinct commanders under orders from Inspector Kortwright, kept the spectators moving, none being permitted to loiter in front of the approaches to the edifice, and there was no unnecessary crush in the immediate vicinity of the entrances through which the bridal party or guests had to pass. The crowd around the Vanderbilt home on Seventy second street was not large, owing, probably, to the efforts of the police. Residents in the vicinity were out in force upon their steps and all the windows in the hotel facing the bride's home were occupied principally by women.

Assembling of the Guests.

When Governor Morton and his family arrived the crowd, having by that time assumed enormous proportions, cheered vociferously and the Governor bowed his thanks to the cheering multitude.

The Duke, accompanied by his best man, the Hon. Ivor Guest, drove to the church, and on alighting they were also accorded a warm reception. When the bride, who was accompanied by her father, arrived at the church the cheering was something tremendous, and the bride leaned heavily on her father's arm as he assisted her from the carriage.

Inside the Church.

The scene inside of the church is one which will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to have gained admission. The church, happily was not too much crowded and the arrangements were perfect. Women of wealth and social prominence vied with each other in the richness and grandeur of their equipage, lending to the occasion the brilliancy of an Old World court function. The guests, as they were admitted, were conducted to pews by Messrs. F. Brockholst Cutting, Richard T. Wilson, Jr., Reginald Ronalds, Herbert D. Robbins and Hamilton Wilkes Corey, who acted as ushers. At half-past ten Dr. Warren the organist, entered the choir stalls attired in cassock, surplice and crimson hood, and for over an hour performed a variable program on the organ, which included:

Last chord and Fugue, "Mount of Olives," Beethoven.
Offertotre in C.....Batista.
"Ave Maria".....Aroneit-Liszt.
Fanfare.....Lemmens.
"The Magic Flute".....Mozart.
Wedding Music.....Extemporaneous.
"March du Sacee".....Meyerbeer.

While the latter march was being played the surplice choir of sixty voices left the chapter room and entered the stalls, where they awaited the coming of the officiating clergy to the chancel proper.

Immediately the choirsters were seated the New York Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Walter Damrosch commenced playing Beethoven's Overture "Leonore" N. III, and performed a varied program until 11.45. The orchestra played Grunod's "Ave Maria" Wagner's introduction in third act "Lohengrin," Preisleid "Die Mistersinger" Wagner, and the Adagio from Tschoikowsky's "Sympathy."

Shortly before noon the orchestra, accompanied by the harp and organ, commenced playing the wedding march from "Lohengrin" and immediately afterward Mrs. Vanderbilt, accompanied by her two sons, William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Harold Vanderbilt, entered the church by the north door and was immediately escorted to the front pew on the right of the chancel. Simultaneously Sir Julian Pauncefote, representing the Duke's family, accompanied by members of the British embassy, were escorted to the front pew on the left.

The Ceremony.

Bishop Potter read the usual questions from the Episcopal marriage service, and the responses having been made, Bishop Littlejohn received the bride from her father, placed her hand in that of the groom, who placed the ring upon her finger, after which the bride and groom knelt and recited the Lord's Prayer. Rising, they were pronounced man and wife by Bishop Littlejohn.

The benediction was then pronounced and the bride leaning on the arm of the groom and followed by her mother, two brothers, Sir Julian Pauncefote and bridesmaids, entered the vestry, where the marriage register was signed and witnessed by Mrs. Vanderbilt, W. K. Vanderbilt, Sir Julian Pauncefote, Dr. Brown and Bishops Potter and Littlejohn.

Wedding Reception and Breakfast.

When the newly wedded couple left the sacred edifice to be driven to the bride's home the surging mass cheered again and again, and many thousands of people lined the walk from the church to the residence of the bride, on Seventy-second street.

At the breakfast table Sir Julian Pauncefote read the cablegrams sent on behalf of the Queen and Prince of Wales, congratulating the Duke and newly made Duchess upon the occasion of their wedding. When the Duke arose to respond to the toast of the bride and groom the bride slipped away to don her traveling gown, and shortly afterward the young couple left for Long Island City, and took a special train to Oakdale, where they will pass a brief honeymoon at William K. Vanderbilt's country residence, "Idle Hour." The travelling dress of the Duchess was a dark blue cloth and crimson velvet, crimson being conspicuous in the fur-bordered toque.

The trousseau proper was made in New York and in detail is the most elaborate and costly outfit ever selected for an American bride. The court train is five yards in length, falling in double box pleats from top to bottom. The court train is fastened to the shoulder below the neckband, and is bordered with a delicate embroidery of pearls and silver, representing rose leaves tied together with true-lover knots.

The bridesmaids were gowned in pure white satin with broad girdles and sashes of ciel blue satin and ribbons of the same color as that used in Mrs. Vanderbilt's costume. They wore hats of royal blue velvet, broadly trimmed with a full gathered bell-shaped crown, encircled with a ciel blue satin ribbon, finished on the right side with a chiffon rosette of the same calor. The left side of the hats were trimmed with six large pale blue ostrich tips and a white aigrette and the brims, which turned sharply up in the back were fastened with full bows of ceil blue satin ribbon.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's Costume.

The gown worn by Mrs. Vanderbilt at the wedding was also made by Donovan. It is of ciel blue satin of exquisite texture. The skirt is full gored, but long in the back, and severely plain save for a two-inch-wide border brown Russian sable, with which it is trimmed. The bodice is cut with a tight-fitting coat-seamed back, terminating in two full box-pleats, reaching to some six inches below the waist line, separating to show two narrow bands of sable.

The church was converted into a veritable conservatory of rare tropical foliage and vines.

Electricity and the Farmer.

Farmers in the lower part of this State, says the Morning News, say that electricity has done more to make the farmer poor than all the other modern discoveries. In speaking of electricity in this way they mean the current as applied to power. A well-known citizen of Sussex county talked in an entertaining way of this phase of the matter on Saturday. He is not a farmer, but most of his dealings has been between farmers and business men in the larger cities. Every one knows that the use of electricity for propelling street cars has caused a fall in the market for horses and animals are not worth much on that account, but this is not the only way in which the farmer has been injured. When the street car companies used horses to draw their cars the farmers had a good market in Philadelphia and other large cities for horses and hay and corn for their feed. One of the smallest lines in Philadelphia used 12000 bushels of corn a week for feeding its stalk in addition to the hay and straw used. Now this market is gone. The same company was compelled to keep 600 horses all the time, and as they were constantly giving out or getting injured there was also a fair market for horses. The worst phaze of the matter is that there has been no market yet found to take the place destroyed by the introduction of electricity as applied to street car lines.

It will go further and cover up better than any Combination on the market. We have been using these goods for 20 years and they have given entire satisfaction, and I think we ought to know a GOOD LEAD in that time, being the largest users of Lead and Oil in the county, we know what we are talking about, and we have used some of their Ready Mixed Paints, and think they are the best in the market. Gentlemen:—I have used Masury's Goods for the past ten years, and I believe Masury Coloring Matter to be the best manufactured. I have used John W. Masury & Son's Pure Combination White Lead to my own satisfaction and to the satisfation of the owners of the property on which I used it. It has stood on my work as good as Pure White Lead and Zinc. I haven't had one single job to crack, peel off, blister or chalk. I have do.e some jobs with Masury's Combination as far back as 1887 and a number all the way along to 1895. Respectfully yours,
Signed, W. J. SAPPINGTON.
