The World is What We Make It.

Oh! call not this a vale of tears,
A world of gloom and sorrow;
One-half the grief that o'er us comes
From self we often borrow.
The world is beautiful and good;
How long will man mistake it?
The folly is within ourselves,
The world is what we make it.

Did we but strive to make the best
Of troubles that befall us,
Instead of meeting cares half way,
They would not so appall us.
Earth has a spell for loving hearts;
Why should we seek to break it?
Let's scatter flowers instead of thorns—
The world is what we make it.

If truth and love and gentle words
We took the pains to nourish,
The seeds of discontent would die,
And peace and concord flourish.
Oh! has not each some kindly thought?
Then let's at once awake it;
Believing that, for good or ill,
The world is what we make it.

THE WORD "SELAH."

The translators of the Bible have left the Hebrew word Selah, which occurs so often in the psalms, as they found it, and of course the English reader often asks his minister or some learned friend what it means. And the minister or learned friend has most often been obliged to confess ignorance, because it is a matter in regard to which the most learned have by no means been of one mind. The Targums and most of the Jewish commentators give to the word the meaning of eternally, forever. Rabbi Kimchi regards it as a sign to elevate the voice. The authors of the Septuagint translation appear to have regarded it as a musical or rhythmical note. Herder regards it as indicating a change of tone; Matheson as a musical note, equivalent, perhaps, to the word repeat. According to Luther and others, it means silence! Gesenius explains it to mean: "Let the instruments play and the singers stop." Wocher regards it as equivalent to sursum corda—up my soul! Sommer, after examining all the seventy-four passages in which the word occurs, recognizes in every case "an actual appeal or summons to Jehovah." They are calls for aid and prayers to be heard, expressed either with entire directness, or if not in the imperative, "Hear, Jehovah!" or "Awake, Jehovah!" and the like, still earnest addresses to God that he would remember and hear, etc. The word itself he regards as indicating a blast of trumpets by the priests. Selah, itself, he thinks an abridged expression used for Higgaion Selah—Higgaion indicating the sound of stringed instruments, and Selah a vigorous blast of trumpets.—Bibliotheca Sacra.

Perseverance in Well Doing.

A busy, useful, holy life, and none other, is a life of well-doing; is a noble life, though passed in a cottage; is a happy one, though its path be rough and thorny. In a world where there is much to do, it allots little time for self-enjoyments and time for sinful ones. Filled up with the duties of home and business, with the paramount interests of eternity and of our souls, with good deeds done to others, and the claims they have on our help, its days, instead of walking on leaden feet, seem to fly on eagles' wings—the busiest life appearing all too idle, and the longest proving all too short for the work we have to do. Like a toil-worn laborer, weary in though not of his work, the Christian may sometimes wish it were concluded, and long for sunset that he might leave the field to go to his home—the desire of the Psalmist, "Oh that I had the wings of a dove, that I might fly away and be at rest!" Yet toiling and enduring, bearing others' burdens along with his own, living not for himself, regarding every day as lost which is not marked by some good got or done, and regarding himself as the steward of God's bounty—not a lord but a laborer in the vineyard—that man, though he may be weary in, will not be weary of well doing.—Sunday Magazine.

IT does us good to admire what is good and beautiful. But it does infinitely more good to love it. We grow like what we admire. But we become one with what we love.

A fellow that does'nt benefit the world by his life, does it by his death.

THE EMPTY CRADLE.

There is a whole volume of poetry in the following little sketch, taken from the last number of Miss Barbel's Weekly:

We met John on the stairs. He was carrying an old cradle to be stowed away among what he termed "plunder" in the lumber-room. One rocker was gone and the wicker works of the sides broken; it was an old willowy affair, but we could not refrain from casting a look into its empty depths.

"Gone!" we said dreamily, "all gone!" What golden heads were once pillowed here! heads on which the curls grew moist in slumber, and the cheeks and lips flushed to the hue of rose leaves. When sleep broke, the silken fringed lids opened heavily from the slumberous eyes; smiles flitted like sunbeams over the face; the white fist was thrust into the mouth, and when mamma lifted the muslin and peeped in to see if the baby was awake, what cooing and crowing were heard! The little feet began to kick, out of pure delight, and kicked on until both of the tiny red shoes were landed at the foot of the cradle.—Where are those heads now? Some that were embrowned by vigorous manhood, are sleeping on battle-fields; some are bleached with time and cares; and the feet have grown sore and weary on the rough paths of life.

Perhaps some little one, once tenderly rocked here, is sleeping in the coffin.—Over it grows heart's ease and vigorous box, and white candy-tuft and the starry jessamine. The blue bird flutters its bright wings through the willow boughs, and the cool summer wind whispers to the green leaves and grass blades on the grave.—What of? perhaps of its immortality. Sleep on little dreamless one! "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

"This do in Remembrance of Me."

Who could resist such an appeal? who disobey such a command? More than eighteen centuries have passed away since, in that upper chamber, in some house in the city of Jerusalem, the words which conveyed the request were spoken by that lowly sufferer to his broken-hearted followers; and is it too much to say, "that their sound is gone out into all lands, and their words unto the ends of the world?" From that night to the present hour, all classes of Christian believers have united in fulfiling the last request of their Redeemer. Century after century have passed away, the monuments of human greatness have moldered into dust, the laws inscribed upon tables of brass have perished, dynasties and empires have risen and fallen and are forgotten—and these few simple sentences—this short affecting memorial has outlived them all never even suspended; no single week, we might perhaps with truth assert, no single day, has ever yet passed by which did not witness some little assemblage of the followers of the Redeemer, "doing this in remembrance of Him;" and thus, as the Apostle says, "showing forth the Lord's death till he come."—Rev. Henry Blunt.

TRY AGAIN.—No matter what that business is, farmer, artisan, artist, professional man, or scholar, keep your hand to the work and you will succeed. Suppose you are a farmer, and you want to get rich faster, don't speculate how you can make an enormous sum at once, or wish you cou'd cheat somebody out of ten thousand dollars and then run away; or that some rich old fellow would "will" you a like amount, and then run away (to heaven) himself; but study the necessities of your craft, work with diligence and skill and then if you have any leisure time, sit, down and watch the ant rearing his pile, or the bee collecting his store, rather than berate the tardiness of "outrageous fortune."

Never let a failure of expectations break you down, and if at first you dont succeed, remember how many times Kepler tried before he got the theory of the heavenly bodies, and what was his ultimate success.

Young man, and young woman, you have the elements of a better character—perhaps a great character—within you; and if you make up your mind to develop that into its proper expression through the acts of your life, no common obstacles can possibly stand between you and success.

THE Louisville Journal cordially seconds the proposition for a National Union Convention. Referring to extreme partisans on both sides the Journal says:

It is our opinion that these men are divided now by no very essential differences, though some of them may consider themselves Republicans, and others Democrats; and though they may have voted, some for Lincoln and Johnson, at the last election, and some for McClellan and Pendleton. These men comprise, as we think, a very large majority of the voters of the Northern States. They are patriotic, honest and just men, and mean to do as nearly right as they know how. It is utterly puerile and disgusting to stigmatise these men either as Secessionists or Radicals. They are neither. They are Union men. They are loyalists. They are constitutionalists. They are honest and true, and wish to act as patriots should. There may be minor shades of difference between them, but we believe they are ready to yield mere technicalities, mere names, for harmony and a substantial and permanent accommodation of our troubles.

ORIGIN OF UNIFORMS.

AT the Restoration, when forces were established in England and Scotland, each country having its separate guards, line, and artillery, scarlet was the color almost uniformly adopted, save in one instance, when the King clothed in blue, faced with red, the Royal Regiment of English Horse Guards, which was embodied on the 26th August, 1661, under Aubrey, Earl of Oxford. These colors it still retains; but a corps of marines raised about the same time, oddly enough, wore yellow coats—the old Dutch uniform. On the 2d of April in the same year, 1661, the Scottish Life Guards rode through the city of Edinburgh "in gallant order," says Nicol, the Diarist, "their carbines upon their saddles, and swords drawn in their hands. It pleased his Majesty to clothe their trumpeters and the master of the kettle drum in very rich apparel." Colors were presented, and soon after the King gave to each gentleman a buff coat. In February, 1683, General Sir Thomas Dalzell obtained from the Privy Council at Edinburgh a license permitting the manufacturers at Newmills "to import 2536 ells of stone-gray cloth from England, for his dragoon regiment, the Scots Greys, which had been raised two years before—hence their costume, as well as their gray horses, may have led to their present well-known appellation. This gray cloth cost 5s. an ell."—United Service Gazette.

ANOTHER ANECDOTE OF GEN. SCOTT.—The New York correspondent of the Boston Journal relates the following:

"The term 'Fuss and Feathers' applied to the old chief grew out of nothing personal, for he was a man whose personal tastes were very simple. But he was very exact in his discipline, and he required every officer while on duty to be dressed according to his rank in the minutest thing. General Hamilton, who was on his staff, related to me the other day a very characteristic anecdote. The general's headquarters in Mexico comprised two rooms, one opening into the other. In the rear room General Scott slept. One night after the general had retired one of his staff wanted some water. It was in the front room. The evening was warm and the hour late, being near midnight. The officer started to go in his shirt sleeves.—He was cautioned against the experiment as a dangerous one, for if the general caught him in his quarters with his coat off he would punish him. The officer said he would risk, it; that the general was asleep and he would make no noise. He opened the door softly and went on tip-toe to the water pitcher. He had no time to drink before he heard the tinkle of the bell and the sentinel outside of the door entered. 'Take this man to the guard house,' was the brief order, and the coatless officer spent the night on a hard plank under guard."

SATURDAY IN SCOTLAND.—The Register General of Scotland, in a recent report, says that no Scotchman will begin any kind of work on Saturday if he can possibly avoid it, for he fears he will not live to finish it. Neither will he marry on Saturday, for fear the marriage may be unlucky, or one of the parties die before the year is ended. The last day of the year—except when it falls on Saturday—is the favorite wedding day in Scotland. In 1865 one twentieth of all the marriages celebrated in Scotland took place on the 31st of December, but had that day been Saturday, they would have been celebrated on the 30th.

EARLY MILKING.—Cows should be milked early in the morning, so that they can feed on the dewy grass. Two hours of such feed is worth as much as that of the rest of the day, towards getting a good flow of milk. So wake up boys, at father's rap, on the partition wall, and hurry to the yard with pail in hand, and have the cows in the pasture before anybody's else. Be sure and milk clean. A boy who will always milk clean will have a good recommendation of being faithful wherever he goes, and such recommendation always goes a great way among business men.

A LAWYER and a doctor were once discussing the antiquity of their respective professions, and each cited authority to prove his the most ancient. "Mine," said the disciple of Lycurgus, "commenced almost with the world's era; Cain slew Abel, and that was a criminal case in common."

"True," rejoined Esculapius, "but my profession is coeval with creation itself. Old mother Eve was made out of a rib taken from Adam's body, and that was a surgical operation." The lawyer dropped the green bag.

Ike bothered the respectable widow Partington the other day. "Granny," said he, "why is the Rinderpest like a mouse?" to which the venerable lady replied that she "sposed because it was a kind o' pest." Thereat the youth uttered a contemptuous snort, and then informed her that a mouse is like the Rinderpest because the catt'll get it.

A down-east editor said he was in a boat when the wind blew hard, but he was not at all alarmed, because he had his life insured,—"he never had anything happen to him by which he could make any money."

Teeth Extracted Without Pain!

NITROUS OXIDE.

I DESIRE to call the attention of those suffering from bad teeth, (as there is nothing more calculated to undermine the constitution than decayed teeth,) that the time has come, and now is, when they can have their teeth taken out without pain, and that in Chestertown. When I first introduced this powerful esthetic, I was called upon to vouch for its innocency, and the happy effect it was said to produce.—That I could not then do except upon the authority of other responsible parties. But, as I now have practical knowledge in its operation, it gives me great pleasure to say, I feel no hesitancy in vouching for it, surpassing as it does my expectation in its happy effect.
