FERRY HEADS MEET TO AVERT CONFLICT

Officials Of Three Concerns In Eastern Shore Business Confer With P. S. C.—New Proposals Outlined—M. D. & V. Would Carry Autos, Run To Queenstown And Establish New Line.

Representatives of the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway Company, Baltimore and Eastern Shore Ferry Company and Peninsula Ferry Company met Monday with the Public Service Commission in an effort to obviate the impending conflict in ferry services, with this result:

The Maryland, Delaware and Virginia interests agreed to withdraw the petitions now pending before the Utilities Board and to supplement the present Baltimore-Love Point service so that automobiles may be carried and so that Queenstown may be included in the route. Of the petitions to be withdrawn, one provides for the withdrawal of the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia's present Baltimore-Love Point service, and the other provides, contingent upon the granting of the first petition and upon the absence of competition, for the establishment of a Baltimore-Love Point-Queenstown service by a new corporation, the Baltimore and Chesapeake Ferry Company.

Better Service Hinted.

The M., D. & V. people Monday indicated the posibility of a more frequent service across the bay. Hopes are also indulged, although they have not been encouraged by the railway interests, that a faster steamer may be put on.

The railway representatives, it is said, withdrew their opposition to the proposed ferry service between Bay Shore and Queenstown. This is the service which, according to Clarence K. Bowie, a company comprising a merger of the Baltimore and Eastern Shore Ferry Company and the Peninsula Ferry Company seeks to establish.

The latter concern, one of the ferries subsidized by the State, has been in a receiver's hands. Recently a sale was effected to the Baltimore and Eastern Shore Company, or at least to its representatives. Thereupon Mr. Bowie, who is identified with that corporation, asked the Public Service Commission for permission to transfer the route of the Peninsula Ferry Company from Baltimore-Love Point-Queenstown to Bay Shore-Queenstown.

Seek To Retain Subsidy.

More recently still, Mr. Bowie asked a court order vacating the sale. How the resulting financial and legal problems will be worked out is not yet public knowledge, but it seems that an effort will be made to establish some service which will permit the $33,000 annual State subsidy of the Peninsula Company to be utilized.

Among those at the conference on Monday were William M. Maloy, chairman of the Commission; John N. Mackall, chairman of the State Roads Commission; Mr. Bowie, State Senator David G. McIntosh, Jr., who has been largely interested in the Peninsula Ferry Company; R. Harry Soulsby, general passenger agent of the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Railway Company, and Noel W. Smith, assistant to the general manager, Pennsylvania Railroad, of which the Maryland, Delaware and Virginia is a subsidiary.

At the meeting the possibility of dredging a channel across Swan Point Bar to shorten the distance from Bay Shore to Eastern Shore points was discussed.

Dr. H. R. Hopkins Dead At Hillsboro

Dr. Howard R. Hopkins, a widely known physician, died at his home in Hillsboro on Thursday, after a short illness of influenza, aged about 70 years. Dr. Hopkins was one of the best known physicians in Caroline county, where he had practiced his profession for the past thirteen years. Dr. Hopkins also was located in California for five years, where he followed his profession with success. He married Miss Mary Hackett, of Hillsboro, and they have two children—Howard Hopkins, of Yuma, Ariz., and Mrs. Owens, of Kansas City. Dr. Hopkins was connected with Hackett's Gape Cure and during the spring and summer season gave much of his time to the promotion of this celebrated remedy. Mrs. Elma Parrott and Mrs. R. A. Bowers, of near Still Pond, are his sisters.

GOV. RITCHIE'S FINE SPEECH

Editors Of Peninsula And State Meet In Wilmington—Big Dinner At du Pont Hotel — Meaning Of Government Explained.

The News man attended the meeting of editors at Wilmington Saturday. A feature of the banquet served at Hotel du Pont was a masterly address by Governor Ritchie.

The newly elected president of the Delmarvia Press Association, Colonel Theodore Townsend, presided at the luncheon. He first introduced Mayor Harvey who presented greetings from the city to the editors.

Governor Ritchie when introduced expressed his pleasure at again being present at the meeting of the editors and told them of the high esteem in which he held the members of the press. He said that no matter what the other business might be that when invited to attend one of their meetings, he always tried to sidetrack the other business so that he could meet with them.

The Governor was in a serious mood and discussed at length and most entertainingly the question of government and its relation to the people. He outlined some of the plans which Maryland has undertaken in the past two year, and said that the State was now ready to put these new plans into effect.

The Governor then referred feelingly to the human side of government. He said that it was the duty of corporations to make money. That was their object. But that with government it was not a money making project, but a humanizing method if the government was rightly administered.

It is the purpose of good government, he declared, to give every one an qual chancee in this country. That was what had made America so great and so attractive to tht people of other lands where other kinds of government existed. That when two youths started in life, they should be given the same opportunities through a suitable education to fit themselves for life. That oftentimes it was not the rich man's son, but the poor boy who had ambition who reached the highest goal, and that it was the duty of government to see to it, that the poor boy had such an opportunity. In this connection the Governor spoke of the public school system, how it had been reorganized in Maryland and what it meant to the citizens of his State.

Before closing, the Governor said that he always welcomed criticism. That when some editor criticized what he proposed, he usually stopped and considered whether he was doing right, because the editor and not he might be in the right. What pleased him much, was that when he was right, the editors usually supported the project, and there was none of the miserable meanness to be attributed to editors, through the fact that they might at times take views different to his own.

Naval Academy Mechanic Declares Tanlac Ended Troubles That Were Fast Pulling Him Down.

"I couldn'e say what's in Tanlac, but I have rid me of ailments that were pulling me down fast, and I am not going to fail to recommend a medicine that can do that," is the recent characteristic statement made by Frank Jewell, 18 Northwest St., Annapolis, Md. Mr. Jewell is blacksmith for the U. S. Navil Academy and a member of Elks' Lodge 622; of the J. O. U. A. M., and of the Government Employees' League. Telling of his troubles and his experience with Tanlac, he continued:

"Off and on for years I suffered from a general run-down condition, weakness, loss of appetite, sluggish liver and biliousness. I was constipated, too, and had to be always taking strong purgatives. I lost several pounds and my work kept getting harder, till I would go home nights feeling stiff all over.

"I am now on my third bottle of Tanlac, and I feel almost like a new man. I have taken the Tanlac Vegetable Pills too, and they have done their work in fine shape. I am going to keep on with the treatment, for I am convinced it is the very thing for anybody suffering like I did."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.—Adv.
