The meeting was called to order by President of the Fire Company, John A. Tobin and several took part in the discussion and when the meeting adjourned everyone went home happy and feeling that they are sure of having some fire protection and we trust, hope and pray that none of our sister towns will ever suffer the same fate as our town has done, by having a disastrous fire, so we are trying to protect you This fire-fighting apparatus is not bought for any community affair, but to aid and assist any farmer and all surrounding towns and we desire a public subscription from everyone everywhere. MARYLAND—A COLLABORATION

The following poem, a tribute to Maryland was composed by Miss Adele France, of Kent county, Md., and read by Miss Ida Belle Willson, of Pocomoke City, Md., at a banquet given by Maryland and Delaware to the Graduate Club of Teacher's College, New York City.

Now Maryland, my Maryland, won't figure long on size
But when it comes to quality, she'll stretch clear to the skies,
Maybe you don't believe it, Well listen we'll relate
The wonders and the glories of our big, little State.
The Chesapeake divides us in two unequal parts,
Divides our land, we'll grant you, but can't divide our hearts.
We join in one grand chorus, Eastern and Western Shore
Maryland, my Maryland, we love you more and more.
Our governor, for looks, has all the others skinned a mile
In matters educational our chief Cook, sets the style,
He's strong for teachers standards, and teachers salaries too,
He plans his laws and makes them, and then he puts them thru.
Our quaint old city Baltimore has a charming quality
Unmatched, the N. Y. Times says, so we of course agree
That county too, you know it, Baltimore by name,
Supervision, course of study have spread abroad its fame.
Below old Fort McHenry our national flag was born
Our national flag at Frederick upon the world did dawn,
And from our very body we severed out a part
To be our nations capitol, its own big throbbing heart.
There's much to see in Maryland:—we'll let you choose at will,
We've mountains, rolling lands and plains, rivers, ocean, bay and rill.
Historic spots we boast too, and great ones gone before
Poets, artists, "signers," jurors, or, we have them a llgalore.
But when it comes to eats—O Boy—now listen well and mark our spread.
Our Maryland hospitality always gives more than you need,
Oysters, crabs and diamond backs in Maryland make their home,
Fried chicken and beat biscuit makes us thither want to roam.
We've everything in Maryland, that elsewhere you can get,
Even, so Dame Rumor says, something that is wet!
Oh, Maryland, my Maryland, we love you more and more,
We'll make your praises echo from shore to shinning shore.
