IN MEMORIAM.

In sad and loving memory of my dear father. George M. Jones. who passed away February 22. 1923.
Nobody knows my longing
But few have seen me weep,
I shed my tears with an aching heart
While others are sound asleep.
I often sit and think of you
When I am all alone,
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own,
A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet that memory still,
But death has left a vacant chair
That no one in this world can fill.
Daughter, Florence.

A Kent Boy In The South.

Memphis, Tenn., May 1.—The Turner-Farber-Love Co., of Memphis and Leland, Miss., has completed arrangements for the purchase of the famous Lamb-Fish properties at Charleston, Miss., from Frank May and C. M. Kellog who bid in the property several weeks ago at a receivers sale.

The property consists of the famous Lamb-Fish hardwood mill, said to be the largest in the world, 18,000 acres of virgin timberland in Tallahatchie and Quitman counties, 3,000,000 feet of hardwood on sticks, 12 miles of logging railroad with seven locomotives and complete rail equipment, three skidders, three log loaders, three batteries of dry kilns, the Lafisco Hotel at Charleston, commissary, golf course and 54 homes for workers.

Franklin T. Turner, dominant head of the big concern, began his business career on September 10, 1902, as office boy for Russe and Burgess. At 38 he is accredited one of the leading hardwood men of the world. Young Turner persuaded his employers to vary his duties until he had mastered every detail of the lumber business. His rise was steady and he soon assumed a commanding position. Mr. Turner is from Kent county.

In 1914 he went to Leland as general manager of the Darnell-Love Lumber Co. At the death of the late R. J. Darnell, Mr. Turner was made general manager of the hardwood operations of R. J. Darnell, Inc., at Batesville. In 1917 Mr. Turner and other department heads purchased the Darnell interest in the Darnell-Love operation at Leland. One year later he and his associates organized the Leland Stave and Lumber Co., at Leland to manufacture staves from the small timber on the company's holdings. It, like the parent concern, was eminently successful.

Officers of the concern are: F. T. Turner, president; G. A. Faber, London, vice-president in charge of European sales; H. D. Love, vice-president in charge of Memphis mills; R. W. Ricketts, vice-president in charge of Charleston mills; F. G. Woods, vice-president in charge of export sales; C. E. Robbs, vice-president in charge of Leland mills; E. C. Gause, vice-president in charge of Tchula mill; C. W. Parham, treasurer and sales manager; G. W. Harris, secretary; H. Pohannsen, assistant secretary, and W. F. Little, manager of the cooperage department. A remarkable feature of the organization is that but three of the executives are more than 40 years of age. All of them got their early lumber training with one of the concerns which now forms a part of the Turner-Faber-Love Co.

ROCK HALL FISHERMEN PROTEST TREATMENT

Unless the Federal Government quickly relaxes stake fishing restrictions in the upper Chesapeake Bay, Rock Hall, with its 800 or more inhabitants and a surrounding community of more than 2,000 fishermen, will be a thing of the past, according to many fishermen of the Fishermen's Protective Association.

This association, which is headed by Herman Jacobs and Capt. Charles R. Kerr, is preparing a petition to present Secretary of War Weeks, which will ask for unrestricted use of the fishing grounds to a point 17 miles south of Pooles Isand, with allowance made only for navigation.

Under the Federal law stake nets can be placed in only 20 feet of water, although for the past 10 years the law has been disregarded and the men have been staking their nets in a 25-foot depth. But the ultimatum has been received from the Government. Next spring the law will be enforced.

This will cripple business and stagnate life in the community, for every thing there depends on the fish season, according to Captain Kerr, who has been connected with the industry for more than 50 years.

At their meeting Tuesday night Harrison W. Vickers, Jr., Conservation Commission of Maryland, delivered an address in which he pledged the services of his department in aiding the men to get their case before the War Department. Army engineers already have inspected the fishing grounds and have shown the fishermen the location of the 20-foot line and also the location of a 25-foot line, which has been used for many years.

These lines are unsatisfactory to the men, who say that there is no money in the business unless they can put their stakes where the fish run. Large numbers of shad, perch, herring and trout are caught in the bay, and the men with the stake nets have been catching their share of them in the years past with the lax enforcement of the Federal law, but its tightening will deprive them of everything, they say.

Equipment worth thousands of dollars will be lost, homes which they own will be worthless to them and to anyone else, because the supporting factor of the community will have disappeared. That is their argument, the basis on which they make their appeal to the Secretary of War.

The general feeling throughout Rock Hall is that their arguments will receive respectful attention, and that if the men stand together a remedy for the existing situation will be found. If the Government persists in enforcing the law, however, they will have to move from Kent county to better fishing grounds, where the stake net laws are not so strict. This they are loathe to do, for many of them have been in the Rock Hall community for years; here they have reared their children and invested their money. It is a prosperous community and a hard-working one, but its dependence for support falls on the fishing industry alone.

Frank Shahan, of near Crumpton, is not only one of the best marksmen in this section, but has been quite successful this season in catching shad. He has sold over a thousand shad caught in his nets in Chester river near Crumpton.

One of the most exciting games of ball played here this season was on Thursday between the College team and Capt. Floyd Brown's Quantico team. The College won after twelve innings by score of 8 to 9. Gordy was in the box for the College.

H. N. Lockwood and wife, of Psadena, Cal., and Capt. Lockwood, of Fort Hoyle, Md., have been guests the past week of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Ingersoll, near Chestertown.

"Peg o' My Heart" will be given at Lyceum next Friday and Saturday evenings as a benefit to the Triangle Club of Christ M. P. Church.

Headquarters For Young Shad

The President of the Conservation Commission, Harrison W. Vickers, has sent to the Upper Chester River known as the Rock Reach by name and Shad Reach by nature, George W. Parks, a gentleman that is experienced in the Fish Culture business and has had fine success, considering the cold, late spring season, in the propagation of shad, which in a few years if not propagated, will soon be extinct from our waters. He presented to the News office Saturday a jar of fine species of young shad, four days old. Mr. Parks has hatched and liberated in the Chester River to date, which is only a part of the shad season over, over one and a half million of young shad. In the future there will be a great benefit to both the fishermen of Chester River and the public in general. May the good work go on.
