SOLDIERS AND SAILORS' CONSERVATIVE UNION CONVENTION.

The Soldiers and Sailors' Convention, held in response to a call from those favorable to the policy of President Johnson and the action of the Philadelphia Convention of August the 14th, met at Cleveland, Ohio, on Monday last. A pavilion of 150 feet in length by sixty in breadth had been erected in the Park for the use of the Convention, and at three o'clock the delegates entered, preceded by a band of music, and were seated; after which the crowd from the outside were admitted, and soon filled the tent to its utmost capacity.

By previous arrangement, Governor Bramlette nominated Major General John E. Wool, as the oldest Major General in the United States, and probably in the world, as temporary president. General Wool, on taking the chair, was received with loud cheers. He addressed the convention as follows:

Gentlemen: A grateful heart thanks you for your cheering welcome. A more flattering and agreeable position could not have been assigned to me than the one just conferred as presiding officer, although but temporarily, over this assemblage of patriots and heroes—the true defenders of their country and the Union. Be assured it will ever be remembered and appreciated as the most precious incident of a long military career.

The object of this great military convention, if I understand it correctly, is to consider the principles enunciated by the National Union Convention at Philadelphia, and the restoration policy of President Johnson. Of these subjects I would simply remark that the sooner Congress recognizes the States, declared by a majority of its members to be out of the Union, as constituent parts of the Union, and admit their loyal representatives to seats in the halls of Congress, and permit them to participate in the national legislation of the country, the sooner will be allayed the fears and apprehensions of the people of the dangers which again menace the peace of the country and of the perpetuity of the Union with the most bitter and vindictive feelings.

A war of words for thirty years was carried on between the Northern radical abolitionists and the slaveholders of the Southern States. Everything was done and said to promote and keep alive the controversy. It finally culminated in a rebellion in the spring of 1861, which for atrocity, the sacrifice of life, the expenditure of untold millions of money, the loss of property, followed by pestilence and famine and desolation, has no parallel in the history of nations.

A few days after the surrender of Lee and his army, President Lincoln was assassinated. The atrocious crime, greatly mourned by the nation, placed Vice President Johnson in the presidential chair. His elevation was hailed by acclamation throughout the land, and this, too, because of his love and devotion to his country, and his boldness while Senator of the U. S. in advocating the preservation of the Union in opposition to every other Southern Senator.

Few men, North or South, were subjected to greater sacrifices on account of patriotism than Andrew Johnson, and although plundered of his property and driven from his home, he returned again, and by his indomitable energy and perseverance, with other patriots of his State, reclaimed Tennessee from treason and rebellion. This bold and daring friend of the Union can be no traitor, but, strange as it may appear, he is denounced as a traitor and threatened by the radical members of the republican party with impeachment.

It may be asked with propriety, what has President Johnson done that he should be denounced as a traitor and threatened with impeachment? It is for anything more than for the exercise of the most noble and generous efforts to conciliate and bring back into the folds of the Union a brave people, and make the United States what they should be—a united and great people.

It ought not to be forgotten that the cause—slavery—which engendered the rebellion, has been removed. Three or four millions of slaves have been declared free by an amendment to the constitution. Those of the Southern States interested in the abolition of slavery, which deprived them of a large amount of what they called property, and which they had considered all important to their interest and welfare, quietly submitted to the amendment.

Those who prepared the amendment omitted to guard against what would follow. When too late, it was discovered that the freeing of four millions of slaves would increase the Southern representatives in Congress from twenty-five to thirty representatives. This was to be overcome, lest the abolition radicals should lose their control of the government by an act of Congress, or by another amendment of the constitution.

The General then proceeded at considerable length to denounce the action of the radical majority in Congress, and to show the unhappy consequences which, in his opinion, would result therefrom. He concluded with an urgent appeal to the assembly to stand by the Union, which, in a war of four years, when blood flowed in torrents, their gallantry and indomitable perseverance and courage had saved from ruin and destruction.

The speech was greeted with applause throughout, and long continued cheering at the close, and those passages declaring that "Mr. Johnson can be no traitor"—that "the brave are always generous," and that "as the President says we have had war enough," were cheered with particular enthusiasm.

Major Gen. Gordon Granger was chosen permanent President, and delivered a short but very appropriate address. He appealed to those who had shared with him the dangers of many hotly contested battles still to aid in preserving the Constitution of our country in all its integrity.

Resolutions were adopted endorsing the Platform of the National Union Convention held in Philadelphia on the 14th of August; that their object in taking up arms to suppress the late rebellion was to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution, and to preserve the Union with all its dignity and equality and the rights of the several States unimpaired, and not in any spirit of oppression, or for any purpose of conquest and subjugation; and that whenever there shall be any armed resistance to the lawfully constituted authorities of our National Union, either in the South or in the North, or in the East or in the West, emulating the self-sacrificing spirit of our Revolutionary forefathers, that we will again pledge to its support our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

The Address or declaration of principles is lengthy, and reviews fully the present aspect of political affairs, and opposes the constitutional amendment as being effective only of a prolonged exclusion of the Southern States from the Union. It calls upon the soldiers and sailors of the late war to unite together in their efforts to restore the Union.

THE RETURN OF THE PRESIDENT.

President Johnson returned to Washington on Saturday last from his visit to Chicago, after an absence of nearly three weeks. In commenting upon his tour, the Baltimore Sun remarks:

"As is the case generally on the passage of the President of the United States through the country for any formal purpose, the people came forth to honor Mr. Johnson at every point. On such occasions, even in ordinary times, the people expect and demand to hear something of the President's views. More especially, then, in periods like the present, when the public mind is exercised by the pendency of great and important issues of State, vital to the perpetuation of our representative system, would this be the case. This Mr. Johnson fully understood, as did all others, before he set out on his recent journey. Recognizing and sympathizing with the popular sentiment and the practice on this subject, he was fully prepared to yield to the demands made upon him. As a man of the people he was ready to respond to their calls, and as an earnest and patriotic man he was sure to be frank, candid and fearless in his utterances. His great constituency will appreciate these things, whatever exceptions may be taken by the hypocritical, or by dissenters as to his views. Everywhere the people have honored themselves by honoring their Chief Magistrate. The disorderly manifestations which here and there developed, as at Cleveland, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh, in offensive interruptions to the President in his speeches, are not to be taken, even in these times of high partizan rancour, as a type of the manner and spirit of the American people. We are assured, indeed, by those who accompanied the President throughout his tour, that the parties to them were so inconsiderable in numbers in each instance as to show them to be an exceptional portion of their respective communities. Such proceedings, however, were none the less disgraceful, and cannot but damage the fame of every city which tolerated them. It is a noticeable fact that these intolerant acts took place only in quarters which claim particular merit as the champions of free speech and the highest liberty."

General Grant's Position in Relation to Political Contests.

The Chicago Republican, in a letter from its reporter while traveling with the Presidential party, makes the following interesting statements in connection with General Grant's refusal to present himself to the soldiers who attempted to call him out at Cincinnati in advance of the President's arrival:

The fact is, that General Grant knows, as has been patent to every one during the whole of this trip, that continued efforts have been made to embitter, if possible, his relations with the President by exciting the jealousy of the latter, or by making invidious distinctions between them, and he is determined that no act of his shall lend any encouragement to any such contemptible proceedings on the one hand, or those that have been made with like persistency to identify him with the political views of the President on the other. General Grant feels that, next to the President, he is the head of the army of the United States, not the leader of a political party. He does not consider the army a place for a politician, and therefore will not permit himself to be committed to the support of either of the present political parties, nor that the army shall be made a party machine.

GEN. GRANT'S ENDORSEMENT.

I have submitted the above to the General, who entirely approves of what I have written, and says that it fully and exactly expresses his views. I will, however, state that as originally written the concluding sentence was in these words: "When he becomes a partisan he intends immediately to resign his present position," and to this the General objected, saying that it might be taken to imply that at some future time he did intend to become a partisan, whereas his only intention in using those words was to express, as an officer of the army, his disapprobation of any attempt to identify him with any political party whatever.

ACCIDENT.—The steamer "Champion" burst her boiler on Friday last, and was much damaged. No lives were lost. The damage is estimated at $10,000.

I desire to collect all the taxes in my District before the first of January next, so that I may be prepared to pay promptly all levies when demanded. It cannot be expected that I should wait with tax-payers until the first of January, as at that time all levies upon me are due.

For the convenience of tax-payers, I will be (until further notice,) at CHESTERVILLE every Saturday, from 9 o'clock, A. M., to 12 M., and in MILLINGTON on the same days, from 1 to 6, P. M.; at home and GALENA the balance of the week.

Improved Phosphate of Lime, prepared by Wilson, Eggleston & Co., Cincinnati. This Phosphate is carefully prepared from the best fertilizing material, and from the nature of its composition must be one of the best articles offered for sale.

We would respectfully ask all who use Phosphate to call and examine this article before purchasing elsewhere.

SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO.

200 LBS. SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO contains 70 lbs. animal matter, yielding 7 to 8 lbs. ammonia.

Also 80 to 90 lbs. earthy bone Phosphate of Lime, 30 lbs. of which are soluble Phosphate.

It combines all the advantages of the best brands of Super Phosphate, with those of Peruvian Guano.

By reason of its greater concentration, we recommend 20 per ct. less by weight to be used per acre, than of any fertilizer costing the same per ton; and no more per acre than of those selling at 20 per ct. more per ton. Hence its economy.

This Guano weighs 65 lbs. per bushel, hence in applying it farmers must be governed by weight and not by bulk, for it is much lighter than the Super Phosphates. Every cargo duly inspected.

"FLOUR OF BONE."

WE will give a money guarantee of the purity of this article. It is pure unsteamed, unburnt bone, reduced to the fineness of flour, which adds 100 per cent. to its value. It is as quick and active, as acid dissolved bone, hence its value is vastly greater, because it contains neither acid nor water, which necessarily add weight, and reduce the quantity of valuable elements. We recommend 250 lbs. to be used in place of 300 lbs. Super Phosphate or dissolved bone.
