Washington-Lebanon Football Game On Thanksgiving Day.

For many years there has been a demand for a football game of some consequence on the Maryland-Delaware Peninsula on Thanksgiving Day. As a result of the many requests for such a game, the Washington College officials have arranged for such a contest to be played in Chestertown, Md., that day. After much deliberation they decided upon Lebanon Valley College as a suitable opponent for Washington College. Washington meets Lebanon Valley in baseball and basketball and football every year. At the two former contests, Washington holds its own pretty well, and usually somewhat better, but in football Lebanon is always the victor. They have a powerful team, which will probably defeat Washington by a close margin. However, the game will be worth going miles to see and will afford football fans the opportunity for which they have been asking.

"Lye Water," Eastern Shore Booze, Sure Death Dealer

Promiscuous use of contraband liquor may result in a tragic trail of blindness and death.

It is filled with plain concentrated lye, such as is used with caution by the average housewife in kitchen cleaning. Physicians assert that individuals who may be seeking a certain exit into the unknown world may find sure passage if they are unfortunate enough to imbibe corn liquor in which a sufficient quantity of lye has been either carelessly or deliberately placed.

Well-known Baltimore chemists are responsible for the statement that lye is being freely used in the manufacture of Eastern Shore corn liquor, after an analysis of several samples submitted for their inspection.

They declared that, as winter approaches, vast amounts of corn liquor are made with concentrated lye. The lye is applied to the mash in its early stages to hasten fermentation, and the particular brand of liquor is now so well known that it is referred to as "lye water."

In a statement one chemist stated that practically all corn liquor offered for sale contained at least a certain percentage of fusel oil, a dangerous poison. Sometimes this product alone causes death, according to the chemist, while in other cases it produces injury to the brain, bringing on paresis and other ailments. He points out, however, that concentrated lye is even more dangerous, in that it may cause practically instant death or blindness to the victim.

Discovery by Baltimore chemists that the Eastern Shore is being flooded with home-distilled corn liquor filled with lye water was the startling announcement made this week, coupled with th ebelief that as the winter season progressed more and more poison would be used in the manufacture of booze to superinduce more active fermentation during the cold weather.

The Receiver Off the Hook

When a telephone user fails to replace the receiver on the hook a serious interruption to the service results. In such cases incoming calls cannot be completed, and the operator is compelled to report the line "out of order."

On party lines, if the receiver is not replaced at any one of the stations, not only is that telephone affected, but none of the other telephones on the line can either make or receive calls. Thus an entire line is put out of service, until the receiver of one telephone is replaced.

Sometimes the receiver is accidentally permitted to rest upon a book, or some object which prevents the hook from coming all the way down. When this occurs it produces the same effect as if the receiver were not replaced.

In cases of this sort a repair man must be sent to inspect the telephone. Some little time must therefore elapse before the receiver is replaced, and during this interval calls of great importance may be lost to the subscriber.
