THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

After due acknowledgments to the Almighty for abating pestilence, and reference to the fact that the animosities engendered by the war are rapidly yielding to the beneficent influences of our free institutions, the President proceeds to the discussion of the great issue of the admission of all the States to equal representation, which he has heretofore pressed so fully and forcibly upon Congress. In this regard the message takes no position different from that which Mr. Johnson maintained from the commencement of his administration. Now, as one year ago, he regards that crowning act as the only remaining necessity for restoring the nation to the condition of prosperity which the war disturbed. He shows that the theory of the territorial condition of the Southern States has been repudiated by every department of the government; by Congress apportioning direct taxes among all the States, by continuing the representation of some of the States during the war, by apportioning the representation of the several States and the establishment of judicial circuits throughout the nation; that the judiciary, in the proceedings of the Supreme, Circuit and District Courts, have equally recognized the integrity of the States, while the course of the Executive has been uniform. He warns Congress against all those efforts to restore the unity of the government which are not within the limits of constitutional power, as tending to consolidation and despotism, and as no longer justified by any military necessity. The injunctions of Washington's farewell that the constitution which at any time exists is sacredly obligatory upon all until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, and that changes by usurpation are the customary weapon by which governments are destroyed, the like admonitions of Jefferson, and the emphatic language of Jackson that the Union is not to be preserved by an invasion of the rights and powers of the States, that instead of strengthening they weaken the general government, which ought to be felt in its beneficence, not in its power, in its protection, not in its control, are urged with great force in aid of the convictions to which he adheres, and which he thinks every consideration of national policy and prosperity conspire to urge upon the acceptance of Congress. Singularly temperate and respectful in the expression of his opinions and forcible in the arguments and illustrations with which he supports them, the President leaves Congress no excuse for factious hostility. He is content to discharge his duty, to lay before them as the Constitution requires his opinions of policy and right, and to leave with them the responsibility which belongs to them.—Should any factious opposition to the Executive impede the legislation of the country, it will be gratuitous so far as provocation is sought in the annual message.

To the disappointment of many who have been speculating upon his course, the President makes no new recommendation or even hint of other changes in the organic law. There is not a word upon the questions of qualified or universal suffrage, change of the judicial tenure of office, &c. Disposing of the constitutional question, the message passes quietly to the detail of department administration, noticing first the prosperous condition of the finances, the auspicious reduction of the public debt, the super-abundance of the national resources, and that after all proper reductions of the excise and import duties the revenues will be ample, and as the country advances in population and wealth, still further reductions in taxation may be made, and yet the entire national debt be extinguished within twenty five years. The operations of the War Department have no other interest than the gratifying proof that the American citizen is restored as easily and swiftly to the pursuits of peace as he is summoned and equipped for war without impairing the national safety or its military efficiency. But there is a sad record of 126,722 pensions, requiring an annual outlay of thirty-three millions of dollars. Passing over the results of the operations of the Postoffice and Interior Departments, the message makes some timely suggestions of the necessity for greater prudence in granting lands to railroad corporations for purposes of internal improvement, pointing out the necessity for government to retain the title and to allow no sales of the domain in lands except step by step with the completion of the parts of the roads. That great work the Pacific railroad, will probably be completed within the time stipulated.

Next in importance to that is the obligation upon the government, in the interests of commerce and agriculture, to remove the obstructions to the navigation of the Mississippi, and to repair the levees of that river, which have been destroyed during the war.

The recommendations with regard to the District of Columbia contemplate the election of a delegate to Congress to protect the interests of that people, to which they are entitled upon every consideration which justifies the like privilege to any of the organized territories.

In respect to our foreign policy, the message relieves the apprehension felt in regard to active intervention in Mexico by showing that the mission of Mr. Campbell, aided by General Sherman, was designed as precautionary, rather than aggressive, in anticipation of the early evacuation of that country by the French troops, and that the departure of Napoleon from the terms of his arrangement to remove his troops, one-third in November, one-third in March, and the remainder in November, 1867, has not met the acquiescence of the United States. An amicable solution of the difficulty and a just concession to the expectations of the government is anticipated, from the remonstrances which our minister has been instructed to lay before the Emperor.

The pending differences with Great Britain in regard to the injuries committed upon the commerce of the country by vessels equipped within her territory remains an open question, but one which the new ministry has addressed itself to in that friendly spirit which gives hope of satisfactory solution and such harmonizing of the neutrality laws of the two counties as shall remove all impediments to continued harmony. The difficulties of the Fenian invasion have embarrassed and postponed these questions. They have called for the enforcement of our neutrality laws on the one hand, while on the other considerations of humanity have induced the government to exert its good offices to mitigate the severity of the punishment of those who have incurred the sentence of the law.

Should Congress accept the invitation with which the message closes, to co-operate in obliterating past differences and restoring the blessed reign of peace throughout our borders, the clouds which remain will give place to the sunshine of universal prosperity.

NOTICE.
To all Whom it may Concern.

I DESIRE TAX-PAYERS to understand that Taxes are due on the first day of July, and not, as many seem to think, on the first of January. I also desire to collect all the taxes in my District before the first of January next, so that I may be prepared to pay promptly all levies when demanded. It cannot be expected that I should wait with tax-payers until the first of January, as at that time all levies upon me are due.

This notice is deemed sufficient to show the necessity of prompt payment, and parties need not flatter themselves with long indulgence, as I am determined to collect the taxes within a reasonable time, and will resort to the law in every case where it may be necessary.

I can be found at the Court House, Chestertown, every day.
