Wm. Reed's 11-year-old child took a small dose of strychnine Sunday by mistake but remedies were quickly applied and he was able to go to school on Monday.

We predict that the lecture to be delivered in Salem M. E. Church on the evening of Dec. 11 by Rev. Jonathan S. Willis will be a rich treat and largely attended. He is an eloquent speaker.

Rev. John M. Arters is conducting revival services at Union, Worton, with good success.

Supt. Noland has gotten moved into his new home at Tolchester and is enjoying its comforts superbly.

Mr. and Mrs. Jere Miller had a grand family reunion on Thursday and a big dinner. Master Edgar Rice, their son, who is attending the Tome Institute, was at home for the event.

Miss Hattie E. Lewis, of the same school, was also at home for Thanksgiving and speaks highly of the school.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. W. Skirven visited Rev. Mr. Hepbron and wife in Virginia last week.

Mr. Morris, of Tome Institute, spent several days this week with his sister, Mrs. John M. Arters.

Rock Hall Locals.

Hurrah for Messrs. Barroll and Constable, and little Spencer Smith. The news of the victory was highly appreciated by everybody in this section. May it be the making of a noble career for the boy, is the wish of all.

Our Odd Fellow fraternity are making preparations for a big time next Wednesday evening in connection with their Supper. An effort is on foot to establish a Subordinate Encampment of the Order at this place. The Grand Patriarch and the Grand Scribe, will be here.

Messrs. Editors, your third editorial on page 4 of last week's issue in reference to oyster legislation, hits the nail square on the head, drives it home and clinches it. Some of our oystermen say if the oyster law must be tinkered with, let the cull law read 3 inches, where it now reads 2½ inches regarding the prohibited size of oysters. Also, have a larger license fee for patent tongs, or confine them to certain depths of water. But the ruling desire is, let the oyster law alone, and strictly enforce it, and the oysters will take care of themselves, bearing unforeseen calamity.

Capt. Frank Satterfield paid his respects to Huntingfield Harbor a few days ago, and while he failed to find a larger percentage of illegally culled oysters than the law allows, yet some found it more convenient to sail away from home to dispose of their cargoes, while others put off until next morning to haul up along side of the buy boat. This only confirms the fact that an Inspector constantly on the spot is a necessity. On Huntingfield bar, which is quite a large one, there was a very plenteous spread of young growth, but alas! the past two or three weeks they have disappeared. Sanded? No, covered in mud? No, but gobbled up and sent to the City, where they have made the shuckers swear loud and long.

The present week's bluster has kept the watermen on shore for the most part, consequently, porkers, many of them have been butchered, and salted down for the larder's use.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Coburn, who have been touring Harford and Cecil counties, returned to their cozy home in North R. H., on Friday of last week. They express very high appreciations of the many pleasurable incidents of their trip, Havre de Grace, Port Deposit and many other interesting points were taken in.

The "Schley Fete" conducted by Miss Dean, for the benefit of her school, took place on Monday evening. Notwithstanding the blustery weather, quite a large assembly of the patrons and friends of the school, and the charming teacher, were present. The affair was quite a success, and Miss Dean is deserving of much praise for her energetic efforts in behalf of the school.

Mr. James Harrison's new dwelling in Allan's Lane, is about completed and soon he and his young wife will realize the beauty of a home all their own.

Mr. J. R. Ryan, Jr., is erecting a new fence and otherwise improving his property in South R. H.

Presiding Elder Corkran preached an interesting sermon before a large audience in the M. E. Church on Sunday night. He announced the appointment of Rev. J. W. Talley to R. H. charge for the remainder of the conference year and will occupy the pulpit here tomorrow morning. The reverened gentlemen will find a membership all afire with spiritual zeal, who greet him enthusiastically.

A WONDERFUL incident in submarine navigation is noted. During the great storms of the past week, while the terrific winds swept the waters and wrecked many boats, a submarine vessel lay at the bottom of the bay in perfect quiet and comfort! For fifteen hours the experimental crew enjoyed the quiet feasting, smoking, etc., and only used the fresh air taken down with the vessel. They knew nothing of the storm raging upon the surface of the bay! The novelty may be imagined when the boat finally rose to the surface and Capt. Cable poked his head out of the hatch and took a survey of the upper world! It is said the successful experiment indicates many possibilities in future naval warfare.

MISS BOB WHITE.—Although Willard Spenser has written three successful operas and composed the musical scores as well, it is his latest work, "Miss Bob White" which will cause his name to reverberate through the avenues of fame. "The Little Tycoon" was a success; in "The Princess Ronnie" he showed progress, but in "Miss Bob White," the author-composer has demonstrated his ability. Messrs. Nixon and Zimmerman have fairly lavished money on the scenic and costume environment of "Miss Bob White" and it stands to-day as one of the most elaborate productions ever offered on the American stage. The engagement takes place next week at the Academy, Baltimore.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.
