HELEN ADAIR AT PALM BEACH

Milady's Easter Gown—The Influence Of Palm Beach Fashions Upon The Spring Costumes.

Now that the fashionable set at Palm Beach have culled from all the advanced Spring models of Paris, London and New York the prettiest and best (a faculty to do so being the World-wide concession to the American woman's taste in dress) the fashions for the coming season are practically settled and the Easter gown and hat can be selected with entire confidence that she who is influenced by the choice of the Palm Beach visitor, will be correctly costumed and may assure herself that she is not risking the outer appearance of her sister who chooses one of the many "models" that grow in a day and vanish without having really been.

That the coming season is to be a silk season is an established fact. Silk always has been and always will be the Queen of Fabrics, but unfortunately in the past the vogue has been intermittent, owing to a great extent, undoubtedly, to the weighting and loading that gave the gown short shrift and made the word "taffeta" synonomous with splitting and tearing.

But today, with honest silk upon the market, made of the finest of raw silk, lustrous and supple to touch, and carrying its guarantee upon the selvage, as does the exquisite Abis Messaline Taffeta now so deservedly popular, no woman need fear to choose silk for her Easter gown. It should be made by one experienced in tailor-mades and fitted over a correct model of corset. With a properly fitting corset, the abdomen is kept down and the hips reduced in size, thus attaining the fashionable figure. Of the many corsets that aim at this important result the C-B a la Spirite certainly accomplishes it, and with entire comfort.

Abis Taffeta was the selection of one of Gotham's most fashionable young matrons for the exceptionally stunning coast costume shown on the left in my illustration. O an exquisite shade of bluet worn with a white Milan turban of Hummel model, stunningly trimmed in velvet ribbon two shades darker than the gown, the costume expressed perfection in style.

Of all things let the woman who wishes to look her best on Easter Sunday, look to it that her hat is a harmonious part of a harmonious whole.

Fortunately the enormous sky-scraping structure, overloaded with trimming that would rob the most perfectly gowned woman of all distinction, is a thing of the past, but next to it among the hats to shun is the so-called "picture hat."

Hummel tailored hats seem each year to be more and more appreciated, and are worn with gowns of sever cut, as well as the more elaborate frocks for formal occasions.

The Curious Banyan Tree.

Botanists long ago voted the banyan tree of India a place in the catalogue of wonderful vegetable production. In its infancy it resembles other trees in having a single stem or trunk and a dense head of foliage. As the tree increases in size, however, the branches spread out horizontally to such a wondrous extent that they would be unable to support themselves had not nature come to the rescue with a remarkable provision. To supply the necessary support the branches of the parent stem throw out here and there small fibrous shoots, which immediately begin growing downward toward the earth. In a surprisingly short time they reach the ground and take root and gradually increase in size until they sometimes rival the original trunk itself.

This new trunk, with its numerous fibrous roots, renews the whole life of the tree. Other new limbs and shoots are rapidly thrown out until finally what was originally a single tree trunk becomes a considerable forest, each limb and shoot of which are curiously connected.
