FAIRFIELD FED FOWLS FEEL FINE

PRACTICAL ADDRESS.

Delivered by Mr. John P. Ahern, President of the Kent County School Board, Before the Graduating Class of Chestertown High School.

The Commercial or Business School of the present time is presumed to be the outgrowth of the efforts of Mr. R. M. Bartlett of Cincinnati, Ohio, who about 1846, began to give pupils private instructions in commercial subjects.

Today there is hardly a county seat that has not its High School Commercial Course, and in addition, there are many private schools exclusively devoted to teaching business methods and ethics.

All this demonstrates that the great business world is demanding and seeking trained young men and women for responsible positions, and the demand on our High Schools and Commercial Schools increasing year by year.

This Commencement is the important period when the student life, as it were, leaves the theories of school to take up the combination of the theories and practical questions of life. Everyone who has the ambition to do something or be something must at this time have serious communion with self, and the result of this self communion may mean the success or failure of the individual.

So many leave school with the thought that the serious part of their education is ended, when as a matter of fact, it has just begun, and the longer we live the stronger is this impressed upon us.

Some think that when they secure a situation, it simply means to remain on duty so many hours at so much an hour. The person who begins life with this idea, unless it is soon changed, is beginning a failure.

No one can succeed in any vocation or walk of life unless he gives the best that is in him to the services he is rendering. Half hearted or indifferent service never wins success or promotion. And you may be sure that your employer is observant and sees and appreciates your services for their full value. No one can watch the clock and his duties at the same time, so it is well to keep your eyes on your work until the proper time to notice the clock.

In rendering your duty we must never forget the old saying, "Honesty is the best policy." This not only applies to financial matters, but to giving full value in honest service for what we receive. Never let us get the idea that we are indispensible in any position. Our places are filled as efficiently by others as we pass to other spheres of life.

Don't ever help your employer in anything dishonest or questionable in any business transaction. No honest employer would want a dishonest employe, and no dishonest employer would have one. He would know that any one who would do a questionable act for him, would do the same against him were the incentive greater.

We must learn to be punctual and keep all our promises and appointments. We must learn that seven o'clock means seven o'clock and not any time after as so many seem to think. We must meet our obligations of a financial kind promptly. I do not think that there is one single thing in business life more detrimental to a person's business standing than failure to meet obligations promptly.

Don't get in the habit of criticising your employer to friends who may drop in. His business methods may seem a little old fogyish to you, but remember in the majority of cases he has built up the business and made it a success, while your theories are as yet unproven.

Do not discuss outside of those who are entitled to receive them the business secrets of the office. I mean by this, the legitimate transactions of any business are matters that concern only the ones between whom they are contracted. That private business matters are not subject for public discussion. If a man owes us he does not wish it advertised, and vice versa, if we owe him. Financial and other business institutions keep in strict confidence all transactions between themselves and customers.

Be thorough in everything you do. Don't in any event be superficial. Don't be always answering, I think, I am not sure, I believe. An employer does not call often on this kind of person for information. It is your duty to know your work and do it.

In your business letters and conversation be courteous, concise and brief. The world is too busy to listen to or read fifty words where ten will answer the purpose.

Don't try to maintain a $100 appearance on a $15.00 salary. You can't do it. Live within your income. There never was a defalcation by an employe who lived within his income. You will be happier by paying for what you buy and keeping out of debt. Don't be ashamed if some little minds calls you mean because you will not live beyond your income. Be firm. Don't be swerved from a conscious duty by adverse criticism. The man who gets through life without criticism must be a nonenity beyond your income. Be firm. Don't be swerved from a conscious duty by adverse criticism. The man who gets through life without criticism must be a nonenity who amounts to so little that no one thinks it worth while to notice him.

You will never notice the clubs under a barren fruit tree. They are always under the fruit-bearing tree.

If you want a life as perfect as it can be made, live right and do your whole duty. Always giving full measure. I am optimistic enough to believe that the world is growing better, not only as a result of our church system as a whole, but also as a result of the moral and intellectual training of our public and private schools. To think otherwise would be to classify their teachings as failures.

As you pass out in the busy scenes of life, may we not ask that your influence will always be to make the world continue to grow better, that your lives may be an honor to yourselves, your home and country.

LAD IS DRAGGED TO DEATH BY BIG FISH

Rockport, Mass., June 19.—Emilio Maki, a 6-year old boy, was dragged overboard by a large fish he had hooked off Noble's Point and drowned. The boy slipped away from his home with his fishing gear and crawled out over the rocks and cast his line. No one witnessed just what happened when the big fish bit, but his mother, missing the little boy, started a search.

The little fellow was found dead in the water at the base of the rocks. The fish line was entangled around his hand, and tugging at the other end was a huge "old England" hake.
