INTERPRETING LAWS.

Opinions of Attorney General Straus on Legislature Acts.

Attorney General Isaac Lobe Straus Tuesday gave opinions in several cases.

He decided that bank deposits as indorsed by bank books are assessable and taxable under the new assessment law for the counties.

In another opinion he says:

Replying to your recent inquiry, whether under Section 3 of chapter 255 of the acts of 1910 the term "fish-pot" includes an eel-pot, I beg to advise you that, in my judgment, it does not, and that, accordingly, eel-pots are not prohibited by the section in question. Of course, you understand that I am not authorized to furnish you with an official opinion upon this subject, but in view of what you write respecting the public and general importance of the question you present to all the tidewater counties of the state, I deem it a matter of public moment to make known my official view on the subject.
