A LONG DROUGHT

Pasture Fields Bare For Need of Rain—All Vegetation Dying—Wells Low—Suffering In Some Places.

The long drought existing in Kent county has assumed a seriousness that is really lamentable. Mr. George S. Biddle, of Quaker Neck, says rain of any consequence has not fallen on his place since June 29th and that his pasture fields are as barren as a desert. His corn will not yield sufficient to feed a big family, much less serve his stock, and if it was not for the marsh grass he would have no pasture. This is but one instance of the loss by drought and there are many similar ones.

At Golt's Station the school pump has about gone dry and water has to be carried some distance. In Millington and Rock Hall many wells are so low as to cause alarm and prayers are being offered for rain.

But Kent county is blessed compared to other places where the schools are closed and water is served families only for one hour during the day.

That Chestertown has been unusually fortunate during the summer is something to be truly thankful. Even at the fire the artesian well seemed to take on new life and be inexhaustable. Since then its flow has been abundant, enough to supply the town and to run the sprinkler.

Dryest Summer Has Passed.

The dryest summer on record has passed into history. Back in the days before there was much of an attempt to keep weather statistics there may have been a dryer spell than that which this year has almost dried up the water supply in the cities and and towns of Maryland, but since 1871, the year in which the Weather Bureau was established, the total rainfall for the astronomical summer which began on June 21 and ended Sept. 22 is the lowest. Records show that just 4.59 inches fell during that period. The nearest approach to this dry spell was last year, when only 5.70 inches fell during the summer.

The total of 4.59 inches for this summer, however, is misleading. On the first day of September there was a local downpour that lasted only 40 minutes, during which 1.53 inches fell. While certain sections were flooded, the dust was not even laid in other sections. Deducting this cloudburst that did good to neither crops nor the water supply systems and a real total rainfall for the summer is had of only 3.06 inches.

Another noted dry summer besides this and last year was in 1893, when a total rainfall of 6 39 inches was had. The heaviest rainfall for any summer on record was in 1905, when there was a total of 21.33 inches.

In the matter of temperature, the summer was slightly above normal. Strange to say, the hottest day of summer was had in the last days of summer, a temperature of 96 being registered on September 6. The hottest day in August was on the 3rd, when 90 degrees was had. In July 95 degrees were registered on the 10th, and in June, 95 degrees on the 23rd.
