Pleasant Enjoyments.

At the Pharmacists Convention at Betterton

One afternoon and evening were given up to pleasure and contests of a social nature, and at night a most enjoyable banquet was held at the Hotel Rigbie at which the ladies were present. Informal speeches were made by quite a number of the gentlemen. Early one morning Mr. D. B McMenamin representing The Pepsimint Chemical Company, of Chestertown, took a number of delegates and ladies for a drive over the beautiful hedgelined roads to Still Pond, a prosperous village about three miles away. They were graciously entertained by Mr. G. W. Covington, the village druggist, and others. Old Kent never looked better and never appeared so prosperous. The golden seas of grain, the methodical rows of corn, with luxuriant orchards all around make many beautiful pictures. Those there seemed greatly pleased with Betterton, its surroundings and the hospitality of the county's citizens.

The following is a full list of those who have attended the meeting and taken part in the business and social session:

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Henry, Charles Schmidt, Henry F. Baker, A. R. L. Dohme, M. A. Toulson. Henry Howard, C. S. Smith, Charles Morgan, H. A. R. Dunning and A. B. Ellis.

Mrs. A. H. Stam and Mrs. Lottie Roberts

Misses Mabel and Hallie Toulson, Anna Stam, Janie Cooper, Lillie Hancock, Anna Leary, Natalie Hynson, Clara Dohme and J. T. Torsch.

Messrs. J. F. Hancock, Charles Caspari, Jr., W. F. Russell, Louis Schulze, Owen C. Smith, W. C. Carsons, J. F. Leary, James P. Hook, W. M. Fouch, Mercer Brown, D. B. McMenamin, Daniel Base, J. William Strobel, H. Lionel Meredith, W. E. Brown, H. W. Allen, J. E. Hancock, H. P. Hynson, George A. Sohl, A. C. Meyer, J. E. Hengst, F. L. McCarteny, J. E. Bond and J. J. Bennett.

SAVING TIME.

The man who makes two blades of grass grow where there had been but one is proverbially a public benefactor. Similarly, perhaps, the man or the agency that adds to the ease of life or the facility of its active operations deserves recognition. Such, in effect, is the accomplishment of the Pennsylvania Railroad in its new service to and from the West, and the fact that it is a corporation, seeking primarily to increase its revenues, need not detract from the acknowledgement.

To most persons, perhaps, the sensational reduction of the New York-Chicago running time to eighteen hours appeals in much the same way as a record-breaking automobile trip—an interesting and somewhat exciting achievement. But it is much more. It brings the commercial centre of the Middle West three or four hours nearer to Philadelphia and New York; and this saving of precious time is multiplied infinitely through its effect upon business activities and intercommunication.

Once more, and conclusively, the Pennsylvania Railroad has proved its title to the term "standard"—a title won in the most intense competition for supremacy in equipment and operation. Some of the policies of the management in the past have proved mistaken; but no one can question that in physical results, such as improved construction and progressive schedules, the Pennsylvania sets the pace for all its rivals.—Editorial in Philadelphia North American, June 14.

Harcourt and Tennyson.

One of the stories told of the late Sir William Vernon Harcourt relates to a gibe at Tennyson. The poet was one day reading him the lyrics for "The Princess," and when in "Tears, Idle Tears," he came to the line, "The earliest pipe of half awakened birds," Harcourt looked up and said, "Ah, I suppose that would be a pipe before breakfast!" Tennyson is said to have received the jest a little grimly.

Molecules.

"What are you studying now?" asked Mrs. Cumrox.

"We have taken up the subject of molecules," answered her son.

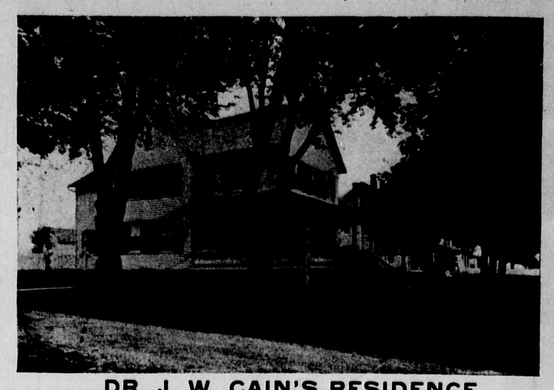

"I hope you will be very attentive and practice constantly. I tried to get your father to wear one, but he couldn't make it stay in his eye."—Washington Star.
