s of free-born souls. This is but a tary case, but such outrages must be in limine. It is not a question for independent people to decide how y times they have been insulted—y will not decide indignities by the es of arithmetic—one insult on the or of the nation calls for redress as ch as five thousand would do. Let e-y American be told that when on the hty deep he does not require, that he uld disdain to accept, any other pro-ion than that afforded by the flag of country.—[Baltimore Amer.

NDIA.—A letter from a respectable chant at St. Helena, dated 16th of rch, to a house in New York, says—e have just received intelligence from dras, by the English ship Mellish, that Burmese war is at an end, and that y have been compelled to pay to the tish 12,500,000 pounds sterling, with assignment of five provinces."

Dreadful sufferings—The papers bro't the late arrivals from Liverpool, con-the particulars of the wreck of the Frances Mary, Capt. Kendall, while her passage from St. Johns, N. B. to erpool, and of the trials and sufferings er crew, during the 21 days they re-ned on the wreck, entirely exposed he winds and the waves, and in a state he most absolute want. She was re-ed by the frigate Blonde, capt. Lord ron, who just snatched the survivors n the very jaws of death. The fol-ing extracts will give our readers e idea of the situation of these hap-people when they were discovered the frigate—

"Two hours did not elapse from the oping the first sea, till the whole of crew and passengers, in all 16 souls, re compelled to get up in the main, with only a few pounds of biscuit, ere they remained five days; with the ainder of their scanty stock of bread, y kept themselves in existence for 5 s more, when, horrible to relate, the vings of nature, scarcely supplied in one way for the space of ten days, pelled them to live on the corpses of ir deceased fellow-sufferers and drink ir blood!—and thus for the space of days they subsisted in this horrible nner.—When they were picked up, ir number was reduced to six—J. Ken-l, master, and his wife; J. Clark, mate; Wilson; a seaman named McIntire, l a young woman, a passenger, named n Saunders. They were in the most plorable condition when taken onboard Blonde, some of them being scarcely e to move, and all being reduced to re skeletons. It is impossible to con-ve, much less to describe the intensi-of suffering these unfortunate indivi-ls must have gone through—the to-want of food and water, which last y were without from the commence-nt of their disaster; all those that di-had fallen victims to an unquencha-thirst and raving madness, produced m drinking salt water, which they ld not resist indulging in."

We have not room for more particu-s, but we will give one incident which curred on board, in the language of e of the sufferers, an eye witness.—e young woman before spoken of, was gaged to be married, and her betroth-husband was one of the victims—can reader help shuddering, when he ds that she who was to be the partner poor Frier's bosom, his helpmate—ould, by an intensity of suffering, be nsformed into a cannibal, and drink blood:—

"When she, [Ann Saunders] heard James Frier's death, she shrieked a d yell, then snatching a cup from arke, cut her late intended husband's oat and drank his blood—insisting t she had the greatest right to it.—scuffle ensued, and the heroine got better of her adversary, and then al-ved him to drink one cup to her two. What a picture of human misery and etchedness.—Woodbury Herald.

A writer in the National Banner, a per published at Nashville, after no-ing several new works which have cently appeared in the western states, rns his attention to two volumes of iscellany, from the Tennessee press, one Clark, and another by Dorris, and as ecimens of the poetry of the authors, s selected the following:—

"I'll try to write in poet's art,
o write the life of Bonaparte,
bout his kindred to indite,
nd on the fate of France to write.
Corsican by birth was he,

The Washington papers state that Mr. KING, in consequence of his ill health, has determined to resign his mission to England, and to ask leave to return to the United States. It is added that his request has been acceded to, and that he is expected to take his departure from England during the next month.

Extract of a letter to the editor of the Democratic Press, dated Washington City, May 4.

"It is rumoured here that Mr. BROWN, our Minister at Paris, will succeed Mr. King, at London, and that Mr. Gallatin will be tendered the embassy to France."

William B. Giles, the veteran politician, is elected from Amelia county to the next Legislature of Virginia. The whole number of votes taken was but 252—of which Mr. G. received 186.

Mexican Adventure.—We learn from the New York Advocate that Mr. William B. Jaques, of that city, who has, for a number of years, had the agency of some of the most important mail and stage coach lines to and from N: York, is on the point of sailing for Vera Cruz, with an equipment of horses, coaches, and servants, to establish a regular & prompt mail communication between the city of Mexico and Vera Cruz.

The New York Advocate states that Mr. John Randolph is daily expected in that city. He has engaged a passage in the ship York for Liverpool.

The bankrupt bill has been postponed until the next session.

The Cadets at West Point have engaged Messrs. W. and J. Frazee, to build for them, on that elevated situation, a monument to the memory of the gallant and patriotic, but unfortunate Koskiusco—It is estimated at 4000 dollars. This does honor to the Cadets, and to the school where such generous and liberal feelings are cultivated.

From the Baltimore American.

The following is a copy of a letter received by the Mayor from our able and industrious representative in the Senate, General Samuel Smith. We understand that the amount which the city will receive by the passage of this bill, will be between forty and fifty thousand dollars and that the same will be immediately applied by the Mayor and Presidents of the City Council to the extinguishment of so much of the city debt. Much praise is due to the gentlemen who have had the matter in charge, for the zeal with which the duty has been performed.

"SENATE CHAMBER, May 3d.

Dear Sir—I have the pleasure to inform you that the Senate have unanimously passed the bill to authorize the payment of the interest due to the city of Baltimore. It will be read a third time to-morrow, and be sent to the house where I presume it will pass."

The Petersburg Republican makes the following remarks upon the election of General Taylor, of Norfolk, to the Virginia Legislature. The paper is opposed to the administration.

"Gen. Ro. B. Taylor has been elected a member of the Virginia Legislature, from the county of Norfolk. He was brought forward for the express purpose of opposing Mr. Giles, whose election, from Amelia County appears not to be doubted. Although it was announced in the Norfolk papers on the morning of the election that the General would not consent to be considered as either pledged to, or in opposition to, any set of men or measures, the fact cannot be concealed, that he goes into the assembly as an administration man; that his splendid talents will be enlisted on the side of the powers that be; and that he is to be the Ajax of the opposition in the Virginia Legislature."

United States Ship Cyane.—A letter from Bahia of March 3d says:—"The U. S. ship Cyane, capt. Elliott, is here, and has been run foul of by a Brazilian slave schr. took away some of the C's light spars, and killed one man—The man was bearing off, from the ship's mainyard, and by some means got under the schooner's mainyard, and a black man cut the foot rope, when he fell on deck, fractured his skull, and broke one of his arms. The C. took possession of the same schr. and detained her 3 days—the captain and mate absconded. The President of the Province has made capt. Elliott ample satisfaction, and the vessel had sailed on her voyage,"

Sketch of Characters.—The editor of the National Banner, published at Tennessee, has given a sketch of several distinguished persons in Europe. He says Sir Walter Scott, in appearance, is a large grey-headed old man, with a blind eye, a lame leg and an unmeaning physiognomy. The Duke of Wellington is a tall, war-worn looking man, with a sunburnt complexion, and a large Roman nose. The Marquis of Anglesea, who lost a leg at Waterloo, is a most interesting looking man, with a handsome face and commanding figure. Thomas Moore, the poet, is a squat, funny looking, short sighted little man. William Roscoe, a poet, orator, historian, and botanist, is a tall, thin old man, and a good deal stooped in the shoulders. Miss Edgeworth is a very ugly little woman, whose squeaking voice is the annoyance of every company she honors with her presence. Edward Irving, the Caledonian preacher, is tall and thin, squints excessively, wears his hair and beard long, which are very black. Mr. Brougham is thin and dark complexioned. His features are disturbed incessantly by a paralytic motion which crosses his face and draws up his nose. He goes through the city very meanly dressed, passing from Court to Court with his bag of briefs in his hand, with a quick and careless step.

ELOPEMENT EXTRAORDINARY.

Portsmouth, Ohio, April 18.—We have to record the most unnatural transaction that ever came to our knowledge. It is the elopement of a husband from his wife and seven children; and of a wife from her husband, her child of two years old, and from her infant at the breast.—The affair took place in Alexandria, opposite this town, one night last week.—It appears that on the night of the elopement, the husband of the absconding wife retired to bed with her and his children, and that as soon as she found him secured by sleep, she arose and dressed herself, took all her clothing, and immediately joining her seducer, they took to their boat which was in readiness, and went down the river. What is most remarkable relative to this transaction, the woman has heretofore borne a good character, is of respectable family, was affectionate to her husband, kind to her children, and in general esteemed by her acquaintances. Among the numerous acts of human depravity, which have been recorded in newspapers, we do not recollect ever before to have seen an instance of a mother deserting her infant. The name of the wretch whose artful villany has thus deprived a fond husband of the companion of his bosom, and helpless children of a mother's care—nay involved a simple woman in misery and wo, deserves that public indignation should forever rest upon it. It is JOHN SCANTLING.—Western Times.

From the New York American, May 1.

Murder.—A man by the name of Gilbert was arrested yesterday, and brought before the police magistrate, charged with the murder of Maria Gilbert his wife.—He offered to make confession to the officer; but his examination was defered until to-day. A number of witnesses came forward and gave their testimony, the substance of which is as follows. Several weeks since the deceased came to the boarding house of Mrs. Wall, in Water street, near Catherine street; the account she gave of herself was that she had run away from her husband; who was a painter, and lived in Troy. She had remained a considerable time with Mrs. Wall, when her husband arrived, and came to see her, which he repeated frequently, never however, without a violent quarrel between them. It would appear that he was urging her to return to Troy, and that she refused to comply with his request. Within a few days their differences had become more serious. Yesterday he come to Mrs. W's when several persons were there: his wife was sitting upon the lap of another man, when he looked into the door and said, "Maria come here."—She went into the passage to him: no words or altercations were heard: but a piercing scream from her, immediately caused those in the room to rush into the passage, where Mrs. Gilbert was found lifeless upon the floor; the knife with which her husband had stabbed her, lay by her. Gilbert was walking to and fro in a wild and hurried manner. He said to those who addressed him: "I have killed her and am willing to die for it." The weapon had been well directed, as it pierced the heart of the deceased, and caused instantaneous death. It was a butcher knife, ground to a point and sharpened with evident design to make its work effectual as even the back had been ground to a very keen edge. An inquest was to have been held this morning; the verdict is not yet known. Mrs. Gilbert was a native of this city, aged about thirty years; she had been married five years, but had no children. All the witnesses agreed in the belief that Gilbert was perfectly sober, and in his senses, when he committed this horrible act.

In this town on Saturday the 6th inst. after a very short and severe illness, Mr. James Birckhead, in the 26th year of his age. The death of this young man has called forth expressions of general sympathy and regret; for if the utmost propriety of deportment, integrity in mercantile concerns, and all those private and unostentatious virtues which are more useful than brilliant, win public esteem, the deceased may justly be considered a real loss to the community.—He bade fair to become a useful, active, and energetic member of society—His death will be long lamented by his relations, to whom he was endeared by the uniform rectitude of his conduct, and regretted by his friends and acquaintance who saw the promise of his increasing merit and future usefulness.
