Richard—What brought you in state?

B.—'Fore God you're right, it have been well, but there was two against that—first, I was blind as well as dead drunk, and so I 'nt see my way: and next if my were as good as your worship's, I 'nt have seen what I hav'nt got, is a bed.

Richard—Have you no lodgings.

r. B—Devil a lodging, except in the s of the ould song, "On the cowl'd nd."

r Richard—What are you.

r. B.—Faith I'm a prisoner, I be-.

ir Richard—I mean how do you get living?

Mr. B.—Through the blessings of vidence.

ir Richard—Have you no trade?

Mr. B.—Is it me? the devil a trade.

Sir Richard—Were you brought up to business?

Mr. B.—No, by my soul, I was tenly named, and my edication was my y patrimony.

Sir Richard—That sort of money does t go far with a man of your inclinans.

Mr. B.—(with a laugh) 'Fore God, u're right again; all the larning in the orld is no use at the bar. I mane the r of a public house, unless you back it ith the circulating medium.

Sir Richard—I'm afraid you have been rculating your earnings through a very nproper medium.

Mr. B.—Devil a truer word you ever poke in your life.

Sir Richard—If I let you go now, ou'll set off and get drunk again.

Mr. B.—I'll go bail I won't, for I av'nt a rap in the world; and as for my credit, its like my coat—worn out.

Sir Richard—I'm half disposed to try you.

Mr. B.—Not for tipling, I hope, your worship; for I'm sure to be found guilty.

Sir Richard—You seem to be a good humored fellow.

Mr. B.—There's a pair of us your worship.

Sir Richard laughed, and told Mr. B. to get about his business, and mend his ways.

Mr. B.—Before I go I'll ask you one favor.

Sir Richard—Well, what is it?

Mr. B.—Just to give me a bit of a note to your countryman, Mr. M'Adam, and as I despair of mending my own ways, perhaps he'll give me a job in mending the ways of others.

Sir Richard again laughed, and bid him go out and wait and he'd endeavor to put him in the way to industry.

Mr. B. shrugged his shoulders with good humor, and pulling up his unmentionables, trotted out of the office. The worthy magistrate gave him a letter, which would probably procure for him present employment.

Part of a Welsh Sermon.

A bride should have nine qualifications, all beginning with the letter P, viz. Piety, Person, and Parts; Patience, Prudence and Providence; Privilege, Parentage, and Portion: and that which should be first of all and most of all in consideration, which is Piety, is now-a-days thought of least of all, last of all, and by many, not at all; and that which should be least of all, and last of all in consideration, which is Portion, is now become first of all, most of all, and with many, all in all.

Just received at Baltimore from London.

Mr. DEVENNISH,

TAKES the liberty to acquaint the citizens of Cambridge and the public generally, that he has removed to the house nearly opposite his old stand and next door to Mr. James W. Stewart's tavern, in the above named town, where he continues to carry on the TAILORING BUSINESS, in all its various branches. From his knowledge and experience in the above business, he pledges himself to execute their work with dispatch, IN THE MOST NEAT, FASHIONABLE AND ELEGANT STYLE. He hopes his devotion to business, and exertion to give general satisfaction, and having procured the latest fashions in Baltimore, which have been received in that city from London, will ensure him a continued share of public patronage. jan 8—tf

P. CANFIELD,

Returns his sincere acknowledgments to his friends and the public for the liberal patronage he received in the University Lottery, 3rd class, New Series, and respectfully solicits a continuance of it in the Fourth Class, the scheme of which he has now the honour of offering to them and the public. This lottery is also formed upon pure mathematical principles, as was the third class, and he hopes and trusts that all are so perfectly satisfied with the correctness of this mode, that it will meet with all that attention from adventurers which it merits; he fearlessly, but with due deference, invites all to a scrutiny of the scheme, certain of its pleasing them by the small number and low price of tickets therein, the rapidity of the drawing, and the very short period to elapse before its determination. Larger and more brilliant schemes on this plan will be adopted, as the demand for tickets in this kind of lottery shall increase.
