A Wonderful Saving.

The largest Methodist Church in Georgia, used 32 gallons of L. & M. mixed with 24 gallons of oil, thus making the paint cost about $1.20 per gallon. They calculated to use 100 gallons of other paint. Saved about $80.00, and also got a big donation of L. & M. Dealers gladly sell L. & M., because their customers call for it, and say they used it 12, 14 and even 30 years ago.

Don't pay $1.50 a gallon for linseed oil, which you do in ready-for-use paint.

Buy oil fresh from the barrel at 60 cents per gallon and mix with Longman & Martinez L. & M. Paint.

AFTER HAMAN'S BILL —THE DELUGE

The area upon which oysters may be planted and grown successfully is exceedingly limited. For this reason the industries depending upon oyster propagation are readily capable of being monopolized. Up to fifteen years ago the oyster beds withstood a continuous drain upon their resources. But the constant robbery of dredge boats, more than all the work by tongers in the State, made sad inroads upon the supply of oysters in the beds. Now that the luscious bivalve is becoming scarce it is proposed to remedy the trouble by handing over this great source of State wealth to private parties for exploration—oppression and extortion.

Considerable argument is advanced by the dailies in this State in favor of leasing the oyster beds. Argument is advanced to the effect that under practical planting and cultivation the oyster business can be restored to what it was a score of years ago. In all of this we agree. But we fail to understand why this work can be done any better by a corporation than by the State itself. Everything for the advancement of the oyster industry that can be done by a corporation, can be done by the State. The beds can be shelled. Oystering on specified grounds may be prohibited until there is sufficient growth to justify tonging upon them. The expenses of this work may be made to fall upon the oystermen themselves—and they would not object. The oyster bottoms may be so replenished under judicious legislation that the entire tide-water portion of the State can thrive under it. The State could itself take charge of the oyster beds, cultivate them carefully and receive a certain revenue from every bushel taken from the Chesapeake bottoms. This would not fall as a hardship upon the oystermen, commission men or the packers. It would simply mean a slight advance in the price of the product, amounting to a few cents per gallon.

But you would not then have 10,000 oystermen deprived of a means of livelihood and various portions of the State financially ruined. Take the Haman bill for what it is worth at present. For the first year you would have a limited amount of acreage left for the oystermen to work upon. This would gradually become less and less each succeeding year until there is scarcely a productive spot for the oysterman to ply his trade. Exasperated, laboring without results, there would likely be a concerted action upon the part of oystermen to tong just where they can locate the most oysters. Lawsuits would ensue. The cost of our courts would be ten times as great as the amount of revenue derived for good roads. You would have a discontented element within the confines of our State—the tongmen and the leasers. The first, because the State in which they have lived, voted and helped support, is discriminating against them; the second because the State is not able to give them the protection guaranteed at the time they drew up the leasing contract.

The good roads proposition in the Haman bill is simply a delusion. We doubt seriously that there is a sane man in this State who really believes that the State would receive any dividends from the workings of the proposed bill. In the first place the defense of the beds, owned by private parties and without well defined boundaries, such as is possible on land, would require a well equipped navy. It would then be next to impossible to tell whether any particular man working over a private bed was the owner or not, so far as the police officials were concerned. The Haman bill is impossible—this with all respect to the esteemed city journals now bringing forth argument in its favor.

But, out side of its absurdities, the Haman bill is a distinct step towards monopoly. The present independent oysterman will practically be driven out of a business in which he has engaged for many years and for which alone he is fitted. His place will be taken by cheap labor, city outcasts, low-paid and low-principled. The Trust will absolutely control the beds—just as the Trusts absolutely control oil, tobacco and steel. Monopoly will be a sure result and the monopoly will become so great and dangerous that it can control the State Legislature. It will then be too late to consider remedial legislation.

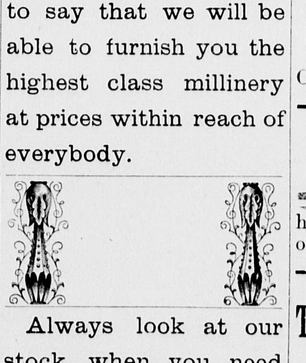

The Ledger shall never be one of those journals to sacrifice the common heritage of many people for the benefit of a few. We do not believe that a private corporation can see to the welfare of the oyster any better than can the State. We admit that something must be done for the oyster but we want it done under public management, not at the expense of driving a respected class of inhabitants out of house and home.—Easton Ledger.

IF those who waste their money in wild-cat mining stocks would raise chickens or carnations instead they might get some returns for their investment According to documents scattered broadcast for the mere asking the impression is created that chickens and carnations are an unlimited source of wealth. But no reference is made to the work and intelligence necessary. If you want to get dividends you must work for them. Sure.
