OPERATIONS AVOIDED

Two Grateful Letters from Women Who Avoided Serious Operations.—Many Women Suffering from Like Conditions Will Be Interested.

When a physician tells a woman, suffering from ovarian or womb trouble, that an operation is necessary it, of course, frightens her.

The very thought of the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. As one woman expressed it, when told by her physician that she must undergo an operation, she felt that her death knell had sounded.

Our hospitals are full of women who are there for ovarian or womb operations!

It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but such cases are much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after the doctors had said an operation must be performed. In fact, up to the point where the knife must be used to secure instant relief, this medicine is certain to help.

The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have escaped serious operations.

Margrite Ryan, Treasurer of St. Andrew's Society, Hotel English, Indianapolis, Ind., writes of her cure as follows:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I cannot find words to express my thanks for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me. The doctor said I could not get well unless I had an operation for ovarian and female troubles. I knew I could not stand the strain of an operation and made up my mind I would be an invalid for life. Hearing how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had saved other women from serious operations I decided to try it, and in less than four months I was entirely cured; and words fail to express my thankfulness."

Miss Margret Merkley of 275 3d Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Loss of strength, extreme nervousness, severe shooting pains through the pelvic organs, cramps, bearing down pains and extreme irritation compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor, after making an examination, said that I had ovarian trouble and ulceration, and advised an operation as my only hope. To this I strongly objected—and I decided as a last resort to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"To my surprise the ulceration healed, all the bad symptoms disappeared, and I am once more strong, vigorous and well; and I cannot express my thanks for what it has done for me."

Ovarian and womb troubles are steadily on the increase among women—and before submitting to an operation every woman should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. for advice.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been curing the worst forms of female complaints, all ovarian troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb, leucorrhœa, irregularities, indigestion and nervous prostration. Any woman who could read the many grateful letters on file in Mrs. Pinkham's office would be convinced of the efficiency of her advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A HUNDRED WAYS OF BREAKING YOUR NECK

When we witness the sensational performances of acrobats, are we attracted solely by the skill exhibited in accomplishing difficult feats? There is still another element of interest, which inspires a feeling curiously compounded of admiration and a painful presentiment of danger. The guiding principle of the inventors of these acts is to give our nerves a shock more intense than any hitherto experienced, and so we are encouraging a competition in rashness in which the contestants sometimes attempt the impossible. The familiar trapeze performances, aerial ballets in which the dancers are suspended by invisible wires, balloon ascensions, and parachute drops, even the "human cannon ball" hurled by powersul springs from the mouth of a stimulated cannon, though dangerous enough and often fatal, cannot compare in hair-raising power with the astounding performances of the last few years.

"Looping the loop" and its progeny are the most effective devices yet invented for producing apparent as well as real danger. Does any one still remember the American bicyclist who used to ride at terrifying speed down a steeply-inclined sixty-foot ladder? One night an attack of vertigo caused his death, but his act was less dangerous than the performances on inverted and aerial paths to which we have since become accustomed. In "looping the loop," first performed by James Smithson, better known as "Diavolo," as bicyclist starts from a platform 60 feet high and plunges down a track which extends obliquely for 100 feet to the ground, and thence rises to form a complete spiral loop 20 or 25 feet in diameter. The speed acquired by the cyclist in descending the inclined plane carries him around the loop. When "Diavolo," preceded by a great reputation, came to Paris, he found one Noiset, known professionally as "Mephisto," preparing to loop the loop at a rival music hall. While several cyclists were preparing to loop the loop honestly, one man, unwilling to risk his life for the amusement of spectators, devised a loop with a concealed groove which guided his wheel and kept it from falling. His trick was accidentally exposed by a clown, who got his foot caught in the groove, and the disgraced looper fell into obloquy and oblivion. The public soon tires of the strongest sensations. The stationary loop gave place to the rotating circle called "the devil's wheel" in which the cyclist spins like a squirrel. Taking his place inside the wheel, which is about fifteen feet in diameter, he pedals in a direction opposite to that of the wheel, and thus remains at the bottom until the wheel has acquired considerable velocity. Then he stops pedaling, applies his brake, and is carried backward and upward nearly to the top, whence he rushes down, and flies around and around the revolving wheel with startling speed.

At a performance in Vienna, a cyclist, stricken with apoplexy, fell from the wheel and soon expired. But the danger of cerebral congestion is not the only one. The critical phrase of the act is the last, when both the bicycle and the large wheel are being brought to rest by brakes. The bicycles lurches, and the slightest error in steering may send it through the open side of the wheel and precipitate the rider off the stage.

In Germany a genius called "Eclair" invented an infernal wheel of another sort. It was about twenty-five feet in diameter, and a smaller wheel rolled around inside of it, obtaining its impetus from a plunge down an inclined plane, which made a descent of fifty feet. To this small wheel "Eclair" was lashed in "spread eagle" fashion. He accustomed himself to this novel mode of locomotion by having himself strapped to a similar wheel, which was turned rapidly about a fixed axis by means of a crank.
