U. S. SENATOR.—The House yesterday adopted a message to be sent into the Senate, proposing with the concurrence of that body to go into the election of a United States Senator, on the 14th, inst.

At the recent bloody fight between the Mexicans and Texans, in the town of Mier, there were six boys in the Texan party, of whom the oldest was but 17 and the youngest 14. The last named (say the New Orleans papers) distinguished himself by shooting twelve Mexicans in succession as they were brought up to man the guns. Artillery was at length brought to bear upon the house, which was at once shattered, when the boys attempted to escape to an adjoining one. In the act of entering the window two of them were killed, but the others effected an entrance and recommended their firing upon the artillery men, which they continued until they were ordered by their commander to desist.

YUCATAN.—The latest accounts from the seat of war, are to the 15th instant.

Up to the 15th inst. the seige progressed as previously announced—more or less firing daily, with little execution. The Mexicans expected a reinforcement of 2,000 men, under the command of SANTA ANA in person, which they anticipated would at once settle the question in their favor.

It is estimated that the Mexicans have lost, since the landing of this expedition, from all causes, killed, sickness, desertion, &c. over 1,700.

The brig William Crawford, from New Orleans for Campeachy, was captured off the port and sent to Laguna for trial. The reason of her capture was the intention to violate the blockade.

The Br. barque Pennington, had arrived at Lorma from Vera Cruz, with a fresh supply of Mexican troops. The new steam ship Montezuma was hourly expected from Vera Cruz, with a convoy containing a reinforcement of 2,000 men.

OBITUARY.

Departed this life January 17th, 1843, at the age of six years, three months and thirteen days, WILLIAM JAMES TWILLEY, son of James D. Twilley Esq. of Dorchester County.

In the death of this interesting child, his parents have lost one of the dearest objects that bound them to earth, and, judging from his gentle disposition, and remarkable intelligence, society has been deprived of one of its most promising members. It is difficult, it is true, to devine what would have been the destiny of this lovely boy, had he lived to a ripe old age; but, those who knew him may readily conclude that his would have been no common lot; he would have marked out for himself some high and noble career, and been the support and consolation of his parents in their declining years. His mind, though in its infancy, though just unfolding its beauties like the buds of spring, was of masculine mould. Often laying aside the puerile notions and amusements peculiar to his age, he would seem to be absorbed in deep meditation; and from the intellectual inquiries that he frequently made of his parents, it was evident that he was longing to grapple with truths far beyond the strength of his youthful powers; truths that reach from time into the vast abyss of eternity. But alas! the bright jewel has been torn from its bed, and the casket has crumbled into dust. The spirit, that once animated that little frail tenement, has fled from a world of pain and sorrow, to brighter realms on high, and is now fluttering around, and basking in the beams of glory, that radiate from the throne of its Creator. Parents! grieve not on account of your loss; it is God's doings—"be composed and sink into His will." Remember that thus must perish all things. The beauties of nature, and the glories of earth, must likewise fade away, the gory de-

"Where are the flowers, the fair young flowers that sprang and stood,
In brighter light and softer airs, a beauteous sisterhood.
Alas! they are all in their graves, the gentle race of flowers
Are lying in their lowly beds, with the fair and good of ours.
The rain is falling where they lie, but the cold winter rain,
Calls not from out the gloomy earth, the lovely ones again.
The wild flower and the violet, they perished long ago,
And the brier rose, and the orchis died amid the summer glow;—
But on the hill the golden rod, and the aster in the wood,
And the yellow sunflower by the brook, in autumn beauty stood—
Till fell the frost from the clear, cold heaven, as falls the plague on men,
And the brightness of their smile was gone, from upland, glade, and glen."

The great, the good, the wise, fair forms and hoary seers, must likewise be gathered into one mighty sepulchre.

"As the long train
Of ages glide away, the sons of men,
The youth in life's green spring, and he, who goes
In the full strength of years, matron and maid,
And the sweet babe, and the grey headed man—
Shall one by one be gathered to thy side
By those, who in their turn shall follow thee.
So live that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, that moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Then go not like the quarry slave, at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave,
Like one, who wraps the drapery of his couch
Around him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.
