The first naval victory over a common enemy, during the last war, was achieved by Capt. Hull, and his ship the Constitution, with her prize, the Gurrier, brought the intelligence to Boston.—When it was known to the citizens that Capt. Hull had arrived in the harbor, a delegation of merchants and citizens waited on him to a public entrance and an entertainment. The invitation was accepted as a matter of course, but somewhat reluctantly. Capt. Hull remarked that he had rather fight the battle over again, than to encounter such overpowering testimonials of affection and approbation.

The New York American says—The above extract from the Boston Courier recalls a scene we witnessed in our City Hall, when, during the war, the freedom of the city, in a gold box, was presented to Com. Decatur.

A large assemblage was collected in the beautiful room of the Common Council. De Witt Clinton was then Mayor, and his imposing voice and presence, as he read the complimentory address, produced great effect; but our attention, we we well remember, was directed mainly to poor Decatur, who, dressed in full uniform, and surrounded by a brilliant array of his officers, stood pale, trembling, and looking more like a man receiving sentence than applause.

When it came to his turn to reply, he faltered out from a paper in his hand the brief words he had to speak; and only when they were spoken and the formality of the circle was broken up, did he recover, and then, almost in the language of Hull, his first words were, that he would rather go into a fight against almost any odds, than though such a scene again.

The following presentment was made by the Grand Jury to the City Court on Thursday:

To the Honorable the Judges of Baltimore City Court, the Grand Jury for the city of Baltimore do respectfully represent—

That, in the discharge of their official duties they have become aware of the existence of an evil, to which they feel it their duty, in this formal manner, to call the attention of the court.—They refer to the establishment, in this city, of an association, professedly masonic, composed of negroes and mulattoes, the meetings of which, and its proceedings are held and had in secret. The so called Lodge, of which they particularly speak, professes to derive its authority from a charter granted by "The first African Independent Grand Lodge of North America," in the city of Philadelphia, dated the 9th of May, 1842. The said charter establishes an entire dependence of the Lodge in this city, upon the mother Lodge, and requires a compliance with its laws, as well as all pecuniary assistance which it may be in the power of the Baltimore Lodge to render. It is unnecessary to say that such an institution, so created and connected, is against the policy of the laws of Maryland. How far the system may have extended through this state, the Grand Jury are unable to determine; but they cannot doubt, that the safety of the slave property, and the security of the white population, require its immediate suppression. Assemblages of negroes, whether free or slave, cannot be prudently tolerated, and most especially when secrecy is the principle of their meetings and deliberations. Facilities for abduction must of course be afforded, and means be provided, as well for that purpose, as for the protection of offenders, and their escape from justice.

The Grand Jury therefore deeming all such societies a most dangerous evil, do accordingly present them as such; and in the absence of a specific law on the subject, do respectfully suggest the passage of a statute, prohibiting the formation of all such societies under a severe penalty. They moreover suggest, that it be made penal for any officer of a foreign lodge, to come into this State, with a view to the formation of any such lodge or lodges, within our limits, and that it be made highly penal for any individual, slave or free, to become an officer or member of any secret associations of this kind, or of any similar kind, or for any white person to form, encourage o abet any such associations. They further represent that such statute as may be passed be directed to be given in charge to the several Grand Juries of the State at their respective sessions, and that it be made the duty of all officers of the peace, to disperse the meetings of all such societies, so to be prohibited, and to cause the members thereof to be committed for due trial.

And the Grand Jury earnestly request, that this Honorable Court will join them, in bringing this matter to the immediate cognizance of the General Assembly, by forwarding with their approbation, a copy of this presentment to Annapolis, with the request that its views be considered, and the evil remedied at the present session.

Henry W. Hicks, vs Henry Bradley and others. } IN CHANCERY, 11th February, 1843.

The Bill in this cause states that Garrison McCollister of Dorchester county, many years since departed this life, leaving a small real estate to Samuel McCollister and did not devise the remainder of the fee which descended to his heirs at law, who were Henry Bradley, Sally Bradley, Peggy Bradley, who were each entitled to one undivided fifth part, the children of Nathan Bradley whose names are not known and who are together entitled to one undivided fifth part, and Mary Chance, the daughter of Lucy Hicks, who is also entitled to another fifth part. Except the children of Nathan Bradley and Mary Chance all the heirs conveyed their undivided parts to Samuel McCollester, and the latter conveyed two hundred and twenty acres of the same to Henry W. Hicks the complainant: The object of the Bill is to obtain a sale of the said two hundred and twenty acres and to have the proceeds of sale rateably divided among the parties entitled. The Bill states that the children of Nathan Bradley and Mary Chance live without the jurisdiction of this county—It is thereupon ordered, that the complainant by causing a copy of this order to be published in some newspaper once in each of three successive weeks before the 20th day of March next give notice to the said non resident defendant of the substance and object of the Bill that they may be warned to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 11th day of July next to show cause if any they have why a decree shall not pass as prayed.
