TRAVEL IN ALASKA.

Prof. Wm. A. Potts, of Tolchester, Writes an Interesting Letter to Friends in Kent.

The following private letter was written to Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Noland, of Tolchester, and was of such an interesting character that they have consented for its publication:

MY DEAR FRIEND NOLAND:

SKAGWAY, ALASKA, SEPT. 27, 1905.

I promised to write you but realy I have been so busy since leaving the beach there was no time for writing. We reached Yellowstone Park in less than three days. We laid over a few days at Mammoth Hot Springs Hotel to rest up and take in the sights around there before starting through the park. Then we started on an hundred mile stage trip with a jolly party of ten and while many miles of it was tiresome and unnoteworthy, I venture we got as much fun out of it as any two people who made the trip this summer. There are many [wonderful things to be seen in this great reservation.

The Norris geyser bason, where the whole valley for miles is one vast cauldren of boiling springs, devil's bathtubs, devil's kitchens, in fact the whole country is the play ground of His Royal Highness. Then we go to the old Faithful Inn, where geysers galor, spout and foam, some at regular intervals, some irregular, but plenty to make it interesting.

Old Faithful, the tourist friend, does business every hour, spouting 150 feet high for about five minutes. The sight at night with search light thrown on is one of stupendous grandeur. Then on to the Thumbert, where more geysers and paint pots. A ride over Yellowstone Lake to an island where elk, deer, buffalo, bear and other animals are kept. The bear come down to the hotels and eat the garbage from the kitchen every afternoon. The grand Canyon of the Yellowstone is a great show and the colors most beautiful.

Having finished the pars, a fifteen hundred mile ride brings us to the beautiful hustling city of Seattle, the metropolis of the great north west. Here we found one of the fine ships of the North Pacific and Alaska Steam Ship Co's. (The Jefferson,) a fine ship built at Seattle, with accommodations second to none on either ocean, with table spread with everything the market furnishes from this productive country, and here we journey for more than a thousand miles on a beautiful island sea wandering through many straight and narrow sundry passes with mountain towering above mountain, that look as they would topple over and crush the steamer in water from one to five miles deep.

The beauty, the grandeur and the resources of Alaska are but little known by those who have never visited it. Instead of snow, ice and savages—and at this writing the mountain peaks all around me are snow covered two to three thousand feet above me—yet I look out on flower gardens of such profusion and variety as was never dreamed of in the East; vegetables of every variety and of superior quality; the most luscious berries grow wild. The thermometer now registers 50° in front of the hotel. Game is plentiful. We had moose steak for breakfast, venison for dinner; plenty of ducks and game of all kinds. We have just returned from the Yukon country. This was the point where the gold hunters used to pack from and start over the dreaded White Pass to the Yukon country, and if a history of the terrors, troubles, privations, sufferings and death of the White Pass trail could be written it would read like fiction, for no one could believe it true but those who passed through the experience.

The railroad from Skagaway to White Horse, on the Yukon river, follows the old trail nearly the whole distance through this mighty gorge, twisting, climbing, turning, climbing with three powerful engines. At times it would look as though the train would be tied in a knot, so crooked and bewildering is the track; but after breaking apart three times we reach the summit, and then skirt along beautiful Lake Bennett for twenty-five miles; then down by many lakes and near Miles Canyon, pass the White Horse Rapids, and finally reach White Horse, from where we can take a fine steamer and go down the Yukon river 2500 miles to St. Michels and Nome.

The trip across the Pass is now made in comfortable cars, where we can look down and on the old trail of hardship that is strewn (or has been) with the bones of thousands of brave, ambitious fellows who fell by the way, all for the desire for gold.

Well, I know you are too busy to read long letters, so will not bore you more. Will only say we will take the first steamer south and reach Seattle about October 2, then will run down to Portland for a few days and return via Vancouver C. P. R. R. to St. Paul, and on East. Mrs. P. wishes to be kindly remembered to you, Mrs. N. and Conlyn.

Very truly yours,
W. A. POTTS.

P. S.—If I had Eliason with me he could lecture all winter on what we have seen and then not get half through.
