A controlling majority of the people, and a large majority of the States, have declared in favor of immediate annexatien. Instructions have thus come up to both branches of Congress, from their respective constituents, in terms the most emphatic. It is the will of both the people and the States, that Texas shall be annexed to the Union promptly and immediately.

We make this extract, not for the purpose of combatting any opinions that John Tyler, nobody's President, has expressed, but to reprobate a doctrine that is maintained by many of the ultra professors of Democracy headed by Andrew Jackson. These men assume that representatives are bound to obey instructions and that the people in selecting a President instruct Congress. By this doctrine Congress is bound to sustain by unanimous votes any measure that James K. Polk may see fit to recommend, for any Representative who shall oppose his recommendations will be guilty of the sin of opposing the will of the people. This doctrine is worthy of its parentage and of the "progressive Democracy," a kind of Democracy that has progressed with rapid strides towards anarchy and destruction.

Look at it; John Tyler assumes that the people in the recent Presidential election decided in favor of Texas annexation, and have "in terms the most emphatic" instructed both branches of Congress that "it is the will of both the people and the States that Texas shall be annexed to the Union, promptly and immediately." If Jackson the apostle that first preached the doctrine is right, then Tyler, the commentator on it, is right also, and the people by electing Polk have instructed Congress to vote for Texas annexation, and it is the duty of Congress to conform its legislation to their wishes expressed.

In the late election, the people, that is to say a majority of them, voted for electors who, it was understood, would vote for Polk and Dallas. Did the people vote for the free-trade notions of Polk, or the protective-notions of Dallas? The Baltimore convention nominated Silas Wright for Vice-President, and, had he accepted the nomination, he would have been our next Vice-President. Had he been elected with Polk, would the people have instructed Congress to go with Polk for annexation or with Wright against it?

But the absurdities of this doctrine are endless. No sound-headed and sound-hearted man in the nation believes in it, although Jackson and Tyler and the demagogues do. It is so preposterous that no man of sense can entertain it; it involves rank treason against the Constitution, and no patriot can regard it with any other feeling than that of abhorrence. The Whigs in both branches of Congress repudiate it, and they will not suffer any considerations connected with it to influence their deliberations or to control their votes.

REV. S. DRAIN.

Nov. 12—Died at Greensborough, Caroline county Md., Rev. Shepard Drain, of the Philadelphia Annual Conference, in the 38th year of his age.

Of the early history of our dear departed brother we have but little information. He was born near Laurel, Delaware, and when but a boy was lead to embrace the hopes set forth in the Gospel. From the period of his conversion, though quite young, he was a consistent and upright Christian, and secured both the confidence and affection of his brethren. In 1831 he was received on trial by the Philadelphia Conference, and sent to Snow Hill circuit with brother Dailey. His labors were so acceptable here, that much to the gratification of the people, he was continued the second year. In 1833 he went to Cambridge circuit with brother Lenhart, and from thence in 1834 to Lewistown. in 1835 was sent to Delaware City circuit, as preacher in charge; from thence in 1836 to Talbot where he was continued two years: from thence to Church Hill circuit, where he also remained two years. In 1840 and 1842 Princess Ann circuit was the field of his ministry. During these two years the circuit was visited with an especial season of revival, and many were added to the Church. In 1842 and 1843 he travelled Accomack, the scene of his first year's labor as an itinerant' where he was received with great pleasure by many who remembered his early labors of love. From thence in 1844 he was removed to Caroline, where his earthly career terminated and his toil ceased for ever. Brother Drain was blessed with a naturally cheerful, even temper, which, when more thorougly refined by the influences of religion, made him a delightful companion and a universal favorite. The influence which he was thus enabled to secure over others, he endeavored always to render subservient to the interests of the Gospel. As a preacher he was plain, practical, pointed, and experimental. He recommended to others only what he himself enjoyed, and hence his preaching was often highly profitable. As a pastor he was mild, sociable, and pleasant, easily winning his way to the hearts of his people. Though mild and extremely tender of the feeling of others, yet he never hesitated a moment to discharge his duty faithfully. His constitution was naturally feeble and delicate; but he never spared himself when he could do good. A fire occurred in Greensborough a short time before his death, and to his extraordinary exertions here, we may trace his last illness. He was confined to his bed about ten days, and bore with almost unparalled patience and resignation his extreme sufferings, Though usually calm, hs frequently rejoiced, and often exclaimed, "My work is done; I shall soon be at rest." In this happy, peaceful frame, he died. A widow and two children have been left to mourn their loss. May the Lord abundantly comfort them!
