Spring Styles Have Emerged from the Chrysalis State—Have Few, and More Subtle than Pronounced

The Easter openings of models in the best shops have given the stamp of finality to the season's styles. It is evident the Easter girl will be a vision of dainty femininity, for not a "mannish" garment will be worn by her. Her gowns will be of the most delegate, soft, drapy character, and her hats and wraps will be dreams of artistic beauty.

POINTS THAT ARE EMPHASIZED

The dominance of the corselet skirt, and the increased favor in which the bolero is held by the great style-designers are points distinctly emphasized in the new models. The infinite variety of the bolero, which, like the poor, is always with us, saves it from the contemp of too great familiarity, and it has received additional charm by association with the corselet skirt, the combination forming the type of costume most in evidence.

A PLEASING EXAMPLE

A vogue which is well endorsed is a skirt of striped or tucked voile or plaid in neutral shadings, with a smart little bolero coat of black moire, or of moire or taffeta the shade of the skirt.

The skirts are sometimes sun-plaited, and if of plaid the material is on the bias, the border being reinforced and made to stand out nicely by several rows of narrow velvet ribbon in graduated widths.

SKIRT STYLES

Skirts are very full and much trimmed, and when of soft, sheer stuffs are either shirred or laid in plaits at the top pressed very flat in order to fit smoothly over the hips.

They are long all around, but train slightly at the back. The elbow sleeve with a small puff at the top is the ruling Chemisettes are worn with most of the gowns, and the trimming about the shoulders is in harmony with that of the skirt.

Walking skirts are two inches above the ground, cut circular in most cases, and very full and flaring at the hem.

A NEW MATERIAL

A matrial for dressy gowns that is quite new this season is called "chiffon de laine," a silk and wool batiste with closer weave than voile, but equally transparent and very soft and drapy. Silk voile is also fashionable, and comes in plain, checked, striped and embroidered effects. A new idea is to make plain sheer goods over silks that are striped or checked. Satin fourards in black and white effects with polka or coin dots are again extremely popular.

TRIMMINGS AND ACCESSORIES

A profusion of trimmings is found on all rainment of a dressy nature. Laces of two or three kinds, on one garment, embroideries of every known kind, laces dyed to match the gown's color, shirring, knife-plaiting, nun's folds, and very handsome braids with touches of gold are lavishly employed; and wherever there is an excuse for placing a trimming button, there it is sure to be found.

The millinery is exquisite. Hats are small, delicate, light, airy and dainty, being made of sheer, lacy braids or entirely of chiffon or tulle; the trimmings are mostly of small flowers, osprey aigrettes of enormous size, or soft ostrich tips. Hats for wear with the morning suit are of straw, simply trimmed with soft ribbons and quils.

The illustration shows an example of the princess skirt and bolero type of costume, made of Burlingham, in cornflower blue, with trimming of radium braid the same color. For this thanks are due the May Manton Co.

IN MEMORIAM.

HOGAN—In sad but loving remembrance of Florence M. Hogan daughter of Jas A. and Mary C. Casey who departed this life ten years ago, April 1st 1896.

Why should we wish her back
When she suffered so long with pain
She sings in the Angels choir today
And with Christ has gone to reign.

T'was hard to give her up
And lay her beneath the sod
But we knew that all was well with her
So we kiss the chastening rod.
