a few days before the Wife sailed to lay in his necessary; he by some ill adviser set off without telling any person & has never been since heard of. The carpenter being asked seems to be an honest steady man, & I think will answer you well. Inclosed I send a statement to you of the money Mr advanced for your account – viz.

To Robert Carpenter for passage, necessaries & Cash for other side & Tools	£45.10.0
To O'Neill, Labourer for D: D: P. D. Jack having paid the Wifes passage 10/4/9 –	29.11.6
Total –	£75.1.6

It is certainly unpleasant about O'Neill but I was confident he would answer you or I never would have spoke of him – I dare with intention name as such a heavy penalty could be recovered of any person encouraging a Mechanic to leave this Kingdom – You must really excuse my writing these letters in such haste as I assure, I have had a very uneasy mind about the said person, & have done all I could to find him out –
