THEY DON'T MIX

Whether you are a "wet" or a "dry," this fact will interest you: Repeal of prohibition has resulted in a tremendous increase in drunken driving, accordiny to reports of police bureaus, safety departments and similar organizations. No one knows whether this is due to people drinking more now than during the prohibition era—but it is a fact that more people are taking drinks and getting behind the wheels of their cars.

A driver does not even have to be noticeably drunk to be dangerous. Investigations show that very mod erate doses of alcohol produce the following effects on the average driver: Slower reactions. less uniformity in response, a narrowing of the field of attention, a rise in self-assurance which breeds recklessness, and a general decline in mechanical efficiency. The change occurring may be relatively slight—but when the driver is in sole charge of a hurling mass of metal, it becomes important indeed. A man who shows few signs of his drinking, and s a pleasant and rational companion, may become a menace to the public in his car.

The "wets" of the country should take the lead in discouraging the drunken driver. He is one of the worst dangers to the cause they espouse—"alcohol on the highway" is certain to be used as a potent argument for prohibition. Today. with liquor legally on sale in the bulk of States. legislation to curb drunken driving should be made even stiffer than in the past—and should be enforced to the letter. Alcohol and gasoline don't mix.

DECLARING that the Democratic party "is merely on trial," the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin in his weekly sermon Sunday afternoon asserted that the problem of distribution must be solved "within the next two years or else witness a new form of government that will face it and attempt to solve it by some Communistic means."

"The old Republican party with its rugged individualism," he said "is as dead as Benedict Arnold."

Father Coughlin concluded his address by outlining a plan for the organization of a "national union for social justice with chapters in every county, city and town, in which enrollment would be by mail and without fees, and supported by the voluntary offerings of those who can offord to support it."

A REPORT prepared by Richmond (Va.) police shows 2,089 arrests for drunkenness from June 1 to October 1 of this year, as compared with 1,311 for the same period of last year. Drunken-driving charges increased from 53 to 94 ver cent for the same period; accidents involving motor vehicles rose from 691 to 786, and total arrests for all causes from 7,636 to 10,387. So, what?

IN THE KENT NEWS last week mention was made of the shipment of 422 head of steers from Kent county after being on pasture here for about 45 days. There are some valuable lessons to be learned from this experiment. It is reported that these cattle increased 37,500 pounds in the short time they have been here. Farmers who pastured the cattle received $3.50 per head making a total of $1,599.50.

Local truckers who hauled the cattle to Baltimore slaughter houses received a total of $329.75, making the total receipts to Kent county from this federal project, $2,429.25.

A RECENT Labor Department survey shows that 28 States and two territories have old age pension laws. Only one State, Wisconsin, has a State unemployment insurance plan. The same survey shows that 97 private unemployment insurance plans have been tried, and that 62 of them were in operation in June of this year.

A REPUBLICAN move for an immediate special session of the General Assembly to forestall "wholesale dismissals" of State employes by Pennsylvania's first Democratic administration in 40 years was under way Monday on the heels of Governor-elect George H. Earle's appointment of his first cabinet member.

At the heart of the special session plan, as disclosed over the weekend by State Senator George Woodward, Philadelphia Republican, is a civil service act, which he says "would not take away the power of dismissal. but would impose upon the executive the duty of stating a good and proper reason for dismissal."

The Senator announced he would ask Governor Pinchot to call the Assembly together at once to enact the civil service law.

ON BEHALF of the local Democrats elected in Kent county and the Democratic Central Committee we wish to thank each and everyone who helped and voted for same. It was a grand victory only marred by one defeat, that of Mr. Hadaway.

CHIEF JUDGE William Mason Shehan expects to take his seat on the Bench during the second week of the November term of the Circuit Court for Talbot county. His commission from the Governor will arrive next week but he will not qualify until Judge Adkins has disposed of his cases now before him. The law makes it mandatory for a Judge to render decisions while a Judge and not after his successor has qualified. It seems that Judge Adkins will not be able to do this earlier than the third week in November.

DO YOU RECALL

WHEN politicians in the old days were not very scrupulous about the means they employed to win their victories, and on one occasion, before the majority of the colored people could read or write, the Republican ticket had a picture of Abraham Lincoln at the top, and just in front of his nose was the square in which the "X" mark was to be made. For some time before the election the darkies were coached and instructed to make their mark "at Lincoln's nose." In the meantime the Democrats had some tickets printed with the portrait of the "Great Emancipator" reversed, with the nose pointing, of course, to the square where the "X" mark would count one of the disciples of Thomas Jefferson, and many votes were lost to the Republicans before they discovered the subterfuge. Well, it was a rather mean trick, but we suppose the perpetrators of it acted on the principle that all is fair in love, war and politics.

WHEN the property adjoining Bordley's Corner, where the American Store is now located, was owned bp Samuel Canady, who kept a grocery store there. He was very eccentric, although a very successful merchant, and his boast was that he sold many goods below cost. When asked on one occasion how he could do this, he replied that it was "because he sold so many of them."

WHEN the farm now owned by Leon Brown, just over the iron bride, on the Quaker Neck road,was the home of Samcel Spencer, a prominent man in the county at one time, and for many years the Cashier of the Old Bank?

No Cause for Alarm at Readjustment of World

In an address before the University club, Doctor Coleman told the following story: "Some friends were visiting Fire Warden Slattery. Margaret Slattery awoke early one morning, and looked out her window. The whole horizon seemed to be aflame. At once she shouted frantically: 'Fire! Fire! Fire!'

"Her friends rushed in. 'What on earth'—

"'Fire! Fire! Fire!'—

"'—is the matter?' they asked.

"'Outside! Look! The whole world is on fire!'

"They went to the window, threw the blinds farther aside. 'Why, my dear,' one of them said, as they looked, 'that isn't fire. That's just the sun of a new dawn, rising on the horizon!'

"And so it is," Doctor Coleman concluded, "with those who today look with fear on the vast readjustments going on in the world. What they mistake for impending catastrophe is but the dawn of a new, more glorious day."

"Looking 'Em Over"

BY BILL USILTON

A Yokel Meets Some Famous Folks.

Down in Washington four years ago we were doing what is known as a ballyhoo job for a super epic movie which was slated to open at Keith's picture emporium. To assist us there was a short, slight and white-haired chap, all smiles and quiet, who knew every newsman in the city and could talk him into using our praise-filled publicity for the coming film. He was then editor of Pathe News, as well as press agent extraordinary for Keith's, this white-haired man. In fact, as long as Harry Schreiber was in the nation's capitol, this quiet little chap guided his hand and helped him make a record which has given him an outstanding job in Columbus, O.

I lost track of this efficient gentleman for a year or so...And then, when President Roosevelt visited this town of ours, I was astonished to see him with the Chief Executive's party...I was astonished, too, to find that he remembered me. He is Marvin H. McIntyre, personal secretary to the President of the United States!

A slim, freckled-face chit of a girl burst into the publicity offices of RKO, in New York, one morning and asked snappily to see the boss. She was not pretty, she was too tall and slim, and the dippy hat she had on her head added not a bit to my appraisal of her as I prepared to ask if she had an appointment when the boy came in with the message. She was too high-strung to sit down and wait, she paced the floor and tapped her foot. It could be no one of importance I reasoned, for the hour was too early and folks who are somebody never bother to enter disheveled sanctums of publicity... But I walked out to her, where she stood by the rail, and told he that the boss was a busy man. I asked her business, and she said that she must see him...And then I asked for her name and she said, "Katherine Hepburn!"

Passing along Broadway at eight one morning I ran smack-dab into Polk Bramble and the missus, who were either on the way in from a big night, or just going out...I greeted him cheerily, for it was good to see a face from home, and then went up the street by the Astor Hotel.

As I came abreast of the double-revolving doors to that famous hostelry I espied the doorman sitting on the steps and chatting with a grey-haired man beside him. The doorman was talking, the chap with grey hair and slouch hat on the back of his head was listening... And as I drew closer to him I thought the sunlight was playing tricks...For it was Will Rogers!

It is election night, four years ago...I am in the city room of a New York daily newspaper, sending returns through a "mike" to loudspeakers erected in Times Square...Governor Ritchie is conceded his victory, Heywood Brown, the famous columnist, is said to be defeated for Congress in New York ...I turned to face a glass-enclosed office nearby and called to the occupant—a small, hawk-faced man in shirt-sleeves and suspenders...He is told by me of Broun's defeat and I watched amusedly as he pounds his brain for something of alleged humor to yell into the mike...At last he comes through with, "Broun eyes, why are you blue," and then asks me what I think of it...And the grinning chap, so pleased with himself, was none other than the old-keyholer, Walter Winchell.

At a banquet of the Dutch Treat Club, where authors, writers and newshounds gather once a week to dine, I sat as a guest opposite an attractive woman whose face was vaguely familiar...She chatted with me pleasantly, asked interestedly of the work I did...And then, out of a clear sky, I heard the chairman call her name to speak...It was Mary Roberts Rhinehart!

Sitting in a box at the Palace Theatre with the missus, Jerry Giraitis and Eric Wood, I crossed my legs and kicked the chap ahead of me in the back...I begged his pardon politely, and he turned to smile and say, "Zat ees all-right, ms'ieu"...It was Maurice Chevalier!

At Pennsylvania Station one day I nervously awaited to famous fellows, and in my excitement nearly grabbed two Pullman porters by mistake...For I had never seen the chaps and scarcely a soul in New York, though their voices were familiar, had ever seen their faces. But I calmed myself, and as two short chaps came down the ramp together, I approached them and got my men...And, going through Manhattan's streets that morning in a taxi, they rehearsed before me several bits of their broadcast for that evening. They were Amos 'N' Andy!

I met Frank Hawks, the famous flyer, at a banquet one time...And then, a year later, failed to recognize him at a small party. His plane had been wrecked, and so had he... and the plastic surgeons completely remodelled his features!

And if I never meet another so-called celebrity in my time, I will be satisfied with the scene which lingers in my memory...Of the day I walked into a dressing room,backstage at the Palace Theatre, and found Jimmie Durante stripped to the waist with two bruisers pounding on his back...Between squawks, Jimmie answered my questions for the taking of some pictures in his home...And as I started to leave he said, "Don't do nothing 'til I ask the missus!"

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

Our Garden Club of Chestertown of which Mrs. Thomas Speicher, is president, has begun the beautification of the small square in the center of the city by planting an ornamental hedge of boxwood around the inside of the plot. The Mayor and City Council are cooperating with the Club in the plan of improvement, and for this reason the Council is urging the cooperation of the general public in making the square one of the beauty spots in the city. The public generally is urged not to trespass upon the square in any manner, and any one parking their car at the curb around the square is requested not to alight from their car on the square. It is the civic duty of every one to cooperate with the ladies of the city in maintaining the beauty of the square and it is for the purpose of urging this cooperation that this public notice is made by the Mayor and Council.

Finds Fortune Hidden In Telephone Bellbox

Installer Restores Securities Before Owner Misses Them

Using a telephone bellbox as a safety depository is not considered advisable. But that is exactly what a Lynn, Mass., telephone user did a short time ago.

This unique "safety deposit box" was discovered one day recently by A. E. Miller, an installer of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, who had been sent to remove some telephone equipment from a residence. After he had left the premises and was placing the removal tag on the telephone equipment, he discovered a wad of paper in the bellbox which aroused his curiosity. It turned out to be stock certificates worth about $2,500, including ten shares of American Telephone and Telegraph stock.

In endeavoring to trace the rightful owner, telephone officials found that the name on the stock certificate did not correspond with the name in which the telephone had been listed. Inquiry at the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's headquarters in New York revealed the address to which the dividends for the telephone stock were sent, with the result that the stock certificates were returned to the owner before he even knew that they were misplaced.

Millington Bank of Maryland

DEPOSITS INSURED BY
The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation
WASHINGTON, D. C.
$5000 MAXIMUM INSURANCE FOR EACH DEPOSITOR $5000

The Millington Bank of Maryland has received from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation at Washington the official signs which will hang at all receiving windows as visible evidence that depositors of this institution are insured.

The Millington Bank of Maryland is one of more than 14,000 licensed banks in the country which are receiving these signs. Insured banks are able to offer protection to their depositors up to $5,000. Statistical studies have shown that this maximum fully protects more than 97 per cent of all the depositors in insured banks.

A statement by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation follows:

"The purpose of the signs is to let depositors know which banks are insured. Heretofore, although 90 per cent. of the licensed banks are insured, depositors have had no easy means of identifying them.

"If, by any unforseen circumstance, an insured bank should suspend, the Insurance Corporation would begin paying off the depositors just as soon as a receiver was appointed for the closed institution. The depositors would receive their money in a few days instead of waiting months or year as was the case in the former method of liquidation. This is not only a benefit to the depositors, but it saves the community from a terrific economic and social blow. When the depositors receive their accounts they assign their claims to the Insurance Corporation. Thereafter liquidation proceeds on a business-like basis with the maximum chance of the Corporation and other creditors being paid in full."

SELECT YOUR MORTICIAN As You Choose a DOCTOR

Too many people are inclined to think of the mortician just as a business man. Too little consideration is given to his necessary qualications in embalming physiology, chemistry, physic, pathology, bacteriology, sanitary science and post mortem plastic surgery.

Few people know of the part played by the mortician in safe guarding the health of the public. Often at great personal risk, he takes the necessary steps to prevent the spread of disease. This vital service is recognized and appreciated by the medical profession and public health authorities. For your own protection you should select your mortician as you choose your doctor, according to his professional skill.
