For Monday and Tuesday evenings at the New Lyceum Theatre, "One Hour Late" will be the featured attraction, bringing to the screen such stars as Joe Morrison, Conrad Nagel, Helen Twelvetrees and Arline Judge in its leading roles.

Paramount's dramatic comedy, "One Hour Late."

The ageless question, "Should a girl marry her millionaire sweetheart or her penniless sweetheart?" is given a deft and pointed answer

In "One Hour Late," Helen Twelvetrees is the girl who is forced to make a choice between wealthy Conrad Nagel and improvident but cheerful Joe Morrison.

Off for a Week-End

Morrison, it seems, has a remarkable singing voice, but prefers to plod along at his filing clerk job instead of seking a radio audition and "making something of himself,"as Miss Twelvetrees phrases it.

The hectic climax of the film takes place in the elevator of the office building, where Miss Twelvetrees is hurrying to keep her date with the boss and Morrison is hastening to his marriage.

Climax in Elevator

The elevator cable breaks, the car is stalled between floors and an ill woman passenger collapses. Within the next half-hour, Morrison, by a display of heroism, saves everyone in the car. He wins back the love of Miss Twelvetrees and a radio contract from one of the passengers who had heard him sing. And Hazel goes off on a date with a soda clerk while the boss goes down to the country—with his wife.

For Wednesday and Thursday evenings "Behold My Wife" is the featured attraction scheduled for the New Lyceum. Sylvia Sydney has the leading role in this film and is ably supported by Gene Raymond.

Adapted from Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Translation of a Savage," the picture is the story of a social registrite who married an Indian girl in order to revenge himself on his family.

Although the family, at first, are horrified, they attempt to make the best of a bad situation and hold a reception in her honor.

She appears in evening clothes, capitivates everyone with her beauty; but Michael, disgruntled because he is cheated of his revenge, reveals his true purpose to Tonita. Broken hearted and dis-illusioned, she runs away with another man, Monroe Owsley.

Confesses to Murder

It is only when she has gone that Michael realizes that he really loves her. He follows to apologize and ask her to take him back. He discovers then that Owsley has been killed and Tonita has confessed to the murder.

In a stirring and dramatic last scene, these two confess their love to each other and a surprise turn of events clears her of the charge and frees her to go with Michael

There are two attractions sheduled for a showing at the New Lyceum Theatre on Friday and Saturday evenings. The first of these will provide that needed touch of hilarious laughter for which we all wish. It is none other than "It's A Gift," starring the irrepressible W. C. Frields and Baby LeRoy, and concocted with some of the goofiest fun that has been this way for a long, long time.

Fields, in "It's a Gift," is head of a thriving family who eat him out of house and home, plague his days and torment his nights. He is also the proprietor of the town's leading grocery store.

He has always cherished the dream of owning a California orange ranch where he could luxuriate and just watch the oranges grow and, when his daughter's young man comes to him with a "gyp" proposition, he swallows it hook, line and sinker.

The family is transported across the country in a dilapidated, prewar automobile. When they finally arrive at the ranch, miraculously alive and uninjured, they discover it to be a barren bit of sun-baked desert.

But Fields is not licked yet. And by good fortune and ingenuity he manages to acquire the orange ranch from whose porch he can watch the oranges grow--through the bottom of a glass.

The other attraction for these evenings is "The Silver Streak," a thrilling railroad story based on the record run of the Burlington "Zephyr," the streamlined train which shattered all existing records. records. In the film are Sally Sally Blane, Charles Starret and William Farnum.

"—I REALLY am nervous," Madge Crowell admitted to herself as she dropped one of the ornaments she was hanging on the Christmas tree. "Well, who wouldn't be in my place—Ben has been gone more then five years—be he'll find me changed—that he'll be disappointed. . . . I—I couldn't bear that."

"What are you talking to yourself about?" A boyish voice spoke at Madge's elbow. "Is Christmas having its effect upon you, or is it the thought of a certain young man who is coming this evening?"

"Both, I guess," Madge answered lightly. Then, turning to her brother, she spoke more seriously. "Richard, do—do you think Ben will have changed very much—do you think he will like me as well as he used to?"

"Well, I shouldn't be surprised if he has become a little bit tanned from the African climate, or if he has grown a mustache, or got a bit stouter, but as to whether he will like you as much as he used to—I'd say 'no.' He's bound to like you a lot better, that is, if he's kept his eyesight."

"Of all the foolish, flattering brothers! I should have known better than to ask you such a question!" But Madge's eyes were pools of dancing light as she looked at her brother. "Just for such a flippant answer, I'm going to put you at the task of cleaning up all this mess. I—I really must run up and dress; the clock seems to be running a race."

Madge's wardrobe was not extensive, yet it took her some time to decide on what to wear. She finally chose a simple blue gown. She remembered that Ben had always liked her in blue; he used to say that it matched her eyes. . . . But that was long ago; they were both little more than children then. Would he find her as desirable now as he used to—would his eyes glow with love and pleasure as he looked into her face? Well, she would soon find out; he was due almost any moment now.

Her heart pounded as the door bell rang. Nervously she hurried down the wide steps. In a moment Ben was clasping her hands and whispering words that she thrilled to hear. And as blue eyes met brown in a long tender look, Madge knew that she was going to have the very happiest Christmas of her life.
