LEARNED LABORERS.

Professions Represented Among the Members of a Railroad Gang.

Superintendent Elliot Holbrook, of the Baltimore and Ohio road, in the course of an interesting chat said he did not believe any road in the country could turn up, like the Baltimore and Ohio, a section gang with a county coroner, a doctor of divinity, an ex-member of the legislature and an emergency physician. He has been out along the line for a week and tells a story about an experience he had while his car was lying at Sand Patch a night or two ago. The foreman of the gang came up to him and said:

"There is more talent to the square inch in the gang on the fur side of that mountain than I have met with since I was at the last state convention."

Mr. Holbrook asked the man what he meant, and the foreman continued:

"I was coming up the hill from work with my gang a bit ago, and when a few rods below Philson's we found the body of a man lying beside the track. His body was yet warm, and I said, 'Wish I had a doctor here,' said I half to myself.

"'I guess I can answer in a pinch,' said one of the men in the gang.

"'What do you know about such things?' I asked with some show of contempt.

"'Oh, I took a term in the old Jefferson Medical college years ago, but didn't take to practice and quit.' All this time he had been rummaging the body, and in a minute said, 'He's dead.'

"'Well, I'll leave two or three of you here to watch the body while I get a coroner or a squire to hold an inquest,' said I. 'The rest of you can come with me.'

"'I guess as I'm coroner of the county I'll do,' said another mud covered citizen.

"'You!' said I to him.

"'Oh, yes; I was elected last fall.'

"'Well, go ahead.' He took six of the gang and held an inquest and returned a verdict of accidental death.

"'Well, that's done; put him in the hand car and we'll take him up and get a coffin and a preacher and bury him,' I said to the men.

"'What's the use?' said a man of the gang who hadn't said a word till now. 'I am a minister and always have a Bible with me. Let's hold the services right here. Let the others dig a grave up there under that big hemlock, and we'll bury him without further trouble.'

"Acting on his suggestion the grave was soon dug, the body carried to its side, and then the 'minister' took hold. He read a chapter, gave out a hymn, as he called it, which the men sung, and then he delivered one of the most feelin and appropriatest funeral sermons ever heard. It was out of sight, and nearly every one of us was purty moist before he quit. There wasn't nothin in it at all resemblin my church, but it caught me, 'cause it was simple, and was powerful as the dynamite we had been using all day.

"Like the doctor, the Gospel fellow had had his innings in a school and seminary, but a scrape had downed him, and he was unbeknownst to himself doing really big now. What struck me all of a heap was the fact that I, who was bossin the gang, could only 'touch the pen' to make my signature on the payrolls, and all the fellows under me were either M. D.'s, D. D.'s or D. B.'s. Great country this!"—Pittsburg Post.

A Volcanic Legend.

Chimborazo, the "pride of the Andes," at one time thought to be the highest mountain peak in the world, is now reckoned as being only 21,424 feet above sea level, which is certainly enough to give it an air of majesty if not of mystery. But the natives of that region have a curious belief—a legend which tells them that "Chimbo" was once a full mile higher than he is at the present time. When Pizarro invaded the "land of the incas" Chimborazo reared his majestic head between 25,000 and 30,000 feet into the rarified atmosphere, but that invader's crowning piece of infamy, the strangling of the last of the incas, brought down the wrath of the gods, who rent the giant peak from center to circumference, throwing down great masses of stones and reducing its height by about one-fifth.

At the same time the apex of the mountain, the former resting place of "the Inca's Head," was cursed, and until this day no man has ever reached within 3,000 feet of its summit. "The Inca's Head" is a massive piece of granite lying on one side of the peak. Tradition says it once formed the apex.—St. Louis Republic.

Nice Points in Laundrying.

The sun is a great restorer and vivifier, but it should not be allowed to shine on either feather pillows or underlinen that is to be worn again. These are best aired in the shade. You may sun the sheets from off the bed, but not the nightdresses. It will play havoc also with the delicate mauve muslins which have been such favorites this summer, and permanently pale all light blues and rose colored cottons. These must be dried in the shade. Some laundresses will perhaps not understand this without repeated and weekly directions. Bathing suits and white clothes can have as much of the sun on the clothesline as possible, but white flannels, if you would not have them yellow, must be hung on the shady side of the garden. In city yards there is always a time of day when there is shade somewhere; in the broader bleaching grounds of country houses you will often have to stretch the lines in the shadow of a house or under a tree to secure this.

City and Country Markets.

Mr. Citiman—We are getting perfect butter now. Buy it of a farmer who comes into the city twice a week. I presume you have good butter right along.

Mr. Suburb—First rate.

"Make it yourself?"

"No; buy it in the city and carry it home."—New York Weekly.
