Agricultural Reading.

Sow Corn for Feeding.

Hardly another item of farm labor is so important as this, for June.—Pastures are usually short, the last of August and September, and even in the best of grass years, the green succulent stalks of corn are a welcome addition to the feed of every grazing animal. If not absolutely needed for green fodder, then the stalks can be kept for winter use; and, if cut seasonably and properly cured, they are nearly as valuable as English hay.—The ground can hardly be made to produce so much valuable fodder, at so little expense, with any other crop.

The ground should be in good heart: if not so, let it be manured with 10 to 20 cords of stable manure per acre. The corn is sometimes sown broadcast, but the crop is not as large as when sown in drills, 2 to 3 feet apart, and cultivated 2 or 3 times, before it is too large for the operation. If fodderd from the field, the cutting may commence about the time the tassel makes its appearance and may be continued until the ears are glazed. If it is to be cured for winter it should be cut just as the ears are beginning to silk. If left later, the stalks will not cure well. As a rule, it should not stand later than the middle of September, at which time the season is sufficiently warm to cure the stalks rapidly.

There is a choice in the varieties of corn for this purpose. The small kinds that have been cultivated mainly for the grain, for many generations, are not so good as the larger varieties. Some use the Southern corn altogether, for this purpose, and it does well. Others use sweet corn only, thinking there is more nourishment in the stalks. We have used, for several years, the Stowell's Evergreen Sweet Corn, and, on the whole, prefer it to any variety we have ever experimented with. It yields an enormous burden of fodder, and is one of the best articles for feeding swine, as well as neat cattle. Horses, also, are very fond of it, and it may economically make up half their food while it lasts. But the variety is not a very essential matter. Sow sweet corn if you have it, or can readily procure it. But by all means sow corn and keep up a full flow of milk in September and October.

Millet for fodder.

This plant has an unfortunate history in this country. Its several varieties have been seized upon by swindlers, who, by naming it Honey Blade Grass, Japanese Wheat, Egyptian Corn, etc., and publishing lying pamphlets and advertisements, have duped purchasers into paying exorbitant prices, and reaping disappointment. Nevertheless, millet has undoubtedly much value as a forage crop. Conflicting accounts are given as to its excellence for feeding. Some of the correspondents of the Agriculturist deem it equal, or even superior to timothy hay, if cut at the right time and properly cured; others are of opinion that it is positively injurious to stock, particularly horses. Thus, according to the Dubuque Herald, it was resolved by the Dubuque Farmers' Club, after a full discussion last Winter, that "the cultivation of Hungarian grass, (German millet,) is injudicious." But from the weight of testimony offered, we are of opinion, that properly cultivated and cured, it affords a cheap and safe method of adding to the winter's supply of fodder, and that it is well fitted for cutting and feeding green, to supply deficiency in pasture.

It may be sown after the season for the main grain crops is past. The middle of June is not too late to see cure a good crop in this latitude. It is more exhaustive of the soil than clover or grass, and therefore land intended for it should be liberally enriched. For a hay crop, ten qts. of seed per acre is none too much; thick seeding gives a less rank growth of stalk. It may very well occupy land this Summer, which is wanted to seed down with winter grain, or with oats next year, but where it was impracticable to plant corn. It would be greatly preferable to naked summer fallow. It might not be advisable to substitute this crop for oats, nor to disturb a good sod for its introduction; but where manure is plenty, and there is a piece of poor pasture, or other land unoccupied, try millet.

Wheat to Chess—To the Point.

"Mayben," of Page County, Iowa, sends definite directions for producing the transmutation of wheat into chess. His plan is easily tried, and if as successful, as he believes it will be, it will entitle him to the reward offered in the Agriculturist. He says, the breaking of the tap root at a particular period of growth, will generally induce the change, and directs as follows: As soon as the wheat stems begin to joint, generally pull them until the top-root breaks, and then tramp back the roots into the soil. Go on to a plot and treat thus several alternate sections of a foot or two square, and at harvest time you will find good wheat on the plot where the tap-root was broken in the manner described.—He thinks the running of a knife under the stems to sever the tap-root, will produce the same result, but has not yet tried this. Mr. M. also undertakes to show, how the combined effects of frost, water, etc., have broken the tap-roots, in the cases already published. We have no faith in this prescription, but give the process, that any who desire, may expeeiment.

SAVING CLOVER SEED.—As clover forms such an important element in farm economy, both as fodder and a green manure, it is important that our cultivators should more generally raise their own seed.—What need of any one paying from five to eight dollars a bushel to others, when he can raise an abundance at only a trifling outlay! A farmer might about as well buy his seed-corn, wheat, oats, etc. Our climate and soil are favorable for the growth of the seed.

All that is needed, is to lay off a certain portion of the field where the yield is clean and good; and, having cut the first crop of fodder and cured it, allow the second, which is most productive, to grow and ripen its seed. The yield will range from four to eight bushels of seed to the acre, according to the strength of the land.—The first crop of fodder should be harvested (or it may be eaten off by sheep or cattle,) by the middle of May or the first of June, so as to give the second crop a sufficient time to mature its seed; for if not ripe before hard frosts come, it will be injured. Of course if the land is poor, it should be well manured in the Spring or Fall previous.

Of the several machines now in use for gathering and cleaning the seed, we need not express any decided preference.—Wagener's is an excellent harvester, and Crawford's is a good huller, and there may be others equally good in market.—Farmers who have only a little seed to hull, can get along by using the ordinary threshing machine, modifying the running of it a little for the purpose; the work, however, has to be gone over with several times in order to get the seed perfectly clean. But if the farmer wishes only to save enough for his own use, he need not be careful to clean it nicely; it will vegetate very well if sown in the chaff. Still again, for small farmers who wish to raise a little seed, but not take the trouble to clean it, a home-made machine can be got up at little cost. A Kentucky farmer with a Yankee genius, thus describes one, in the Louisville Journal: 'Make a box, say three feet wide, four feet long, and one foot deep, with the forward end left out. This should be placed on runners about nine inches wide, forming a kind of sled; teeth made of hard wood, about fifteen inches long, one inch thick, and one inch wide at the top, and half an inch wide on the under side. These should be placed about a quarter of an inch apart, forming a kind of comb by which the heads are gathered.'

CURING CLOVER—AN OLD NOTION.—A subscriber communicates the following extract from an agricultural almanac printed in 1809, and asks the opinion of the Agriculturalist upon its practicability:

'To preserve Clover in its green state; take in your grass from the swath, cut it up as you would straw in a cutting apartment, or in hogsheads, giving a pound of salt to every hundred weight. By preserving it thus, you will have a beautiful green hay, exceedingly fragrant and nourishing, and superior to any other fodder.

Wouldn't it be something of a job to run the clover from a ten acre field through a cutter, with the mercury at 90 degrees? How many hogsheads would be required? The coopers' trade would flourish where this plan was practiced. One quart of salt to a hundred of hay would not prevent fermentation. To save green clover packed in a large mass, would require salt enough to pickle it,——the 'fragrance' under such circumstances would be imaginary, and the 'nourishment' problematical.

TRANSPLANTING WHEAT.—A correspondent of the London Agricultural Gazette suggests that it may be found advantageous to transplant wheat in the Spring, to occupy spots which have been winter-killed. Each living plant which has tillered, would furnish from six to ten or more 'sets.' The experiment was tried on a model farm near Dublin a few years ago, and the crop was as good as from a field sown in the usual way. This seems like an absurd proposition in this country, where land is plenty and labor scarce, but in Great Britain, where, in some sections, women and children are glad to find employment at 8 to 12 cents a day, and land is to costly to be left idle, the plan is thought worthy of consideration.

SOWING SOAKED SEED.—It is often advantageous to soak onion, carrot, and other small seeds, which unfits them for sowing in the seed-sowers or drills. But if the seed is mixed with slaked lime, or coal ashes, or wood ashes, or with fine dry soil it will soon become coated, and run readily from the drilling machine. It is useful to drill in some concentrated manure with the seed.

THE STATE ARMS.

Proclamation of Gov. Hicks.

STATE OF MARYLAND, EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, FREDERICK, June 7, 1861.

Whereas, Some of the arms and accoutrements belonging to the State have been placed beyond the control of the constituted authorities, as, is believed, for disloyal purposes, by persons connected with some of the military companies of the city of Baltimore, in violation of their duties as soldiers and as citizens; and, whereas, a very large number of the arms and accoutrements of the State still remain in the hands of the members of the various military companies of said city, some of whom are known to be disloyal to their country; and, whereas, there are just grounds for apprehending that a portion of said arms and accoutrements are about to be carried beyond the limits of this State for hostile purposes, and others are about to be destroyed or concealed—

Now, therefore, I, Thomas Holliday Hicks, Governor of Maryland, by virtue of the powers vested in me by the law of the State, do, hereby, by this my proclamation, warn and enjoin upon all citizens of Baltimore, the loyal as well as the disloyal, having in their hands and possession any arms and accoutrements belonging to the State, to surrender and deliver up the same to Col. E. R. Petherbridge, who is fully authorized to reclaim and take possession of such arms and accoutrements; and to take all necessary steps, on behalf of the State, to secure from those to whom said arms and accoutrements have been confided, a strict compliance with the condition of their bonds for the preservation of such arms and accoutrements, and for their re-delivery to the State, whenever thereto required by my order.

My likeness has been repeatedly taken by different Artists in various ways, but I have never yet had one which presents so true to nature, all the features and expressions of countenance as this.

ATTENTION is invited to the following statement, and the company testimonials in favor of these

CELEBRATED AMERICAN WATCHES.

A Gold Medal was awarded the company by the Massachusetts Medical Association, 1856.—A Gold Medal was also awarded them by the American Institute at New York, in 1857. The Company also received the first premium—a Gold Medal; from the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, in 1858.

Those watches have now been in the market for nearly ten years, during which time they have been tested, as to Accuracy, Durability and Reliability, in every conceivable manner, and have proved themselves to be the most satisfactory time pieces ever offered to the public.

This result has been brought about by a strict application of mechanical science to the construction of the watch from its very inception, rendering it, when finished, in all its proportions, and necessarily as perfect a time-keeper as it is possible to make.

Mathematically Correct,

The Company have tested their Watches, in many instances, by actual daily noting, and the result of this test has been that they have exhibited a rate equal in regularity to the best marine chronometor.

N. B.—We have just introduced a elaborately finished, and thinner than any we have heretofore produced, with several improvements calculated to secure the greatest accuracy of performance, and to preveni the usual accuracy of performance, and to prevent the usual accidents and derangements to which foreign watches are liable.

Letter from Paul Morphy, the celebrated Chess Player.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15th, 1859.

Mr. R. E. Robbins, Treas. Am. Watch Co:—Dear Sir:—The American Watch No. 9240, presented me by the New York Chess Club; proved to be a most reliable and accurate time-keeper; almost unnecessarily so for ordinary purposes. It is now nearly five months since it came into my possession, and during that period its variation from standard time has been but a trifle more than half a minute. The following is a record of its performance. It was set June 3d correctly:—
