DENTON, MARYLAND:

THURSDAY MORNING:::December 16, 1869.

ATTENTION, ALL.

The present year is drawing rapidly to a close, and we earnestly entreat all who are indebted to us, either for subscription, or job work, to come forward and settle at once. Honest people generally like to "square up" once in each year; and it is this desire which prompts this appeal to our patrons. We owe a number of small bills, and our ability to pay them depends upon the promtitude with which our delinquents settle up. Come, then, friends, and lend us a helping hand.—Don't hang back, thinking your neighbor will settle his bill, and this will be sufficient. Your debt is as just a one as his, and we need the assistance of all. We have performed our part of the contract, advancing the money to do it; now perform yours by settling up back accounts.

ELECTIONS were held a couple of weeks ago in Misssissippi and Texas for Governer, State officers and members of Congress.—Full returns are not yet in, but it is known to a certainty that the Republicans were successful. All hail, Mississippi and Texas!

A BILL has been offered in Congress to increase the currency $44,000,000. Financially this is a troublesome period it is true, but we can see but little good that the increase will accomplish. It will only postpone the time of resumption, without ameliorating in the least the condition of the country when resumption is reached. The battle is now half fought, with gold at twenty-three, and any inflation of the currency would but advance the premium on gold in a corresponding ratio. Let us resume without an inflation.

BALTIMORE AND THE KENT CO. R. R.

A message from Mayor Banks, covering a communication from Senator Vickers asking for the indorsement by Baltimore city of the Kent County Railroad bonds to the amount of $250,000 or $300,000, was read in the 1st Branch of the City Council on Monday. The object sought, as stated by Mr. Vickers (who is President of the road) is to "turn the trade of that growing section to Baltimore instead of Philadelphia.

It seems to us that the plan proposed is the very worst that could possibly be devised. As at present situated, with no railroads nearer than the Delaware and the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore roads to divert the trade of that section, both of which are too remote to affect it materially, it cannot otherwise than flow to Baltimore. The two lines of steamers—one on Chester, the other on Sassafras rivers—together with the vast number of sail vessels which belong in these waters, are amply sufficient to meet, and do meet, all the requirements of the trade of Kent county. No part of the county is more than ten miles from navigation; and its close proximity to Baltimore renders a trip to that city by water both speedy and pleasant. But the very instant that Baltimore expends her money to construct the Kent county railroad, that instant she places footfalls for herself to stumble in. And why? Simply because without the road the trade cannot conveniently go anywhere else than to Baltimore, but with the road built and in running order a quicker and equally as convenient outlet is afforded for it to Philadelphia. During the time navigation is closed, it would be necessary to first proceed to Wilmington in order to reach Baltimore; and here every advantage is in favor of Philadelphia. From Wilmington to Baltimore the distance is seventy-two miles, while to Philadelphia it is only twenty-eight miles, and the difference in both freight and passenger tariffs would be considerable. Now the produce is hurried off to Baltimore before navigation closes; the railroad would offer equal conveniences, especially along its line, to the steamboats, and Baltimore would find its consignments of grain "growing small by degrees and beautifully less."

Hence we think it will be a poor stroke of policy in Baltimore city to aid this road in the least.

If Baltimore needs and desires the trade of this Peninsula, there is a cheaper and more expedient method of obtaining it than by taking hold of the lateral branches of the Delaware road and completing them. Her true interest lies in keeping the Peninsular trade away from the Delaware road, and the further the better. The trade of Eastern Maryland may be secured by the construction of a road parallel with the Del. road, and in no other way. If Baltimore wishes the trade of Kent county, then let her invest in the proposed Elkton and Massey's road, and she will secure it. If she wishes the trade of the Peninsula, let her assist in extending that road on down to some point of favorable intersection with the Delaware road, and she will obtain a just share. But by no means can the completion of lateral branches from the Delaware railroad be made to benefit her. On the contrary, it will have a strong tendency to withdraw from her that which she now enjoys. Let her reflect upon what these other branch roads have done and beware.

We do not wish to be understood as saying aught to discourage the Kent county people in their railroad enterprise. We are a firm believer in the "great civilizer," and think the road ought to be built, and that speedily. It is the impolicy of Baltimore assisting in the work, with the expectation that [illegible] be thereby benefitted, that we are [illegible] out.

A VISIT FROM A MURDERER.

Goldsborough, the Murderer of Marsh, in Town--He Tarries five Hours--Singular Demeanor--His Idenity Fully Proven after his Departure--He is Pursued but Escapes.

The quiet rural town of Denton rarely ever enjoys a sensation. Its citizens, possessing a veneration for the manners and customs of its founders, and honest and law-abiding in their simplicity, daily pursue the peace and quiet of their avocations without one single occurrence to mar their wonted public tranquility. Occasionally, some travelling circus or menagerie—some grand magic lantern show with a half dozen illy-executed and worse displayed representations—some patent medicine troupe, entertain us in their rude way; but seldom do we enjoy a first-class sensation.

Wednesday last was an exception to the general rule, and our community then enjoyed a sensation of the "first water." The fact that a murderer had been running at large in our midst for several hours inspired all hearts with wonder and dread—wonder that he could be so bold, and dread lest he should return again. Nothing but Goldsborough was talked of or thought of, and little knots of people could be seen in every store discussing his identity, or speculating as to his intentions.

About noon, two strangers were seen to drive up to the hotel in this town. Before alighting one inquired of the ostler, who had come to take their horse, if a gunning party had been here from Easton. Upon being answered in the negative, they exclaimed they were "all in time," and alighted and entered the hotel. One of them (who afterwards proved to be Goldsborough) registered as Geo. Bannister, of Philadelphia. Assuming at once the most friendly relations with all present, he began talking away in the most harum-scarum manner, and invited all up to take a drink. In payment for the liquor he proffered an hundred dollar bill, but the bartender being unable to make the change or to procure it in the town, the note was handed back to him, when he produced a five hundred dollar bill, saying "get this changed then." He seemed to have plenty of money, and spent it freely. Sitting down by the stove, he pulled off his boots to warm his feet, when a pistol dropped out upon floor. It was noticed that he had on an abundance of clothing.

He had been in town but a short time when he entered the clothing store of W. L. Taylor, and purchased an entire new suit of clothing. Whilst making the purchase he appeared as one guilty of some heinous crime, and paid more attention to the door than to the clothing or the price. Subsequently he purchased a pair of boots from Garey & Millington's. Whilst in the clothing store of Mr. Taylor he purchased a breastpin and set of ear-rings, and carrying them into the store of Mr. Todd requested his clerk—E. L. White, of Milton, Sussex County—to endorse upon the package the name of Miss Mary Howard, Houston's X Roads, Sussex County, Del. Upon Mr. White's telling him he was well acquainted in that section, Goldsborough asked him to accompany him about at night, saying he had plenty of money and all he had to do was to ask for it. Before leaving he was very particular to inquire at what time the store was closed, and told Mr. White he would call for him when his business hours were over.

The time intervening between this and supper he spent in conversation with our citizens and parading the streets. He paid a young man five dollars to accompany him. His conversation was of the most contradictory and suspicious character, and his entire demeanor was well befitting a drunken man or a lunatic.

During his stay he went into the barber shop to get shaved, and the barber says had his beard been allowed to grow it would have been red. It was also noticed that his hair had been dyed, but had grown out sufficiently to indicate its natural color—light.

Whilst at supper he conversed quite freely and pleasantly with those present at the table. In the course of his conversation he said he was going to Wye Mills, and upon being asked told his questioner that he was a relative of Jno. Keet's. He was subsequently asked if he was a brother of Keet's, to which he replied that he was not, but a half-brother of John Goldsborough's. This caused those present at the table to look at him steadfastly, when he modified his former remark by saying that he was in reality only a cousin of John Goldsborough's, but having been very kind to them they all called him brother.

After this conversation he appeared restless and uneasy and anxious to get away from town. He had previously employed Mr. R. K. Richardson, sheriff of this county, to convey him to Wye Mills, and the carriage had been standing in readiness for some time. Leaving the supper table, he quickly settled his bill, put his room key into his pocket, saying he would return that night, and jumping into the carriage with Mr. R. was driven away. Having cleared the town, he seemed possessed with the idea that he had revealed who he was and offered his driver seven dollars additional to what he had already paid him to drive faster.

As is natural in all country towns upon the departure of a stranger, especially one who had acted in the wild and reckless manner of Goldsborough, our citizens began descanting on his conduct and various surmises were made as to who he was. A comparison of his conduct at different places would suggest the name of one person to one, whilst others would say that cannot be. Finally curiosity culminated in the searching of the departed guest's room, and evidences indubitable proved that our citizens had been visited by the murderer Goldsborough. Upon the back of a chair was thrown carelessly a vest upon which was written plainly the name of John C. Goldsborough, and in his valise were found chicken, beef, bread, pepper and salt, and a large amount of underclothing. He was evidently well prepared for a long camping out.

On the way to Wye Mills he asked Mr. Richardson why the people called him sheriff, and upon ascertaining that he was the Sheriff of Caroline county, he manifested his surprise by saying "the h—l you are?" He then began to talk about his pistols, how many he had and their excellent qualities, and seemed anxious to know if Mr. Richardson had any. Mr. Richardson told him he had—was never without one—and this seemed to satisfy him.

Between Denton and Hillsborough, Goldsborough took seven drinks of liquor, and fell asleep several times along the way. When he had reached Wye Mills he was so sound asleep that he had to be shaken in order to awakened. Had Mr. Richardson known who he was what a fine opportunity he had to arrest him.

There is no doubt about this person being Goldsborough. When he had reached Keet's, he went into the house, and Mr. Keet's came out to Mr. Richardson, and asked him "where he brought him (Goldsborough) from?" Mr. R. replied, "from Denton."—Keets then wanted to know what he was going to do with him, saying they would catch him. Mr. R. then inquired who he was, and was told it was Goldsborough. He was then invited into the house to warm himself, and whilst sitting by the stove Keets re-entered the room and said it was Mr. Howard. He then rejoined Goldsborough in another room, where they entered into a lively conversation, and Mr. R. could frequently hear Goldsborough say, "then you think you will pay the seven hundred dollars and take back the note in a few days?"

After it was ascertained that the singular visitor was Goldsborough, parties set out in pursuit of him. One of the parties returned the same night, but the last did not return until late Thursday afternoon. Nothing was seen of Goldsborough, and no tidings could be learned of him. He has thus escaped, and the people of Sussex county have been cheated out of an execution which many seemed very anxious to witness. We learn that Goldsborough has left Talbot for New Orleans, but this must be received with some degree of allowance.

Small Fruit Recorder and Cottage Gardener.

We are in receipt of this valuable little monthly paper, edited by A. M. Purdy, (successor to Purdy & Johnston) of Palmyra, N. Y. It contains the most practical articles in relation to this subject we ever saw, and should be in the hands of every person who has a garden of even a rod square. The price is only 50 cents a year. Send stamp for a specimen copy and circular containing offer to those getting up clubs. We notice any person getting up a club of six has one copy gratis.

He also sends out a valuable little work called the SMALL FRUIT INSTRUCTOR, which has received the highest testimonials from the most prominent horticulturists and pomologists in the United States. It tells how to plant and grow all kinds of small furits.—Price only 10 cents. Address for either of the above, party.

AN OFFICIAL STATEMENT, furnished by Freight Agent Brown, of the Delaware Railroad, shows that 2,087,980 baskets of peaches, and 743,541 quarts of berries, were shipped from the Peninsula the last season via that railroad. This does not include the shipments by water, which are estimated to have been unusually heavy, owing to the bitter feeling against the Railroad Company and the cheapness of water transit. Who will longer deny that the Peninsula is the great Fruit Garden of the Continent?

W. M. KENNARD, 304 and 306 Market street, Wilmington, is now offering his entire line of Carpets at greatly reduced rates. Carpets that have been selling up to this date at $1.25, will now be sold at $100. Lowell best super extras, price everywhere $150, will now be sold at $130 and $135, according to style, the quality the same. English Tapestry, Brussels and American Tapestry will be sold at a great reduction in price.—This stock is to be sold, and those in want will save money by giving this house a call.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE GRIER, of the Supreme Court, has tendered his resignation to the President, to take effect February 1st, 1870. The duty will thus devolve upon President Grant of filling the vacancies in that court, and it is understood that his appointees will be ex-Secretary Stanton and Attorney-General Hoar. The nomination of these gentlemen will meet the popular approval.

THE President has appointed Hon. George A. Pearce, of Cumberland, Allegany county, Maryland, United States Judge for the Fourth Judicial Circuit, comprisig the States of Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.—Judge Pearre is about fifty years of age.

THE SCHOOL BOARD of the city of Cumberland (Md.) have prohibited the reading of the Bible in the public schools. We suggest that they adopt the Police Gazette, or the Police News. These, possibly, would accord more with their tastes.

WM. B. PHILLIPS formerly Postmaster of Cambridge, has been convicted, in the U. S. Circuit Court, of Baltimore City, for the embezzlement of the funds of the Money Order department of the office, the amount of over $3.000.
