American Union

J. M. EMERSON, Editor and Proprietor.

DENTON, MARYLAND:

Thursday Morning, Juue 15th, 1871.

For Sale Cheap.

We offer for sale very low the Press upon which The Union has been printed for the last three years. It is a Smith Hand Press, 22 by 32, in good order. The universally neat appearance of The Union will attest this fact.—Our only reason for selling is because we have no use for the Press, having been compelled to purchase a new one in order that we might enlarge our paper. Address all inquiries to The Union, Denton, Md.

The Legislature of New Hampshire has elected Jas. A. Weston Governor of the State by a vote of 167 to 154. It will be remembered that no choice was made by the popular voice at the election held in the Spring.

The Republican State Central Committee will meet in Baltimore on the 21st of June instead of the 12th, as stated by us last week. We were led into the error by the Baltimore American, the proof-reader having failed to detect the mistake. A full attendance is desired.

One thousand dollars from less than two acres of land! Who would believe it? And yet it is so. This is the amount of money realized by one of our Caroline countians from the sale of strawberries picked from less than two acres of ground. Small fruits pay, and our farmers should devote more attention to them.

Some literary thief came into our office one day last week unbidden and took away copies of the Wilmington Commercial and other papers which we had laid aside to make our "jottings" up from. We condemn the theft, but cannot but admire the discriminating abilities of the thief.—We hope he will not trouble us again.

Electioneering has proven such an expensive job to the Democrats in Kent county that the party has determined to make its nominations on the 19th inst. as a matter of economy. This means, of course, that whiskey has flowed freely, and the aspirants are well nigh "busted." And sensible, reflecting men ought to complete the job on the 19th by nominating good men to fill the offices.

A Boston paper felicitates itself with the idea that the good old State of Maryland is paying off its State debt. But how is it doing it? Simply by selling off the State's interest in public works. We shouldn't consider it much matter for rejoicing were we compelled, by reason of our reckless extravagance, to sell our property to pay off our indebtedness. But yet this is only what the State of Maryland is doing, which has furnished such a refreshing morsel to a Boston paper. How easily some people are satisfied!

Gen. Sherman, from his far-off habitation in the West, refuses to accept the Presidential nomination at the hands of any party. Democratic President-makers will have, therefore, to look around for another candidate; and if they will heed the silent admonitions of the past, they will select a man from their own party and not seek to seduce Republicans from their party allegiance by promises of elevation to positions which they have not the power to fill.—They should have gathered wisdom from the example of Andrew Johnson, learning thereby that Republicans follow not men but immortal principles.

We observe that the Centreville Citizen which, a few weeks ago, begun the use of the patented outsides has abandoned the system. Let's hear what you think of it, Brother Hand. As for us we think it an abomination. There is but one paper now in the State which has its outsides printed away from its own office—The Cambridge Chronicle. Come, Brother Sullivane, this won't do. We know you can get up a better paper yourself than those New York incompetents can for you. So quit the system that it may be said of Maryland newspapers, "they thrive by their own energies and prosper in proportion to the amount of energy displayed."

Yielding to the unanimous wish of the party in Ohio, ex-Senator Wade has consented to accept the Republican nomination for Governor of that State. Mr. Wade is most popular with the Ohioans, and we shall be greatly disappointed if he is not triumphantly elected. Headed by Vallandigham, the Democrats of the Buckeye State are moving in their "new departure" of acceptance of the Amendments to the Constitution and the progressive work accomplished by the Republican party. The two parties are, therefore, standing upon platforms not widely dissimilar, but we cannot believe the good people of Ohio will be duped into the support of men who have professed conversion to measures which, until their accomplishment, they not only vehemently but disreputably opposed.

History is repeating itself! When the colored people of the South were emancipated from the thraldom of slavery, Democrats everywhere denounced the measure and declared unending hostility to it. But, to-day, they are not only reconciled to the wisdom and justice of emancipation, but would not, were it in their power, re-enslave the colored people. Nor was their hostility to the enfranchisment of the colored race any the less bitter or virulent, but their compliance with the requirements of the XVth Amendment is more rapid and their conversion to its justice more sudden. The Democratic party of three of the great States of the Union has already given in its adhesion to the Amendment through State Conventions, and others are halting between two opinions. A few more revolutions of the wheels of time will obliterate the word "Democrat" from this Temperance.

Public Discussions—The community deeply agitated upon the subject.

A public meeting to discuss the most feasible plan to better regulate or entirely suppress the traffic in intoxicating liquors was held at the Court House on Friday evening last. An audience quite respectable in numbers was present, including several ladies, and the discussion was participated in by some of our best and most prominent citizens. Every one seemed deeply interested in the subject, and the discussion was quite animated.

When the meeting had been called to order, Dr. Tarr was called for by several of the audience, who appeared and said he had come into the meeting as a spectator, and did not propose to engage in the discussion unless it was proposed to accomplish the desired object by legislation. This he should most vehemently oppose. The Dr. then retired in order that the discussion might be opened by those who had plans to mitigate the evil to propose.

No one seeming disposed to lead off, the Rev. Mr. Gardner took the floor and proposed what some would call a political enactment. He reviewed the different methods which had been employed to stay the tide of intemperance—moral suasion, education and the different temperance organizations—but having tried all these and failed, he was in favor of carrying the question to the ballot-box—not by the organization of a temperance party, or the enlisting of either political party in support of the temperance cause, but by submitting to each voter, after he shall have deposited his ballot, the question, "Are you in favor of or opposed to license?" his answer to be recorded; and if, after the polls are closed, it shall be ascertained that a majority of the citizens in any election district are opposed to the sale of intoxicating drinks no license to sell shall be granted, and vice versa. This, the speaker contended, would remove the subject from party politics and place it before the people upon its merits alone He belonged to neither political party, and was unwilling to entrust this question to either for neither was ready or willing to do it justice. He was not opposed to any plan which possessed the efficacy to subdue intemperance, but he thought his the least objectionable and the most potent for good.

Mr. Conner concurred with Mr. Gardner, but would go even further. He was in favor of a law to prevent distillation.—For 200 years the effort had been made to educate the people into the belief that intemperance was an evil, the question had been presented in every form, and yet the monster was abroad in the land. Why wait longer? The taking away the license to sell would be an advance, but he wished to eradicate the evil entirely. He was astonished at the five gallon proposition, and didn't believe a vote could be got on it.

Dr. Tarr said he would not discountenance or discourage any plan to limit the use of intoxicating drinks. The ballot-box he said had been employed in aid of prohibition and had signally failed. He then referred to the prohibitory law of Delaware and insisted that there was more drunkenness under it than ever. Whiskey was abundant everywhere, and hotel-keepers served it to their guests in large bottles labeled "black ink.". He said there was no way to reach the evil. It can't be made a direct issue, for one party or the other must assume the responsibility. For the remedy we must go back to the cause, and it would be found to arise from two sources—the struggles and difficulties through which we have lately passed, and the want of occupation. The young men who drink are unoccupied; give them occupation and so much drinking will cease. The Dr. concluded by saying that a remedy must be sought in its use and not in its manufacture, and deprecated any attempt at interference on the part of the Legislature.

Dr. Booth was well pleased with some of Dr. Tarr's views. He regarded the appetite for intoxicating drinks a disease. He was in favor of any plan which would insure success.

Mr. Kemp had no plan of his own to suggest. He regarded intemperance as a crying evil, but was opposed to restricting the use of ardent spirits by legislation or the ballot-box. He conceived the question to be a question of morals, and believed it to be impossible to legislate men into morality. Education was the lever by which the evil must be suppressed, and it was a mistake to attempt to do by legislation that which belongs to the christian church.

Mr. Conner said Mr. Kemp had made an able argument, but his premises were wrong. The power to license, he maintained, originated with the people, and the people had the power to suppress the license when they deemed it expedient. If they had the power to legislate the sale of liquor into existence, they had the power to legislate it out of existeuce. The right to petition was inherent in the people.

Dr. Tarr said that if the State were to prohibit the distillation of spirituous liquors the business might be continued under the laws to provide revenue for the general government, but was corrected in this by some of the audience. The U. S. Revenue laws in relation to this subject were so framed as not to infringe upon any existing State laws. He coincided with Dr. Booth in the belief that the use of alcoholic drinks was a disease, and thought the proper remedy was to be sought within the Inebriate Asylum. He then spoke of the old Lacedemonian plan of dealing with intemperance—that of making the servants drunk and parading them though the streets in order to disgust the rising generation with the pitiable spectacle. [If there were any virtue in this, the youth of Denton ought to be models of temperance.] The Dr. would favor a law to prohibit adulteration, and recommended the growth of grapes from which to manufacture wine of natural vint-

Wilmington Advertisers.—Wilmington merchants are beginning to appreciate the real value of The Union as an advertising medium:

Mr. J. P. Doughten advertises his celebrated paragon shirt, and guarantees a perfect fit. He will send rules for self-measure upon application. He also has a large and varied assortment of gent's furnishing goods—nothing inferior to Philadelphia houses, either in quality or price.

Messrs. Greenman, Pierson & Co., the well-known paper hangers of Wilmington, also appear in a conspicuous advertisement, soliciting the trade of this section. They have a large stock of wall-papers of every conceivable design, and offer to sell at Philadelphia prices. If you can't go in person, send for samples.

Of W. M. Kennard & Co. it is unnecessary for us to speak. Many of our readers have had dealings with them, and know them to be honest, straightforward men.

Then there is Mr. Patroni, with his sewing machines. He has so many of them scattered all through our county that their merits will speak louder than any thing we can say. We would advise any one wishing a machine to buy from Mr. Patroni.

The local subject most engrossing the attention of our citizens just now is temperance. It is discussed in stores, along our public streets, in bar-rooms, by the family hearth—everywhere. The community seems deeply agitated upon the subject. Under the auspices of the Public Temperance Society of the town a meeting for public discussion was held last Friday evening at the Court House, and another is announced for to-morrow evening. Let everybody come. The last meeting was highly interesting, and the next promises to be more so.

The Cambridge News asks us if it is not bad policy to copy locals from a paper that occasionally makes mistakes without giving credit. Undoubtedly; but we never know how much is truth in the News.—Still we don't think, we will ever be hung for the amount of locals we take from that paper.
