E. W. EMERSON, Editor.

DENTON, MARYLAND.

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 21, 1885.

In some respects we are rather sorry that the missing two cents in the Treasury Department have been found. It takes away from the Democrats a valuable campaign cry about Republican frauds?

The Republicans of Illinois at a special election have gained a Senator to succeed the Democratic Senator who died. This gives them a majority of one joint ballot and will insure the election of Gen. Logan if all the Republicans in the Legislature will vote for him. The Republican who does anything else now is not a Republican.

Miss Cleveland has gone home, it is said, because of a difference of opinion between herself and the President. This little woman was generally understood to be a strong Republican, and her sudden disappearance from the White House will no doubt be regarded as a signal victory for the Hendricks wing of the Democratic party.

General Grant's case is still a bad one. Tuesday's examination disclosed a much graver condition than has heretofore been intimated. The doctors were disinclined to say much about it beyond admitting that the cancer had again become noticeably active. Just what this might threaten or how near the danger line the disease had progressed was not quite clear to the doctors from what they saw.

Both parties in Virginia will hold their state conventions in July—the Republicans on the 15th and the Democrats on the 29th. While the campaign is in progress business generally will be suspended, and patriots of both parties will strive with each other to save the state on a repudiation basis. The state may be saved, but in the struggle her honor will be sadly tattered.

Postmaster-General Vilas has issued a cicular to the Democratic Congressmen, in which he tells them how to get "relief from partisan postmasters," and save him (Vilas) from importunity and criticism. He advises that only one-fifth or one-fourth of the most "obnoxious partisans" be removed now, and take the others after the excitement of the first removal dies out. The circulation was private, but was given away by the Democratic paper, the Cincinnati Enquirer, who does not love the Cleveland crowd or their methods.

It would seem as if farmers like to be humbugged, for they do not learn from experience. They have been cautioned time and time again, and have been "taken in" by sharpers over and over, but let a man come along who possesses easy, familiar manners and is a good talker, and the farmer becomes his victim. The latter believes all that is told him about the marvelous or superior article to which attention is called, and agrees to take or signs certain papers. When too late he discovers that he has been gulled. Experience is a dear teacher, but not always profit by the lessons

The practicability of having baseball and other athletic games in the evening by electric light has often been discussed in the cities, but the experiment has never received a thorough trial. On Wednesday night the Williamsburg Athletic Club of New York city will give the scheme a careful test. If it should prove successful it may have a marked effect on the future of athletic sports. The thought of a broiling sun, on a summer's day, keeps many persons from attending athletic grounds. If the games could take place in the cool air of the evening and at a time when people are more at leisure, the attendance would be greater and the sport would be more enjoyable.

The Dem[illegible] Congressmen who are at Washin[illegible] engineering appointments ha[illegible]sick at the delay of the Preside[illegible]ng up the Federal offices with Democrats. Their dissatisfaction culminated one night last week in an indignation meeting at Willard's hotel, at which the administration was roundly belabored for not turning the rascals out. It was determined at last to inform the President that if he continued Republicans in office he must look to Republicans for support. President Cleveland should keep a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup close at hand to give these fellows when they bore him too hard.

Those who know Mr. Cleveland very well say that he is uncommonly sensitive to criticism that he conceives to be just. Like any other man of common sense he recognizes that several recent appointments—some of which he has revoked—have justified the adverse judgment passed upon them. In these cases it is said that he feels that he has been imposed upon—the appointments having been made upon recommendations which he accepted as conclusive. "But what does the President do," it was asked, "in cases where he feels that his confidence has been misused?" "He takes good care, you may be sure, that the same thing does not occur again in the same quarter." There seems to be a lesson and a warning in this reply.

This week the new version of the Bible will appear in its entirety. This is the last of the work undertaken by the convocation of Canterbury on February 10, 1870. At first the movement was entirely within the Anglican communion. But the commission soon determined to make the work undenominational and representatives of the whole English-speaking race and eminent scholars from the various evangelical denominations in Great Britain were asked to take part in the revision. American scholars were also subsequently invited, and an American committee was organized in 1871, which began active work on October 4, 1872. The British committee agreed to send their work to the American committee, who were to examine it and return it with their suggestions. If the suggestions were not adopted they were to be presented to the public in an appendix to the revised version.

The Republican Rascals.

The country has now had two months of Democratic rule—long enough to disclose the policy of the administration, and to make its effect felt upon the country. So far the highest compliment is paid to the Republican party by adopting Republican politics and principles, which must be very humiliating to a party that denounced the Republicans as thieves and scoundrels, and whose war cry during the last campaign was "turn the rascals out." In reference to the monthly debt statements and the surplus in the treasury the leading Democratic editors, including Manning, who is now Secretary of the Treasury, declared that they were "cooked" and they most blushingly declared that there were at least two hundred million dollars in the Treasury that ought to be applied to paying off the public debt.

Mr. Manning has now gone over the accounts. He has compared dollar for dollar and cent for cent, and he finds about twenty-eight million dollars in the treasury. There is the evidence right before them they wilfully lied during the campaign, and the Democrats must admit the fact with the figures before them.

Neither have any "rascals" yet been found since the Democratic advent to power. Men have been removed from office, but not because they were "rascals," but because they were Republicans, and Democrats wanted their places.

Not a single man has been removed from office for delinquency of duty, whose removal had not been determined upon under the Republican administration. Nearly a hundred thousand Republican office-holders still remain in office under a Democratic administration, over two months after that administration commenced, simply becaue no fault had been found with them.

The result of the two months of Democratic rule shows that the Democratic party gained power by the most stupendous lying frauds.

They blazoned abroad the untruth that the Republican administration hoarded up two hundred million dollars, which they were using for corrupt purposes, while not more than one-seventh of that amount was in the Treasury, and they represented that the Republican office-holders were a pack of rascals who should be turned out, but after two months of Democratic rule and investigation not a Republican has been turned out for rascality. No higher compliment could be paid to the Republican administration. As no Republican rascals have been found, we may soon reasonably look for Democratic rascals.

Rash Kansas.

There is a mysterious something in woman's nature that refuses to acknowledge the sovereignty of the law, and when her self-respect is attacked she will not hesitate a minute to assume the defensive. Just now this seems to be the situation among the women in charge of the New Orleans Exposition.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, in this instance, is the Spartan of her sex; the authorities of Kansas are the offenders, and the dispute is, we believe, over the rights of a frail woman, who insists that Mrs. Howe ill-treated her and, without cause, expelled her from the meetings which she, as commissioner from Kansas, was duly bound to attend. The Exposition authorities side with Kansas, and are now consuming time in endeavoring to effect a compromise. But Mrs. Howe refuses to compromise. She stands by her position: The right of the sex to control its own affairs. She believes it to be the thermopylæ of woman's liberty, and she proposes to hold the fort, or, in other words, keep the gates of the woman's department closed, if she has to set out all night to do it.

When a woman is imbued with a notion that she is being unfairly treated there is invariably more trouble with her than there would be with a regiment of men. The treatment so successful with men cannot be applied in her case, for with her a club is no argument, and the only way for the Exposition people to get out of the dilemma is to let the disputants exhaust themselves. By that time Kansas will be a good deal older and will know enough to run up an alley or turn the corner rather than face the frowning muzzle of a woman's wrath.

Of the whole yearly crops of this country, about two-thirds is winter wheat and one-third spring wheat. The former is much more valuable for milling purposes, and often commands a premium of ten cents over the latter. But if there is a probability of a shortage in winter wheat it is always known before the sowing of spring wheat has begun, and the acreage is increased accordingly. It is the relative quantity of spring and winter wheat that regulates the difference in the price of the two commodities. It appears that at present this difference is, comparatively speaking, trifling, that there is not much winter wheat left on hand, and that the prospects of the crop indicate the probability of a shortage exceeding 120,000,000 bushels. The consequence is that this staple begins to command a higher price, and the difference between spring No. 2 and winter No. 2 is thus likely to be considerably widened.

Free Drinking-Fountain.

Messrs. Mabley & Carew have displayed a commendable enterprise in placing a drinking fountain near the east corner of their clothing-store, Baltimore and Light streets. The fountain is fed through 100 feet of coiled pipe in an ice-chest with a capacity of half a ton. The water comes out of the fountain cool and sparkling and will refresh many a thirsty pedestrian during the coming warm weather. The apparatus cost about $25, and the expense of running it will amount to about $1.50 per week.

How Baking Powders are Made

While rival companies are disputing as to what ingredients are to be found in the "best baking powder," the public will be interested in the following definition of these now indispensable articles, as given by Appletons Cyclopedia, the acknowledged American authority.

"The best baking powders are composed of bitartrate of potash (cream of tartar), tartaric acid, carbonate of ammonia, and soda bi-carbonate, bound together with a little starch."

An Insane Mother's Deed.

SHE DROWNS HERSELF AND TWO OF HER CHILDREN.

The village of Lititz was on Thursday last the scene of great excitement, caused by the terrible deed of Mrs. Hiram Pfautz, a woman of about 40 years of age, who attempted the destruction of herself and her five children on Thursday afternoon, and succeeded in making way with herself and two of the little ones. The husband was away at the time, and gathering the children about her she told them to accompany her. They gladly followed her.

The names and ages of the children are as follows: Harry, aged ten years; Susan, aged eight; Charles, aged five; Mary, aged three; and Samuel, aged one year. Down through a secluded pathway they went until they arrived on the edge of a mill pond. The water at this place is from five to eight feet deep. According to the story of the children, their mother took the three eldest and deliberately threw them one by one into the water, where they were left struggling and crying for help. Then satisfying herself that the children would surely drown, she took the two remaining little ones into her arms, pressed them closely to her bosom and cast herself headlong into the stream. She never rose again, and when the neighbors, who were alarmed by the cries of the children came, all was still again. The six bodies were quickly brought to shore and laid side by side on the green sward, and after long and continued work the neighbors, with the assistance of physicians, succeeded in resuscitating the three eldest children, but the mother and the two others were dead.

The children, when about being thrown into the water, cried piteously, and begged their mother to save them. "Please don't, mamma," they cried, but, probably unconscious of their plea, she continued on. Mrs. Pfautz's mind had been affected for some time, caused, it is said, by religious matters. She frequently expressed the wish that she was dead, and that she and her children were in heaven. She was the mother of seven children, but two of them refused to go with her. It was evidently her intention to drown all of them.

An Unfortunate Visit.

The visit of President Cleveland to the battle field of Gettysburg was unfortunate. It showed he either lacked patriotism or ability to speak his sentiments under the circumstances. Had James G. Blaine stood in his place he would have thrilled the soldiers gathered there with his words of lofty patriotism and love of liberty, and called forth plaudits from one end of the Union to the other. To compare Blaine with Cleveland, however, is like comparing Hyperion to a Satyr.

We all remember how the terse, pithy sentences uttered by the lamented Lincoln on this battle field, were echoed and re-echoed through the land, indicating a heart in sympathy with the Union, and that he was neither ashamed nor afraid to avow the faith he maintained. The failure of Cleveland to speak is not creditable to his head nor to his heart. He had much better imitated Secretary Bayard and declined to visit that field, which was the turning point in the fortunes of the rebels, and contributed to the final dissolution of the rebellion. As much as Mr. Cleveland may owe the quondam rebels for his elevation to the Presidency, he should not have neglected the opportunity presented to show his hatred of lawlessness and his love for this glorious Union of States, through which our country is destined to become the greatest nation on the face of the earth.

His Father's Pride.

Two little upper Main street boys in skirts are laying siege to the heart of a wee damsel who sits on the front seat at the primary school, and is dividing her attention between both her admirers, who are dead in love. A funny thing was that which one of them did one day last week. His papa gave him a nickel for being a good boy. He didn't buy candy, although that was the original plea by which he obtained the nickel. Not at all. He went over post haste to the abode of his little lady and gave her the money on condition that she would hold his and his hand alone on the way to school the next day. The trade was struck, and the next morning the programme was carried out. The fond mother of the little miss saw, as the result of this secret transaction, one tearful little boy in a blue blouse waist and skirt weeping bitter tears over the front yard fence, while down the street, in proud consciousness of having euchred a dreaded rival, marched the other boy hand-in-hand with the little girl. The father has great hopes of the boy who struck the bargain.—Lewiston Journal.

Kissing by Electricity.

The latest freak among the young folk in New York is the "electric party." It is held at any house where there is a heavy carpet, and the fun consists in shuffling rapidly over the floor to generate electricity in the person and then discharging it through the fingers, nose or lips against some other person or a metallic object. When two well-charged persons kiss the "snap" may be heard in the next room, and when a young man holds his nose near a gas-burner sparks fly from it and ignite the gas. These parties are becoming popular on Murray Hill, grown people taking a lively interest in them, and when the lords of the households come in late with red noses they say they have been to an "elictric party."

Killed by Her Stepfather.

The circumstances of one of the most horrible murders that ever occurred in Philadelphia were developed at the coroner's inquest on the body of Lottie Cook, aged 9 years. On Monday last at numerous periods during the day and evening her stepfather, C. Achille Onofri, beat her with a shovel, flogged her with a thick coil of rope, the end of which was filled with knots, until her body was covered with deep lacerations, and until she became insensible. He then threw a pillow upon her head, sat on it for several minutes and beat her in the face with his fist. She then died. The physi[illegible] examination also showed that [illegible] had been starved. The brutal ste[illegible]er has been arrested.

Let Them Learn a Trade.

When it is remembered that over three-fourths of the criminals in our prisons are deficient in some useful trade, the greater is the demand for the apprenticeship system. Some time ago we spoke of the gradual decay of the system of teaching boys a useful trade. Parents don't know what to do with boys who don't want to go to school. The result is that if they can't get a clerkship in a store or shop, they do get a corner to loaf on, and thus idleness is indirectly encouraged. A boy would better be at a trade if he gets no wages over and above his clothing and board, than to be brought up in idleness because he can't be put behind a counter with a quill behind his ear.

A Warning to Drinkers.

A serious warning is given in the Medical Record to drinkers as to the liability of their descendants falling a prey to a new vice now attracting considerable notice from physicians—the chloroform habit. The wreck of the victim is stated to be much worse than that of the drunkard. Dr. A. G. Browning says that in nearly every instance coming to his knowledge the habit has seemed to replace the appetite for drink in some persons coming from a line of drinkers more or less remote.

Condition of Winter Wheat.

The McCormick Reaper Company at Chicago, has received answers from 400 of its 1,400 correspondents in the winter wheat states. It estimates that if the ratio thus far is maintained the reports will show a falling off of 10 per cent. in the condition of winter wheat compared with the estimate of April, which put the crop at 65 per cent. of a full yield, with a decrease of 20 per cent. in the average sown.

John R. Gilliam, Esq., New Store Va., says he used two tons of Powell's Prepared Chemicals on 50,000 tobacco hills, and made the best crop of tobacco he has made for years. This is the usual result with those who use this valuable, but economical fertilizer material, which costs only $6 per bbl. of 260 lbs., which is sufficient quantity to make one-half ton of complete fertilizer. NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. Leland has recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. Leland's farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. Leland's direction, was supplied with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. Leland has personally used for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. Leland's permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. Leland's extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.
