E. W. EMERSON, Editor.

DENTON, MARYLAND.

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 28, 1885.

From a business point of view, the revised Old Testament is not a success. The advance demand does not exceed 75,000 copies, while the advance orders for the revised New Testament amounted to 700,000 copies.

A FEMALE child with two tongues lives in Yonkers, New York. The possibilities which open up before this doubly-gifted creature are enough to turn to a pea green every woman who reads this paragraph.

WHEN the Republican administration of Ohio went out of power there was a surplus of $600,000 in the Treasury of the State. The Democratic Legislature has adjourned and with it has disappeared the $600,000 and the State is compelled to borrow to pay her floating debt.

VICTOR HUGO, the great French poet and novelist, died on Friday afternoon, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. For several days he had been lying at the point of death, but always conscious. He refused the services of a priest in his last hours, and died as he had lived—a Rationalist.

As the President is industriously engaged in hacking off the heads of office-holders, it may be prudent for him to stop a moment and reflect. Should he decapitate some whom Republicans will not regard as "offensive partizans," he may find himself in a dilemma next winter, for no removal under the office-tenure act can be made by him "without the advice and consent of the Senate."

WITH the issue of May 18th the Baltimore Sun entered upon its forty-ninth volume. Always reliable and fair, thoroughly independent enterprising, the Sun takes rank with the best dailies of the country, and the abundant prosperity that it now enjoys is no more than a just tribute to its unrivalled activity and excellence. It is now venerable with age, but goes on in its course of usefulness with undiminished vigor and enterprise.

MISS CLEVELAND'S promised book would be successful, whatever its merits, simply because the work is from the pen of the sister of the President. She has, though, it is believed, no little merit as a writer, some of her essays having already achieved considerable success. The volume is to be entitled "Sketches of History." If it were only contemporaneous history of which she has written, the work would be received with enthusiastic interest.

THE Baltimore American of Monday says: 'The Memorial Day exercises, which will take place on Saturday next, promise to be of unusual interest. The leading feature of the celebration this year will be the dedication of the monument at Loudon Park with interesting ceremonies. The veterans on Sunday, in conformity with their happy custom, attended divine services by posts, and in the several churches sermons appropriate to the occasion were preached."

O, JUST wait until Cleveland is elected, and see how wages will go up and produce come down, said leading Democrats last fall before the election. A great many people now out of work voted for Cleveland under that impulse and because they wanted a change anyhow. Well, the change has come, but how about the high wages, low prices for produce and plenty of work. Say, you men there with your hands in your pockets and who voted for Cleveland, won't you tell us?

BEHOLD how beautiful a thing it is for Democratic brethren to dwell together in unity in Virginia—thereby they get all the spoils they want. The last demand made by the "Jury of Award" on the President was for the heads of six Republican postmasters;—and they got them. It is the same old story of "offensive partisanship" and the same neglect of all Civil Service principles and practice. But the "Jury of Award" deserve credit for one thing—they are guilty of no humbug. They frankly admit that they want the places their opponents hold and mean to have them.

THE death of Secretary Frelinghuysen will be widely regretted. He was a statesman whose services in the Republican party, to which he was attached from its formation, have been of notable value and importance to the country. One of the leaders among the early Republicans, he helped to mould and carry out the policy and maintain the principles which saved the Union and made the nation. As Mr. Arthur's secretary of state he fulfilled the delicate duties attached to the important office with dignity and firmness, and with a conscientious devotion to the labors imposed upon him, which, it is feared, impaired his health and hastened his death.

HOWARD COOPER, the colored man charged with an outrageous assault upon a young girl in Baltimore county, was brought into court for trial on Wednesday morning, and within a few hours was found guilty, the jury determining upon their verdict without leaving their seats. To every one this result should be eminently satisfactory. The testimony of Miss Gray and of her father and mother was not only conclusive, but it explained in part the intense feeling of their neighbors and the search for Cooper after the assault by men intent upon lynching him. They were fortunately, however, prevented from interfering with the course of justice, and, as should be, he will be punished in accordance with the law.

Falling Seventy Feet.

About 4.30 Wednesday afternoon a scaffolding, which was used for the first time on the new post-office building, gave way and the seven men who were on it at the time were precipitated to the ground, a distance of seventy feet. John Bowers, a bricklayer, fell head first and was instantly killed. George W. Miller struck and was seriously, if [illegible] The other five men are not

Victory for General Logan.

The Senatorial contest in Illinois has ended, as it ought to have ended long ago, in the triumph of the candidate of a majority of the people, Gen. John A. Logan. In Illinois 337,000 voted to elevate him to the position of Vice-President and presiding officer of the Senate, against 312,000 votes for his Democratic opponent. Yet a few politicians, attempting to satisfy private greeds or grudges in defiance of the will of the people, have kept the State partly unrepresented for months, subjected it to great expense, and disgraced it by a struggle memorable for its bitterness, for the unscrupulous measures employed both at the election in Chicago and since, and for the shameless indecency of some of the participants.

General Logan comes out of this struggle with stainless honor. He comes out of it with a magnificent reputation as a brave, faithful and honest candidate, who would not consent to be elected by any improper means. He comes out of it with a higher reputation than ever, as a leader of splendid skill, courage and sagacity. When the Democrats began the fight by stealing ballots and forging returns in Chicago, they might have stolen a seat in the Senate, as they intended, had not wise and resolute leadership hunted down the criminals and lodged them in jail. And the crowning and decisive victory of the long campaign, the election of a Republican member in a district where the Democrats had expected no opposition, showed a skill and generalship worthy of the candidate. Of the great soldiers of the Civil War, General Logan remains the foremost in active political life. It is good to know that the Confederate Generals and Brigadier-Generals who are swarming about the Capital now will meet an antagonist there who realizes what a horrible crime the Rebellion was, and does not hesitate to speak of it as it deserves. The feelings of a great host of Union soldiers all over the land will not lack expression when General Logan comes to deal with President Cleveland's appointments. Patronage was used in the most audacious and shameless way to compass his defeat, and he will be able to tell the Mugwumps, from personal observation, what is the outcome of Civil Service reform in Illinois. Even those unhappy people who tell no truth of sincere Republicans except under protest have been obliged to admit that Senator Logan has grown remarkably in culture and power, in personal equipment and in public confidence, and he will take his place in the Senate as one of the most influential and justly honored Republican leaders.

The contest is peculiarly honorable to Senator Logan, and, it is pleasant to add, to his chief opponent also, because it was fought out without corruption. Early in the contest General Logan made it known that he would refuse or resign the seat, if it should come to him by any dishonorable means. He agreed with Mr. Morrison that the contest should be to the end an honest one, so far as they could control it, and it is honorable to both and to the the State of Illinois that money did not have weight on either side, and the man preferred by the majority of the people was chosen at last. Mr. Morrison was beaten not because of any personal objection, but because the people of Illinois do not approve his political beliefs. His very sincerity and earnestness as a Free-Trader made him the more objectionable as a candidate, as the zeal and power of General Logan in defence of Home Industry made him admired and loved during the last campaign by millions of American citizens who will now join in the rejoicings at his success.

Lives Lost at a Fire.

SEVENTEEN VICTIMS AT A CINCINNATI BLAZE.

A fire in Sullivan's printing establishment, No. 19 Sixth street, Cincinnati, on Thursday afternoon, caused the death of seventeen persons. It was thought at first that only five women, who jumped from a fifth story window, were killed, but when the fire was subdued so that the firemen could enter the building, it was found that ten bodies lay in heaps on the fifth floor and one lay on the fourth. There were six who jumped from the windows, and one man, after saving the lives of two women by letting a rope from the roof, was himself killed by the burning in two of the same rope before he reached the ground. This was Mr. Sullivan, a brother of the proprietor of the printing works. The fire originated by the explosion of a gasoline stove on the second floor. The flames entered the elevated chute which is next to the stairway and all chances of escape was then cut off. The killed are mostly employes of the dye works which occupied a portion of the building. The mass of telegraph and telephone wires prevented the firemen from putting up ladders promptly for the relief of the inmates.

Looking over the scene after the event it was plain that every life could have been easily saved. Short as the time was there were displays of thoughtful heroism that saved two lives, but one of the heroes lost his own life.

It has not been fairly ascertained that the fire started from a can of benzine on the second floor near the elevator shaft. A boy on that floor says he heard a report and instantly the fire leaped to the elevator shaft and darted up it. The shaft reaches to the top of the building and from the third story to the fifth floor it was encircled by a wooden stairway which was the only means of access to those floors. The elevator shaft to add to its combustibility was encased with a thin wooden lattice work. The second floor where the fire started was the press room; the third the composing room; the fourth a storage and waste room, and the fifth was the folding room.

More Postmasters Removed.

Of the 108 changes made by the Postmaster-General in the fourth-class offices, Saturday evening, 88 were among the Virginia postmasters; in some cases the removals were made "For cause," but in most instances the list bears the simple endorsement "Removed," which is explained at the department as meaning that the removal was for offensive partisanship.

"Are you a member of the church?" He asked o
"O yes"-

Sixty Days of Democratic Rule.

In the business world sixty days, with the customary three days of grace, give long enough time to learn what kind of stuff a man is made of. Mr. Cleveland and his Administration have had sixty days and three days of grace and a little more in which to make an impress upon the country for good or ill. The first fruits are ripe; but the country reaching up to pluck the luscious product that was promised finds in its grasp only Dead Sea apples. The great journals of New-England that thundered for Mr. Cleveland last fall are whispering small anathemas over the Chases, the Pillburys, the Troups and the Higginses. The Democratic organs everywhere are putting in queries about postoffices and collectorships. In the boundless West and downtrodden South only one theme absorbs their attention—the distribution of the loaves and fishes. The statesmen of the party are holding their hats at the White House entrance for crumbs of executive favor. The Vice-President creeps around the Departments at Washington like a needy supplicant.

The days and nights of the Administration are given over to the distribution of offices, to the reward of men for party service, to the manipulation of the public patronage so that the party may retain power. Bossism is restored in all the States. The cloak of Civil Service Reform is pinned up on the White House gate, but through the gaping rents in it may be seen trusty public servants discharged as alleged "offensive partisans," while the Democratic political hacks and mountebanks who replace them are bedecked as reforming saints. A blundering politician from the whipping-post State heads the Cabinet. A machine politician leads and manipulates it. Ex-Confederates, unpardoned and unrepentant rebels, and virulent Copperheads are selected for important foreign missions.

These are the impressions caused by the first sixty days of Democratic rule. The policies of government that a new Administration might be expected to enter upon and advocate are still in the dim distant future. The impress of the President on the country is wholly, and solely connected with the dispensation of the spoils of political victory. An inquiry as to the principles or policies or public views of the President or his Administration meets with blank response. There are no principles, no policies, no public views—only spoils. The office of President is degraded beyond comparison, the public business is weakly administered, and is falling away from the great principles which were followed under Republican rule with honor, ability and integrity. The spectacle is not pleasant. But when the people fully understand whither the country is drifting, they can be trusted to apply the remedy.

Church Gambling.

Judge Fisher, of Baltimore, in a recent charge to the Grand Inquest of that city used some very plain and practical language in regard to the vice of gambling as carried on under many covers and pretexts, and where those who carry it on have the hardest language to use against gambling. Judge Fisher not only alluded to gambling dens and policy shops, but he condemned the habit of gambling by taking chances at church and society fairs with as much severity as gambling by means of the sweat cloth, the dice box or the deck of cards. While these latter, grosser forms of the gambling business, are liable to presentment and prosecution, the first should not be overlooked, no matter for what purpose they are carried on. Nothing looks more inconsistent with the profession of christianity than to see church elders and deacons sitting in jury boxes to try gamblers for pursuing their profession, when they have themselves sanctioned a species of gambling just as morally disreputable as that which they are about to condemn.

Indeed we are not sure that raffling in the interest of a church or some charitable cause is not more injurious than the real right down ante-up. The first is insidious in its nature, and calculated to lure unsuspecting persons to the inner circles, where, stripped of its moral guise, it appears in its most hideous forms. Judge Fisher considered it just as illegal to practice this innocent appearing species of gambling to recruit the treasury of a church; as the grosser forms to the advantage of the pockets of an individual. It is gratifying to know that the people of Judge Fisher's way of thinking are growing numerous, and there are indications that the fortune-wheel and chance box and book will be viewed with no greater favor than the card-deck and dice-box.

MR. HENDRICKS first carefully remarks, in an interview at Indianapolis, that he shall stay at home during the greater part of the summer, and then incidentally and casually says there is "a feeling" that the administration has not been decided enough in various ways, and that the President has not been "possibly" a little too conservative "in several respects." There was, too, a plaintive tone of wearied disgust with the situation in which he is placed to be noted in the speech at Indianapolis on Saturday night that must have profoundly touched his home friends. For staying in Washington and trying to help some of his acquaintances and friends to obtain office, he has been criticised; for failing in his efforts, he has been criticised. "No!" he concluded, "I shall have no future connection with any ticket." The lot of vice president is, indeed, not a happy one in these days.

Cooper Getting Ready to Die.

Howard Cooper, the colored man who is under sentence of death for an outrageous assault on Miss Gray, did not attend the religious services on Sunday at the City Jail. He remained in his cell all day long. He was visited, however, by the Rev. Louis F. Zinkhan, of the Prisoner's Aid Society. Mr. Zinkhan found Cooper very anxious to embrace all opportunities to make preparations for death. He cannot read nor write, but pays the greatest attention to every word spoken concerning the salvation of his soul. Cooper has given up all hopes of meeting with anything short of death and realizes the fact that he is a doomed man. He seems cheerful withal, and [illegible] that is to g

Murdering His Little Favorite.

A BULLET FOR HER, ONE FOR HER MOTHER, AND TWO FOR HIMSELF—A FATHER'S FRENZY.

The house at No. 69 Webster-ave., Pittsburg, Pa., was the scene of a tragedy on Thursday afternoon. Frank Bobbert, a young tailor, aged sixteen, killed Lizzie Lippech, a four-year-old girl, and then committed suicide. Shortly before 1 o'clock Bobbert, who boarded at Mrs. Lippech's, was playing with the little girl when he suddenly pulled a pistol from his pocket and fired at her. The ball passed through her neck, killing her instantly. Jumping to his feet he turned and fired at Mrs. Lippech, but she escaped by running out of the room. Two more shots were heard and when the neighbors, alarmed by the frantic cries of the mother, rushed into the room, Bobbert was found lying dead on the floor with blood spurting from two bullet holes near his heart. Little Lizzie was lying near him with a crimson stream trickling down from the hole in her neck. The child was lifted tenderly and placed in her little crib, but the body of the murderer and suicide was left lying on the floor until the coroner moved it to an undertaking room.

The cause of the tragedy is shrouded in mystery. Bobbert was a Bohemian and had been in this country only a few weeks. He was regarded as an inoffensive boy, and by some it is believed that the shooting was accidental. The theory is, that in carelessly handling the pistol he shot the little girl, and, filled with horror at the accident, committed suicide. The child was a favorite of his, and no trouble is known to have occurred between them. This theory, however, conflicts with the mother's story that Bobbert fired at her after killing Lizzie. When the father reached home he went over to the corpse of his child and burst into tears, crying "My poor little Lizzie," and moaned and sobbed. He tried to lift the body in his arms, but was restrained by those around. His eyes then fell upon Bobbert's body, and with a yell of rage he dashed at the corpse, jumped on it, and with curses and blows tried to wreak his vengeance on the inanimate clay. He was pulled away by the police, who told him Bobbert was dead. He expressed the liveliest satisfaction and muttered curses on the murderer.

Fred Douglass Goes to Church.

To the manifest surprise and disgust of a number of the congregation at the First Presbyterian Church at Washington, where the President attends worship, Fred Douglass and his white wife stalked in again on Sunday morning, but did not secure such prominent seats as they did last Sunday. Instead the trustees decided it would be more appropriate to keep them in the rear, and consequently they were placed several pews behind that occupied by the President's family. Some of the ladies of the church learned before going up stairs that the Douglass element was present again, and they declined to attend service, although they were at Sunday-school.

A Father Pays to Kiss His Child.

The right of a father to kiss his daughter is not often disputed, but for that very offense a man named Morgan was on Friday fined $2 and costs. His daughter had some years ago been adopted by a Mrs. Mann, and the father lost sight of her until Thursday last, when on entering a saloon kept by Mrs. Mann he saw his daughter and at once recognized her. The girl, who is 15 years of age, did not know her father, and on his kissing her pushed him roughly away and complained to Mrs. Mann, who had him arrested for assault, and, although in Court he proved his identity, he was fined.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.
