DENTON, MARYLAND.

THURSDAY MORNING, AUG. 13, 1885

THE Pennsylvania Road has now almost a monopoly of the Peninsula, having under its control all the roads except the road from Chestertown to Bombay Hook, and the short road from Salisbury fo Ocean City.

THE Baltimore Morning Herald will move into its new quarters on Monday next, S. E. Cor. Charles and Baltimore Streets. If the Herald continues to give us as good a paper in their new quarters as they have in the old we will have no cause to ask for more.

WHICH is right, Secretary Whitney or Attorney-General Garland? Whitney would not accept the Dolphin because, as he said, Roach did not fulfill the contract, and Garland in his decision says Roach had no contract with the Government, yet between the two they have succeeded in drawing the leading shipbuilder in the country into bankruptcy.

A NEUTRAL man in politics, one who has no decided convictions nor the courage of his convictions, is apt to be negative in other things. If he is not slothful in politics he is likely to be "not slothful in businesss," in religious views nor anything else. If a man will not work, neither should he eat; and if he will not work for the success of his alleged principles, neither should he eat of the fruits of the work of others.

THE funeral of General Grant was the most impressive civic pageant ever witnessed in this country, and it is doubted if the world has ever seen one that would surpass it. The procession was over ten miles long, and the route on both sides was crowded with people eager to get a look at the cortege. The cost of the funeral, outside of the loss of time and business, will be about a million dollars. These figures vividly portray the magnitude of the affair.

THE weather is not unlike government appropriations. It comes in lumps. In July it was all sun; now it tries to be all rain. Pasture, corn and clover fields are literally in clover these wet days, but the potato patches and the unhoused oats are in imminent peril. And as for the farmers they are kept in a constant state of apprehension. There will be hot weather yet. September will make up for all that August misses in high temperatures and then there will be need for the water which is now filling all the crevices under ground.

THE fight between the Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroads waxes warmer all the while. The former corporation has been able to gain access to Philedelphia in spite of the most stubborn opposition of the Pennsylvania company, and there they expected to connect with the Central Railroad of New Jersey, operated by the Reading company, and thus reach New York. Now, however, the Pennsylvania is seeking to prevent the union, fearful lest the entry into New York may cause further interference with the trunk lines. The Pennsylvania company has offered to guarantee the B. & O., passage for its trains between New York and Philadelphia, but this will hardly suffice to deter the B. & O., people from carrying out of their plan if the Reading company remains faithful. If not, then the B. & O., will probably build its own road between the two cities just as it is now doing between Baltimore and Philadelphia. Young Garrett seems to have all the push and prudence of his father, and in view of what he has suffered at the hands of the Pennsylvania company it can hardly be supposed that he will now forego the effort to get into New York over his own tracks, especially as he is almost in full view of his long-desired Canaan.

A Severe Reprimand from the President.

A special to the New York Times from Cincinnati says that President Cleveland recently made a judicial appointment in Ohio in favor of which numerously signed petitions had been filed. The President shortly afterward received a letter in which the writer admits that he signed the petition for the appointment merely to get rid of the applicant, and others did the same, knowing the man to be utterly unfit for the place, and never supposing for a moment that he stood any show of getting it. To this letter President Cleveland is said to have written as follows under date of Executive Mansion, Washington, Aug. 1: "I have read your letter of the 24th ult. with amazement and indignation. There is but one mitigation to the perfidy which your letter discloses, and that is found in the fact that you confess your share in it. I don't know whether you are a democrat or not but if you are, the crime which you confess is the more unpardonable. The idea that this administration—pledged to give the people better government and better officers, and engaged in a hand-to-hand fight with the bad elements of both parties—should be betrayed by those who ought to be worthy of implicit trust, is atrocious; and such treason to the people and to the party ought to be punished by imprisonment. Your confession comes too late to be of immediate use to the public service, and I only say that while this is not the first time I have been deceived and misled by lying and treacherour misrepresentations, you are the first one that has so frankly owned his grievous fault. If any comfort is to be extracted from this assurance, you are welcome to it."

E. Armstrong, Esq., Waterloo, Culpeper county, Va., says he used Powell's Fertilizer last fall. Wheat did as well as the fertilizer costing double. Will want ten tons this fall. These fertilizers are manufactured by Brown Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

A Lost Sheep.

It is with deep interest, not wholly unmixed with regret, that we have observed in the recent utterances of Gen. Bradley T. Johnson a tendency to slide off of the straight and narrow plank of reform into the broad groove that leadeth unto spoils, bossism and general destruction. Some evil genius must surely have been at work, some perverse disevangelizing influence, that has worked this change of heart; for not very long ago Gen. Johnson wanted reform. He wanted to be redeemed, regenerated and disenthralled from the despotisms of bossism. Yet, how does he talk now? If his outgivings are accurately reported, he says that Senator Gorman's re-election is assured, "because Senator Gorman is unquestionably the choice of the party for re-election, and he can meet with no serious opposition. That fact should be recognized, and the attention of the party directed to matters in which the entire party is interested, namely, the turning out of Republicans and the putting in of Democrats." This sounds like sweet music to the boys. They may be led to exclaim: "Why didn't you say so before?"

But the reason why he didn't say so before is that he had not until recently been disevangelized into a change of heart. His conversion to the belief that the Democratic party desires Senator Gorman's re-election with such unanimity as to leave no serious opposition, is as miraculously sudden as if a supernatural voice had called unto him that it was hard for him to kick against the pricks, or had ordered him to arise, kill and eat things that he had hitherto regarded as common and unclean.

But whoever the disevangelist was who converted General Johnson from reform unto spoils failed to prop him up with sufficient reasons for the faith that is in him; for that holy man or unholy man, so far as now appears, failed to teach the General what was to be done in case the Republican Senate refuses to confirm the appointments of officers who conceive it to be their function to "turn out the Republicans and put in Democrats." President Cleveland and his Cabinet in the main appear to keep this great moral question in view. Gen. Johnson says: "I have the right to require that Democrats be put in," and yet no one knows better than the General that the Democrats did not elect their man; but that he was elected by the Independent Republicans, distinctly as an upholder of civil service reform. The disevangelist who taught him to forget this did him a very ill turn.

But let us venture to hope that the General will not continue to wander in the darkness of boss distributions of spoils, near unto Castle Dangerous and the City of Destruction, but that he will come back to the fold of reform. If one day a "personal" should appear in the advertising columns, signed "Civil Service Reform," which should read: "Return and all will be forgiven," we will know to whom it is addressed.—Baltimore American.

Activity in Appointments.

Twenty-six postmasters of the fourth class were appointed on Thursday to offices in this state, and this indicates a degree of activity in removals that may cause a flutter of hope in the bosoms of the boys. Yet, properly considered, there is little to encourage them. For postmasterships of the fourth class are mostly offices with small salaries. These appointments are usually made at the request of the members of Congress in whose districts the offices are situated, and are made by the First Assistant Postmaster-General, and not by the President, or even by a Cabinet officer. Moreover, postmasterships, even of the lowest classes, are offices not included within Civil Service rules. Thus, there appears to be no new departure to gladden the hearts of those who hunger for the spoils.

The probable reason for the filling of so many offices on the same day is that the President will in a short while take his vacation, and his Cabinet will, in most cases, take theirs about the same time. It is understood that there will be no more Cabinet meetings until the middle of September, and it seems probable that a considerable batch of appointments were disposed of, and that there will be no more appointments until the latter part of September.

There is no great deal of "political significance" in the appointment of fourth class postmasters. The emoluments of the offices are so small that they do not attract "workers" or persons of influence. It is not easy, therefore, to see that they will exercise any considerable influence on the Maryland elections, or that the hearts of the boys have any particular reason for rejoicing.—Baltimore American.

Bad Children.

"Just as the twig is bent the tree is inclined," and that is the reason we have so many evil-minded and wrong-doing people in the world. The twig was bent the wrong way—the training of the children wrong. Many parents will be sorry some day, when it is too late, that they paid no more attention to the moral training of their children. It is not right for a parent, by an approving smile, to encourage the child in wrong-doing, in impudence and the insulting of neighbors. Nor is it right when the parent is spoken to, in a gentlemanly way, about the bad conduct of his children, to aggravate the complainant by taunting remarks, instead of investigating and inquiring of others outside of his own family, when no doubt he would be convinced, beyond a peradventure, that his children were even worse than he knew anything about, and that the mother had long been hiding the faults of the children and misrepresenting their conduct to the supposed head of the family, who will hear nothing derogatory said against his angels, who annoy neighbors and neighbors' children by taunts and ridicule.

Wonderful Piece of Mechanism.

E. M. Calkins, of Warnerville, Schoharie county, has just completed one of the most wonderful pieces of mechanism ever produced. He has worked on it 20 years, and, like Darius Green's flying-machine, "at last it is done." On a large platform, 7x20 feet, constructed so as to represent mountain scenery, rocks, trees, lawns, rivers, cascades, caves and lakes, there are several hundred moving figures of men, birds and beasts. In the centre is a life-like fac-simile of Washington's residence at Mount Vernon. On the roof are two beautiful figures, carved and painted so as to represent sculptured marble, guarding with drawn swords the historic mansion, while a guilt eagle perches upon the porch. In a room Washington is lying on his death-bed, surrounded by weeping friends. In the kitchen are colored servants at work. In the yard are men sharpening their scythes and chopping and sawing wood. Several incidents connected with Indian life are vividly pictured. Railway cars are running, and a ship, with sails unfurled and laden with passengers, floats in a miniature river. Even Noah's ark is represented, with Noah at the head of the procession marching into it, while up on the hill-tops surrounding are men and women awestruck at the rising waters. A perfect grist mill in operation is represented; also a country home, with the father and mother sitting by the fireside, reading by the light of pine knots. The figures are all kept in motion by a small overshot wheel, less than 10 inches in diameter. All of the figures were carved with jack-knives, Mr. Calkins having worn out several knives since he began the work.

Grant as a Smoker.

The General, in speaking of the popular idea that he was a lifelong smoker, said that prior to the battle of Shiloh he rarely—very rarely smoked; and that it had never been a habit, much less a pleasure. At the battle of Shiloh he chanced to smoke a cigar while riding over the field, and the newspaper correspondents, seizing upon the incident, described it graphically in their accounts of the battle to the papers in the North. The idea of a victorious commander of a great army, in the midst of frightful scenes of carnage and destruction, surrounded by the dangers of battle, with a nation's life hanging on the result, looking on calmly and serenely, complacently smoking a cigar, when most men would be overcome by excitement, was something that appealed irresistibly to popular admiration. Grant's admirers and friends, reading the accounts of the battle, supposed him to be a great smoker, and almost deluged him with cigars. As the General said, "There were always two or three boxes in my tent or headquarters free for the use of my staff and visitors. Having them always at hand, it was but natural that I should every little while take a fresh cigar, and in that way the habit grew upon me so that it became irresistible, and the people are no doubt right in calling me an inveterate smoker."

Drinking and Apoplexy.

It is the essential nature of all wines and spirits to send an increased amount of blood to the brain. The first effect of taking a glass of wine or stronger form of alcohol is to send the blood there faster than common. Hence the circulation that gives the red face. It increases the activity of the brain, and it works faster, and so does the tongue; but as the blood goes faster than common to the brain, it returns faster, and no immediate harm may result. But suppose a man keeps on drinking, the blood is sent to the brain so fast in large quantities that in order to make room for it, the arteries have to charge themselves. They increase in size, and, in doing so, they press against the more yielding, flaccid veins which carry the blood out of the brain and thus diminish the size of the pores—the result beeng that the blood is not only carried to the arteries of the brain faster than is natural or healthful, but it is prevented from leaving as fast as usual. Hence a double set of causes of death are in operation. Hence a man may drink enough brandy or other spirits in a few hours, or even minutes, to bring on a fatal attack of apoplexy. This is being literally dead drunk.

The President and Reform.

Mr. Cleveland will not be swayed one hair's breadth from his appointed course. He has the strength, the patience, the immovable resolve, and he will concentrate them to withstand the furious assault. Against all opposition, in defiance of all menace, regardless of all misrepresentation, the President will hold on his course until the goal is reached, the victory won. One hears on every side the mutterings of a storm. The civil service establishment is assailed by a fury of malevolent destruction, its objects falsified, its operation misrepresented, and this fury will deepen and broaden as the days go by. But the President is not dismayed by this clamor, nor could he be were it ten times more intese. He knows that he is strong enough to keep his course, and he believes that the grateful recognition of and intelligent and patriotic people when the good work shall have been perfected will more than offset the opposition and animosity of which it is the object now.

Advice to Fruit Eaters.

At this time of the year our readers should exercise much care in eating fruit. To one in good health, there is nothing more pleasant and healthful than sound, ripe fruit, but it is all important that it should be neither unripe nor unsound. Children, especially, are prone to get hold of any kind of fruit at this season of the year, with little regard to its condition. Mothers should not neglect to have an oversight in the matter, and see that all fruit eaten be in proper condition. If more care was taken in this matter of eating during the summer, less sickness would be the result.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

Fred Douglass on Slavery.

Fred Douglass, in his speech at the Emancipation Day exercises, reviewed the history of slavery in England, and spoke of the causes which led to the freedom of slaves in America. He held that, if England had not liberated her slaves in the West Indies fifty years ago, freedom to slaves in the United States would never have been possible. That act of liberation, he said, awakened the moral sentiment of the world, opened the eyes of mankind to the horrors of the traffic in human flesh, and gave rise to the spirit of abolition in this country, which was not allayed until the chains of slavery were broken. He ended by predicting that the colored race would one day take its place among the races of the world in intellectual and moral worth.
