E. W. EMERSON, Editor.

DENTON, MARYLAND.

THURSDAY MORNING, AUG. 20, 1885

A LITTLE girl has described nervousness as "just being in a hurry all over." The same description would apply to the average office-seeker.

THERE are plenty of fourth-class postoffices to be had if hungry patriots can put up with that sort of recognition. More ambitious mendicants must abide the President's return from the woods.

MR. BAYARD has about 300 consulships left upon his hands and wants to give them to "good" men. As they pay about 900 or $1,000 apiece, it is not likely that good men will jostle each other in scrambling for them.

UNDER the prohibition regime doctors are in growing demand in Iowa. The maxim "Physician, heal thyself" is largely applied, too, and as every man is conceded the right to be his own doctor the druggists are driving trade.

NOTHING has occurred since General Grant's death with much more appropriateness than the draping in mourning of the house at Appomatox in which Generals Grant and Lee signed the terms of surrender by which the rebel soldiers were permitted to retain their horses to put in the spring crops with.

MR. A. S. ABELL, the veteran proprietor and editor of the Baltimore Sun, celebrated the 79th anniversary of his birth at Atlantic City on Monday of last week. He recieved many congratulatory telegrams from well-known journalists in all parts of the country. He was tendered a complimentary dinner by prominent Baltimoreans who are summering there.

A BIG corn crop promises a large yield of pork, and the two insure plenty of food at home and large receipts of cash from abroad, in fact, the crop prospects are such as to warrant the maintenance of the balance of trade in our favor. The latest official estimate puts the expected yield of wheat at 375,000,000 bushels, and the yield of cotton will be phenomenally large.

THOMAS WARWICK, of Port Deposit, on Monday of last week got on board an excursion boat going to St. Michael's, without the formality of buying a ticket. When down the bay he was required to show a ticket or pay his passage, when he hurriedly pulled off his coat and sprang overboard. The steamer was backed to the place where Warwick was struggling in the water, and he was rescued just as he was going down the third time. It was a narrow escape.

THE high-license law, recently put in operation in Wisconsin, is working to great advantage. The first three months of the law's operation show excellent results. The number of saloons in one hundred towns has been lessened by 267, and there has been an increase of $224,000 in the public revenue. As a practical promoter of temperance, or, at any rate, a practical means for the curtailment of the liquor traffic, high license has proved its superiority to prohibition.

THE prevalence of diarrhœal disorders and the fatality that attends them invite greater care in the matter of living. The period of maturing fruit and plenty of vegetables afford such opportunity for enlarged variety in diet that we are all apt to eat too heartily, and especially of those things which the appetite craves after a long confinement to a few articles. Atmospheric conditions may have something to do with the epidemic that is prevailing, but the chief cause no doubt lies in the immoderate use of fruits and vegetables.

THE Democratic seekers after office, who have had their hopes buoyed for ten years and longer with the promise of something, are in the depths of despair to-day. They see that so far as the leaders have been able to secure any patronage from Mr. Cleveland's administration, it has been given to ex-officeholders in every instance. So far neither new men nor young men have had a chance, but from the United States Marshal's office down to the humblest and least inviting post office old party "hacks" have been given the preference.

THE Democrats in many sections of country are discussing the question as to whether the Republican party can ever be resuscitated again. They need give themselves no upeasiness about the matter. The old and the Republican party out in Illinois alive and kicking last Spring, when a Republican member of the Legislature was elected from a district which usually gave two thousand Democratic majority, and insured the election of John A. Logan to the United States Senate, and they will find the Republican party of Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and Virginia, this coming fall, about the liveliest corpse they ever rolled up their eyes at.

Chesapeake and Delaware Ship Canal.

The New Era, published at Middletown, Del., has the following on the long talked of ship canal across the Peninsula: "It looks as though the proposed Delaware Ship Canal is to be built. A party of New Yorkers have been in this section for several days looking over the route and taking active steps toward securing the right of way. The Sassafras route has been decided upon and surveyors are now at work. It will be remembered that some twelve years ago this route was surveyed with the same object in view, but the maps, etc., of the old survey cannot be secured and a new survey is being made. The projectors in the movement act as though they mean business, but are not yet ready to divulge their plans to the public."

Cost of Grant's Funeral.

The New York Commercial of August 5th says: If General Grant's funeral in New York on Saturday will cost a million dollars the investment will result most profitably to this city. New York might assume the indebtedness for the entire amount, and yet at midnight on Saturday, after balancing its profits and losses, find a satisfactory amount to its credit. Not only will the business men of this city find that the funeral will result in considerable profit to them, but the railways and the steamboat companies connecting with this city will have every reason to congratulate themselves.

A railway man calculates that the various railways centreing in this city would furnish the following quotas of visitors to the metropolis on Saturday: New York Central Railway, 130,000; New York and New Haven, 50,000; Harlem Railway, 40,000; New York and Northern, 30,000; Pennsylvania, 80,000; Philadelphia and Reading, 30,000; West Shore Railway, 20,000; total 380,000. These 380,000 persons will use the railways for the double purpose of visiting New York and witnessing the funeral procession.

Their fares will range from 20 cents to $20 apiece, and, taking $5 as a low average, from this source alone $2,000,000 will flow into the coffers of the corporations which provide the greater part of the transportation to the metropolis. Perhaps 50,000 persons will ulilize the steamboats for the purpose of attending the parade. Their average excursion fare will be about $2, making a total of $100,000, and a grand total of $2,100,000. This amount is for transportation alone.

The hotel rates in New Yark range from $1 a day to $5 a day, with extras—always an indefinite and purse-emptying addition. Estimating the average hotel expenses at $2 a day, the three days would take $6 from each person, or $2,400,000 from the 400,000. The visitors will not be content to remain within doors during their stay. They will go out and spend money. Each of them will get rid of perhaps $10 of his superfluous savings, and this, by a simple problem in multiplication, would aggregate $4,000,000. Thus three items of expense would be, estimating the number of visitors at 400,000, as follows: Hotel expenses at $6, $2,400,000; travelling expenses at $5, $2,000,000; spending money at $10, $4,000,000. Total, $8,400,000.

The Electric Street Railway.

The various trials of the electric motor on the Union line tracks between Baltimore city and Hampden have been highly successful, and cars propelled by electricity, will be run regularly, commencing with Thursday last. A car-load of passengers was carried on Thursday evening last, the rate of speed being about fifteen miles an hour.

Considerable trouble has been caused by the contact of animals and human beings with the middle rail, which is highly charged with electricity. On Monday of last week several Hampden boys experimented with the rail and were severely stunned. A horse stepped on the rail at Mount Vernon switch and was so shocked and surprised that he kicked the harness and shaft all out of repair. Another horse belonging to a butcher, suffered the same fate, and, in expressing his feelings, he wrecked the harness.

A flock of geese perched upon the electrified rail at Hampden Hall, and were knocked in all directions, one being hurled five feet into the air. A dog, which witnessd the unusual commotion among the feathered bipeds, went to investigate the matter, and as soon as he touched the rail he turned a double-somersault, and, picking himself up, went off yelping.

The difficulty with the electrified rail will be shortly obviated by encasing it, thereby placing it beyond the possibility of contact.

A Singular Coincidence.

A second coincidence in connection with the decease of General Grant has occurred that will be employed by superstitious persons to strengthen and confirm their beliefs, and following so closely as it does upon the lightning strokes may have a tendancy to cause the faith of some people to waver who had parted with their ancient notions. One newspaper in the entire south spoke ill of the General on his death, and scarcely had the ink dried upon the paper containing the article than the writer of it was himself a corpse. The editor had been a personal sharer in General Grant's magnanimity, for after serving four years of a sentence for conspicuous complicity in the Ku Klux outrages in North Carolina, he had been pardoned from the Albany penitentiary, returned to his paper at Raleigh and attempted to throw obliquy upon the name of his benefactor. There may be more than mere coninicidence in this latter death, but there is room for standing ground at least for the advanced thought that will seek explanation for it in the natural circumstances that surround it.

The Nation's Loss.

All nations have had their heroes who, dying, have been buried with distinguished honors. History, however, fails to record a parallel for the imposing ceremony in all its features with General Grant was laid away to rest. Not only were the splendors of the pomp and pageantry unrivalled, but deep down in the hearts of thousands who witnessed the pageant, as well as among the millions who could only follow it in imagination, abided a sincere and poignant grief—a true realization of the nation's loss. In reverence and tears, mid sorrow and affection, all that was mortal of the greatest soldier of the age was committed to its mother earth; and herein lies the difference between America's tribute and those that have preceded it. Such universality and genuuneness of grief are without recorded equal. Peace be to the ashes that sleep so sweetly where a grateful country has laid them.

A Tough Mule.

STUCK BY THE HOOFS IN A CONCRETE PAVEMENT AND HOISTED BY A DERRICK.

That Portion of New Montgomery street adjoining the Palace Hotel at San Francisco, is covered with a concrete roadway of considerable thickness. During the hot wave in question a boy was riding a mule through said thoroughfare, when the animal stopped and began to sink in the concrete, or "tar road," as the teamsters call it. The boy hammered the brute and yelled for assistance. Several bystanders attempted to go to his aid, but narrowly missed being mired in the sticky substance.

Finally, by passing boards over the surface toward the mule, the boy was enabled to escape to the sidewalk, though the plands shortly afterward disappeared. The mule by this time was sunk half-way to his knees, and it was evident that, unless shortly rescused, would have to remain mired until the street cooled after sundown and then be blasted out with dynamite or something. The greatest excitement prevailed, and the side streets were packed by a dense mob, it being rumored that a guest at the hotel had dropped dead with heart disease on being told the amount of his bill. The president of the "Prevention" society arrived, and with immense labor a movable derrick was brought up from the water front.

A block and tackle were lowered and secured by a tight rope around the animal's body. Some twenty men manned the crank, and with great difficulty the mule was lifted about ten feet into the air, the concrete still adhering to its feet in four strips, presenting the unique appearance of a mule with legs fifteen feet long. Just then the tackle broke under the strain and the animal was sucked back into the pavement with a "sock" that might have been hear a distance.

Fresh ropes were procured, and when the poor animal once more was lifted until its backbone seemed about to crack, a man with a saw slid down the rope, and, lying face downward on the creature's back, proceeded to saw off the tar elongations. This was finally accomplished and the mule swung over upon the stone sidewalk. Upon examination, however, it was found that in the excitement of the moment the man who was very short in the reach, had sawed off the animal's leg just below the fetlacks; so the poor beast had to be shot.

A Fishy Fish Story.

Dorsey French, the 260-pound guardian of the peace on Light street wharf, Baltimore, is responsible for the following fish story: On Saturday night, when the steamer Avalon was making her usual trip down the bay on her way to the Plankitank river, the vessel came across a school of taylors, who, when disturbed, began jumping about in a lively manner. As the steamer passed through the school one of the taylors, in leaping about, happened to strike the deadlight in the forepeak and went clean through, landing on the stomach of one of the crew, a colored man, who was quietly reposing in his bunk and dreaming or a feast on watermelons. The fishy intruder aroused the sleeper, who, half awake, felt for the cause. No sooner did his hand come in contact with the scaly visitor—an immense one, by the way—than he raised his voice away above a whisper, at the same time skipping out of his berth with lightning-like rapidity. When he regained his speech he informed his mates, who had hastened to his rescue, that there was a whale near the ship, and that his tail came through the deadlight. An investigation revealed the presence of the taylor, but it was a long time before the affrighted colored man regained his composure.

More Hot Weather.

Weather Prophet DeVoe of New Jersey is out with a new prophecy; the first in some time, in which he says the month will be noted for its sudden changes and heavy thunder showers. There will be two cyclones during the remainder of the month. But people in this vicinity need not feel uneasy in regard to the cyclones, for although most people have an idea that cyclones are liable to drop down on the people in any section of the United States at any season of the year, yet facts show that they occur with as much regularity as the moon moves in its orbit. They make their appearance in the far northwest early in the spring never strike the Middle Atlantic states till August. They always occur between two well-defined belts of storms. This year they reached the middle states three weeks earlier than last year, and show that frost will occur three weeks earlier than last season. The extreme hot weather that is approaching is to hurry on vegetation and ripen the corn in advance of the frost.

About Convict Labor.

It is hardly becoming in the national government to employ convict laborwhen there are so many honest laborers who would be glad of work, yet that is what has been done on a Federal building in Illinois. The contractor who bid the lowest got the job for furnishing the stone, and he was able to underbid other contractors because he controls convict labor. Secretary Manning says that it is only a $2,500 job, but the principle remains the same, and Democretic state and national conventions have always been very emphatic in denouncing convict labor. Like other professions, they appear only to have been intended to catch votes, but honest workingmen will make a note of this.

A. H. Thompson, Esq., Milford Station, Pa., says in the years 1883 and 1884 he used Powell's Prepared Chemicals for wheat, and realized an increase of five bushels per acre over land where he used no fertilizer, and for oats and buckwheat the result was very good. Address Brown Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully, HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

What the Brain Does.

It is a well-known fact that people whose limbs have been amputated tell you that they can feel their fingers and toes for a long time afterward—for years sometimes—and will even describe pains and definite sensations affecting certain joints of individual digits. This is readily understood when we remember that the brain is the only part that feels, all sensations and impulses being conveyed to it from different parts by nerve fibres. Feelings of pain, heat, cold, touch, and the functions of the special senses are telegraphed to it; and when the connecting nerve is divided it may be some time before it learns to localize truly the seat of the sensation it appreciates. When we knock our "funny bones" we experience a thrill in the little finger and inner border of the hand; the fact being that we have stimulated the bundle of telegraph wires—known as the ulmer nerve—which transmits sensations from that finger and part of the next, in the middle of its course, as it winds round the joint of the elbow.

Both Hands Blown Off.

While salutes were being fired at Danbury on Saturday of last week, Richard Banister undertook to wad a cannon with paper, when a premature explosion occurred and Bannister, who had hold of the ram rod received the full force of the discharge on his hands. The thumb and one finger on his left hand were blown off, while the rest of his hand and his right one were horribly mangled. Considerable powder was blown into his face and eyes, but not enough to destroy his eyesight. When picked up about four feet away from the gun he was conscious but presented a horrible and sickening sight. Both hands had to be amputated near the wrists.
